Democrats Wage War on Sales Tax; GOP Love Feast Omen of Strength

Goldwater Draws 2,485 at Rally

Post-Crescent News Service

MILWAUKEE — The Republicans of Wisconsin held a huge love feast here Saturday night as an omen of their unified and powerfully financed drive against the Democrats in the 1962 elections.

With Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona as the headline oratorical attraction, the state Republican organization attracted the satisfying total of 2,485 diners to a $100-a-plate dinner to fuel their election campaign. At least 1,000 other persons occupied the gallery seats off the main floor, paying five dollars each for admission. The result will be a contribution of about $200,000 to the treasury of the campaign organization headed by Claude J. Jasper.

Eloquent Irony
The Republicans obviously were trying to exceed the performance by the Democratic state organization last month at a $100-a-plate dinner attended by President John F. Kennedy which yielded a net profit of about $180,000 for the opposition party bank account.

Goldwater's eloquent irony delighted the highly partisan crowd, and politicians noted the apparent reconciliation of Sen. Alexander Wiley, who six years ago was refused Republican organization endorsement, with the conservative admirers of Goldwater and the conservatives who finance Republican Wisconsin campaigns. In contrast to his painful earlier relations with the Republican state organization, Wiley at the rally here was figuratively bussed on both cheeks and praised as a great American and a valuable party leader.

Wiley obviously enjoyed the experience and slyly referred to his repudiation in 1956 when he said, "The Republican group endorsed me this year."

'People Will Decide'
The 78-year-old senator, who is running for a fifth 6-year term, was introduced in glowing words by Phillip Kuehn, the Republican convention endorsed candidate for the governorship.

But Wiley did not reply in kind. He remarked briefly, that "the people will decide," who will be

Family Weekly to Combine Issues

The publishers of Family Weekly, the national magazine usually issued every Sunday, announced that they will publish on a bi-weekly schedule during the summer.

Hence, the July 1 and July 8 issues of Family Weekly will be combined in a single issue for Sunday, July 8, and Family Weekly will appear every other week thereafter during the months of July, August and September.

We call our readers' attention to the announcement in today's paper regarding the introduction of a brand new, locally-edited magazine, "View," to be published with the Sunday Post-Crescent every week starting July 1.

Nikita Seeks More Aid From East Europe

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP)—Premier Nikita Khrushchev may be putting pressure on East Europeans to tighten their belts and help the Soviets get more to eat and be better clothed.

There was speculation to this effect Saturday among Western diplomats here, as a consequence of Khrushchev's series of visits to the East European satellites.

Khrushchev is at present in Romania. Last month he was in Bulgaria. He is scheduled to visit Czechoslovakia and Hungary later this year. Officially his visits have been described as friendship trips.

Others Better Off
As things are now, Czechoslovaks, Hungarians, Romanians, Poles and Bulgarians enjoy a higher standard of living than the average Soviet citizen.

While Khrushchev has had to raise prices of meat and dairy products and there are food queues in Moscow, food supplies are comparatively better in Hungary and Romania. While Soviet clothing is shoddy, monotonous and expensive, Czechs and Poles are dressing in Western style and are as well shod as the average Frenchman or German.

There have been no official disclosures of the nature of Khrushchev's talks here.

Diplomats here said it may be that Khrushchev expects the East European satellites to spread around the wealth.

Ribicoff Asks Support in Bid For Senate Post

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Well-known Secretary Abraham A. Ribicoff, in a direct appeal to the delegates to next month's Democratic state convention, said Saturday he wants their support for the party's nomination to the U.S. Senate.

The former Connecticut governor said in a letter to the delegates: "I would like to be the Democratic candidate for the United States Senate and I ask for your support."

Ribicoff has frequently told local Democratic groups that he would be happy or honored to be the party's Senate nominee, but has declined to make a categorical statement of candidacy.

"There is nothing I would consider a greater privilege than to represent the people of Connecticut in the Senate of the United States," Ribicoff said in his letter.

Production Workers Vote to Strike at Gisholt Machine Co.

MADISON (AP)—The 620 production workers at Gisholt Machine Co., represented by steelworkers Local 1404, AFL-CIO, authorized union officers Saturday to call a strike against the company if further negotiations do not produce agreement.

The strike vote was approved by a nine to one margin of the membership and the contract between the local and Gisholt expires June 30. The union is asking a 15 cent an hour wage increase, pension plan improvement and expansion of hospital benefits, according to Robert Keyser, vice-president of Local 1404.

The complaint, which also named Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, was filed by Nino Muscatelli, a 37-year-old Italian lawyer, in the United States.

An inquiring magistrate, acting as a one-man jury, accepted the complaint and set trial for Dec. 4 in civil court here.

Military Units To be Released

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Release dates were confirmed Saturday for 14 units of the 14th Army Corps that were called to active duty last October. Four Wisconsin units are included.

First unit home in this region will be the 410th Signal Co., Stevens Point, Wis., which will arrive home Aug. 1 and be released from active duty two days later.

All forms of transportation will be used for the homeward trip, including extensive use of truck convoys. All of the called-up units will be released by Aug. 31.

Hometown arrival dates for other units include:

Aug. 4: Company D, 324th Army Security Agency, Milwaukee; 381st Military Intelligence Platoon, Madison, Wis.

Aug. 12: 322nd Chemical Co., Baraboo, Wis.

Europeans Try to Quit Algiers as Deadline Nears

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP)—Thousands of Europeans clamored Saturday to get out of Algeria ahead of independence as the Secret Army Organization in the west pressed its scorched earth campaign, vowing to fight to the end.

The secret army set a gasoline storage tank afire in Oran, the western center of resistance to Algerian independence, shortly after a pirate broadcast said the terror campaign would continue.

The secret army's western Algerian command said talks with Moslem nationalists had failed. These talks were designed to bring concessions for European settlers ahead of the July 1 referendum on independence, certain of approval by the big Moslem majority.

Thousands of Europeans saw their hopes of leaving for France ahead of the referendum go glimmering when the airlines in Algiers stopped booking seats until after July 1. The airlines said all flights were booked solid to that date.

Rusk, Italian Leaders Agree

ROME (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk and leaders of Italy's leftist-leaning government announced Saturday night they were in full agreement on a wide range of cold war problems in Europe.

This unity of views was announced after Rusk held a day of talks with President Antonio Segni, Premier Amintore Fanfani and Foreign Minister Attilio Piccioni.

A communique said they discussed "Soviet-American conversations on German problems; the process of European political unity; and the problems of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, an essential factor in maintaining peace and freedom in the world."

SHEBOYGAN — Wisconsin Democrats have decided their best ammunition for the fall election fight is to keep hammering away against the selective sales tax.

During their two-day convention here they resoundingly shouted disapproval of the tax and made a call for its repeal the keystone of their 1962 election platform.

It was a victory for Atty. Gen. John Reynolds, the party's leading candidate for governor, but it didn't come easy.

Oppose Repealer
Led by James Doyle, a Madison attorney and one-time state chairman, a substantial bloc of state convention delegates put themselves on record in a standing vote as opposed to the repealer.

But the convention had been warned Friday night by Gov. Gaylord Nelson that his political career — he's running for U. S. Senator — was being jeopardized by the anti-sales tax approach.

The governor hinted, too, that the same might hold true for others who insist on adopting the old Democratic slogan.

Instead, Nelson recommended the party campaign "with pride" on the 3½ year record compiled under his administration.

Radio Peiping Sees Attempt At Invasion

Says Nationalists Plan Attack With American Support

TOKYO (AP)—Red China charged Saturday the Chinese Nationalists are preparing to invade the mainland "with the support and encouragement of U.S. imperialism."

Without mentioning Washington reports of a big Red Chinese military buildup on the coast opposite the Nationalist island of Formosa and possibly aimed at Quemoy and Matsu, radio Peiping declared:

"Military men and civilians in the provinces along the southeast coast and in their rear areas especially must heighten their vigilance and be fully prepared in every way to smash an invasion of the Chiang Kai-shek gang at any time."

Expect Invasion Attempt

The broadcast, said a correspondent of the official New China News Agency, "has learned from authoritative sources that the Chiang Kai-shek Gang entrenched in Taiwan (Formosa) is preparing, with the support and encouragement of U.S. imperialism for a large-scale military adventure, an invasion of the coastal areas of the mainland."

The correspondent quoted Mao Tse-tung, leader of Red China, as saying the Chinese Nationalists, for lack of soldiers, "wish to replenish their troops by rounding up able-bodied men in the mainland coastal areas," and added:

"In view of this, the people through the country must work hard in production, support the front, wipe out enemy agents and consolidate the rear."

Gang of Young Vandals Smashed At Manitowoc

MANITOWOC (AP)—Police Inspector Elmer Scherer said Saturday his department has broken up a teen-age gang that graded its members on a point basis for committing acts of vandalism.

Scherer, who will become chief of police July 1, said the group had some 200 members of high school age, called itself "The Fabulous Yorgulsons," and outfitted members with sweatshirts and T-shirts.

The club was discovered, Scherer said, in an investigation of frequent acts of vandalism which included throwing eggs at moving automobiles and into the windows of parked cars, and draping trees with bathroom tissue.

Members said they were given points for each act of vandalism and the club leadership went to the individual who earned the most points and conceived the most original acts of mischief.

The idea of the club, police were told, came from high school students who visited Texas this year as part of a student exchange program.

Scherer said police have contacted the parents of the young people involved and have obtained promises of disciplinary action calculated to break up the gang.

Court Orders Engineers to Stop Pan American Walkout But Eastern Not Affected

NEW YORK (AP)—Flight engineers struck two airlines Saturday, then called off one strike daily strike loss at $400,000, under a federal court order minutes before President Kennedy appealed to them in the interest of the public to halt the walkout. There was no immediate reply from the engineers to Kennedy's latest appeal. They had ignored his earlier plea, and the plea of the head of the AFL-CIO, in striking against Pan American World Airways and Eastern Air Lines.

Just two hours after the walkout at 1 p.m. (EST), a federal court judge granted Pan Am's request for a temporary restraining order to halt the strike, remove pickets and submit issues to federal mediation. It took three hours to actually get the engineers back to work on Pan Am flights throughout the world.

Eastern Not Affected

The order, effective until a hearing Tuesday, did not apply to Eastern.

Union headquarters in Washington announced immediate compliance.

A spokesman for Eastern said the line had not decided whether to seek an injunction because "our situation is somewhat different from Pan American." He did not elaborate.

U.S. Dist. Judge George Rosling in Brooklyn based the order on the National Railway Labor Act, which covers public transportation.

Pan Am, the nation's largest overseas air carrier with four million passengers a year, argued that the strike would cost it $1 million a day.

Eastern, the second-largest domestic carrier with nine million passengers a year, placed its flight engineers struck at 1 p.m. EST and picket lines formed almost immediately at many of the nation's largest commercial air terminals.

Engineers left two Eastern planes scheduled to depart from New York and Washington at the hour of the strike and the line canceled all operations.

Malcolm A. MacIntyre, Eastern president, ordered ticket offices closed and approximately 18,000 employees released.

Pan Am, which said it would continue flights, beat the strike deadline on a New York-to-Puerto Rico flight by closing the plane's doors five minutes early. The jet liner, with 187 passengers and a full crew aboard, then taxied away from the terminal, but did not take off for 16 minutes.

Pan Am and Eastern chapters of the Flight Engineers International Association, AFL-CIO, rejected the proposed formula for settling a similar dispute with Trans World Airlines as "completely unacceptable."

Ronald Brown, national president of the flight engineers, turned down the appeal, saying Meany "has once more publicly demonstrated that he will do nothing to protect the rights of small unions."

The heart of the two-year-old dispute has been a method for reducing the four-man cockpit crews of jet liners—now three pilots and an engineer — to three men—two pilots and the third seat in dispute.

GOP Flagellates Another Professor

Conservatives Say New Policy Paper Has 'Design for Defeat'

BY PETER LISAGOR
Chicago Daily News Service

WASHINGTON — Republican orators smelled the blood of a Kennedy braintruster this week and moved in with a joyous whoop to enjoy the ancient sport of flagellating college professors.

The quarry, in this instance, is Walt Whitman Rostow, an easy-going but tough-minded citizen whose only known sins are that he is a former professor and reads and writes books.

The 45-year-old escapee from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology also has an occasional habit of turning his mind beyond the cliches of the cold war. This sort of thing makes a great many politicians uneasy.

Zeroed In

Rostow found himself zeroed in when a newspaper account described a foreign policy planning working paper as roughly the equivalent of a plot against the republic and attributed it largely to him.

As the State Department counselor and chairman of its policy planning council, Rostow did, in fact, preside over the preparation of the paper, but it was far from a solo performance.

Dozens of hot bureaucratic hands got in their licks and as anybody in town knows, that process is a guarantee that the end product will be anything but bold, imaginative or sweeping.

Design for Defeat

But Senators Everett Dirksen (Ill.) and Barry Goldwater (Ariz.) leaped to the scene and the GOP National Committee publication "Battle Line" jumped to the conclusion that the paper "comes down to an accommodation with tyranny — a design for eventual defeat."

Since the paper is a highly classified document, no one is sure what its contents are, beyond the newspaper allegations that it sees Russia as "mellowing" and purports to find advantages in this fact.

Rostow has been summoned to appear at a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee next week to talk about the affair.

It is a rich piece of irony that of the New Frontier academics, Rostow was probably closest to the Eisenhower administration, serving as a consultant on national security matters.

Helped Eisenhower

He was chairman of the so-called Quantico Panel, which developed the "open skies" proposal. Eisenhower presented to the Russians at the Geneva Summit Conference in 1955.

He also took an important hand in preparing the speech Eisenhower made at the United Nations in 1958 in the wake of landings of U. S. troops in Lebanon.

Further, in New Frontier circles, Rostow has been a kind of theoretician of counterguerrilla warfare, many of whose ideas have now been put into practice in South Viet Nam.

Militant Administrator

He has, in fact, been described as so militant about what the Kennedy Administration should do to deal with the communist incursions in southeast Asia that some veteran military officers have shuddered at his boldness.

He has advocated equally strong actions if the Chinese Communists should attempt to take Quemoy and Matsu, the two offshore islands that swam back into the news this week with reports that Peiping is conducting a sudden and sizable military buildup on the mainland facing the islands.

As a final note, Rostow achieved international fame a few years ago with a book called "The Stages of Economic Growth," which has been called a "non-communist manifesto" and which brought down upon him the enmity of the Communists because it rejected Marx's theory that the class struggle was history's moving force.

All of this suggests that the GOP may have picked on the wrong professor this time.

Democrats Split on Redistricting

Post-Crescent News Service

SHEBOYGAN—The State Democratic convention Saturday backed a resolution for strict population reapportionment by a divided vote and adopted a resolution praising Gov. Gaylord Nelson for blocking Republican efforts for a general sales tax.

The reapportionment resolution split the convention along geographical lines with Milwaukee County delegates speaking for it and delegates from sparsely populated northern and western Wisconsin in opposition. The main argument was over words in the resolution which said legislators "be they Republican or Democratic" should be condemned for opposing reapportionment.

The resolution praised Reynolds for "forcing the legislature to do its constitutional duty" and Nelson for calling the special legislature session.

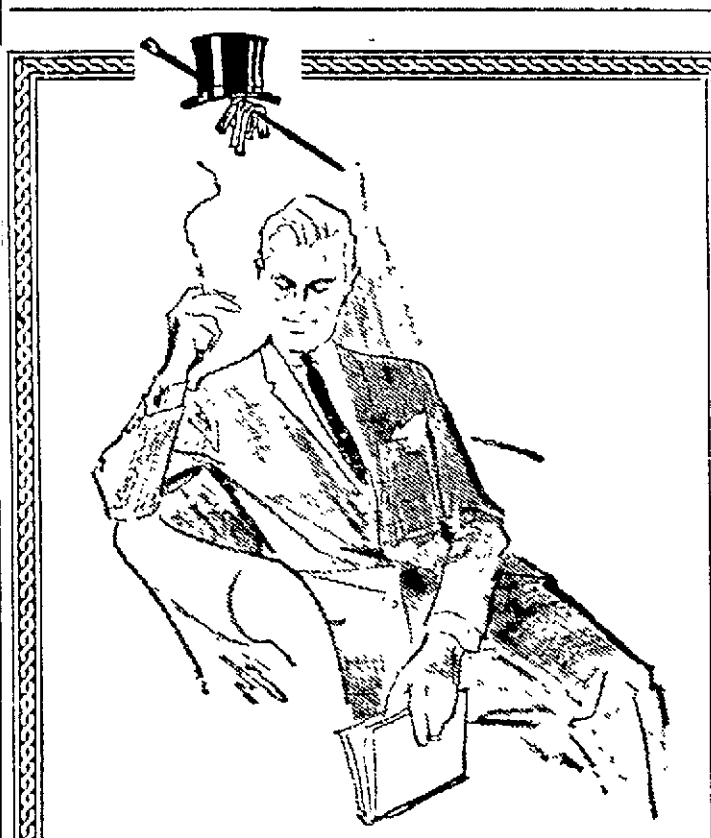

The resolution commending Nelson on taxation charged the Republican scheme for a general sales tax "was thwarted only by the brilliant and courageous opposition of the governor. Nelson forced them into acceptance of a compromise which blocked the imposition of a sales tax on food, clothing, household utilities, and many other necessities of daily life."

Reynolds was lauded for changing the status of attorney general from a minor post to powerful instrument of service including "making democracy meaningful in Wisconsin by courageously bringing about constitutional reapportionment against the massed power of the opposition-controlled legislature."

Nelson was praised for accomplishments including the fifty-million-dollar conservation lands program, and for averting "financial chaos for Wisconsin and providing the first direct relief for real and personal property taxes in state history."

"Our Concern Is Men's Fashions"

Crisis Atmosphere Rises Once Again In Formosa Strait

U. S. Supplies Nationalists, but It Doesn't Control War Policies

BY EDWIN A. LAHEY
Chicago Daily News Service

WASHINGTON — The crisis atmosphere, with the relentless regularity of crab grass in the spring, has arisen again in the Formosa Strait.

This is the 90-mile-wide strip of water that separates Red China from Chiang Kai-Shek's island fortress of Taiwan, whose military furnishings come by courtesy of the United States.

The chilling questions that come up this periodic China crisis are: Can Chiang, in the evening of his life, do a Samson act, and pull down the temple?

Can or would the Generalissimo heat up the job enough to drag the United States into a general war with the communist world? "Not one chance in a hundred," said one well informed official.

This observation is of some comfort, except for the fact that a race track about once or twice a season pays off on a hundred to one shot horse.

"Chiang certainly wouldn't provoke a war if he remembers who butters his bread," said another official.

This also sounds comforting, until one recalls the complaints of parents whose children forget who butters their bread.

Most Imported Client

Since Chiang evacuated the mainland of China before the Communist sweep 14 years ago, he has been the most important client of U. S. foreign aid, both economic and military.

And the United States is committed by treaty to come to the defense of Chiang if the island of Taiwan is attacked, or if an attack on the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu should appear to be part of a general attack.

But what if Chiang attempts to "liberate" the mainland of China? This issue is so sticky that the Administration has refrained from much public discussion of the crisis.

Fear Possibility

But President Kennedy made it clear, long before he was elected, that he feared the possibility of the tail wagging the dog in the Far East.

"Control over the issue of war or peace should always remain in our own hands," Kennedy said in 1959, when he was a senator.

"There is a real possibility that the tail in this case will wag the dog — that in the event of Chiang's attack upon the mainland and a Communist retaliation upon Formosa, we will be dragged into a war at a time and place not of our own choosing, in an argument over two islands not essential to our security, and by an action of Chiang Kai-Shek not initiated with our consent."

"We want the question of peace or war for America to be decided by the Congress as the Constitution provides — not by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek."

The aging nationalist leader has given a commitment to the United States that he will not undertake any military move without consulting this country.

It would be difficult for Chiang to sustain any action without support from the United States. The presence of the Seventh Fleet in the Formosa Strait makes it possible for the Taiwan government to keep the offshore islands supplied.

Danger from Red China

And without the massive infusions of U. S. military and economic aid to the Taiwan government, Chiang's operation would go broke over a weekend.

Even if Chiang observes his commitments of self-restraint, there still remains the danger of militant action by Red China that would bring us into a war with the Communists.

The last time Red Chinese jet planes made warlike passes, they discovered that the Nationalists had a very effective U. S. weapon in the Sidewinder missile, a nasty little rocket that smells out the exhaust pipe of a jet plane and destroys it.

The Reds withdrew their planes after this experience with the Sidewinder. Whether they are ready to cope with this weapon today remains to be seen in the weeks ahead.

Awards Given by Historical Group

GREEN BAY (AP)—The State Historical Society of Wisconsin presented awards of merit Friday night to a newspaper, an author and a county board.

The winners, chosen for their contribution to the study and promotion of history in 1961, are the La Crosse Tribune, William M. Lamers of Milwaukee, author of the book, "The Edge of Glory," and the Vernon County Board of supervisors.

The Vernon County Board was cited for saving the county historical society from being dissolved. Board members also aided in purchasing a building for the society and for helping devise plans for exhibits and museum activities.

Democrats Wage War On Any Sales Tax Plan

words, saying Democrats should campaign for good programs and leave the subject of taxation to Republicans.

State Tax Commissioner John Gronouski, a Nelson appointee, had the strongest words in support of the selective sales tax repealer. Gronouski helped draft the compromise tax revision measure that included the selective sales levy but he's had nothing good to say about it since it became law Feb. 1.

"It is utter and sheer nonsense to say you can't get more income taxes but you can get sales taxes," Gronouski said. "All of us must understand that tax dollars come from the pockets of people and at least the income tax method of collecting lets them know what government costs."

Property Tax Relief

The tax plank eventually adopted pledges the party to "continue its support of property tax relief for home owners, small businessmen and farmers." Its only specific reference to new taxation is a clause asking adoption of a franchise tax on banks and other financial institutions.

The immediate and significant result of the Democratic convention is that the Wisconsin election campaign this fall will provide the voters for the first time with clear alternatives on the central issue of state politics.

Most of the Republican candidates including Philip Kuehn and Wilbur Renk, running for the Republican gubernatorial nomination are committed to the idea of sales taxation with some exemptions as a means of financing expanding state and local governmental services and adjusting the property tax load.

Big Climax

While the sales tax declaration of the Democratic convention was expected, it was the dramatic highlight of an otherwise drab to Nelson, the governor chose not to make a fight on the question for several reasons. It was fairly clear that he would have suffered a humiliating defeat and he felt also that as a candidate for senator he did not have a right to dictate to Reynolds his views on purely state government issues.

Need Money

Doyle recalled that Democrats generally stand for expanded and more costly public services and that they won't be able to pay for what they are promising unless they concede the need for new methods of raising money.

He begged for "unchaining" the party from its historic tax position and claimed that the anti sales tax pledge has been deprived of validity as well as political appeal "by the march of events."

But Doyle argued uselessly. His plan for a combination sales tax and income tax financed plank was roared down in a voice vote. Then his request to delete from the committee-drafted platform a promise to repeal the existing selective sales tax lost on a standing vote by a margin of about 3-1.

Double Rates

Doyle said the existing Wisconsin income tax rates would be doubled at the least under the Democratic plank and the convention managers brought state tax commissioner John Gronouski to the floor for a reply.

"Nonsense," scoffed the tax commissioner as he said all tax payments come from "the pockets of the people."

If a sales tax can be collected, an income tax can be collected too, he said.

Study Commission

Arthur DeBardeleben of Park Falls, a member of the University of Wisconsin board of regents area of education calls for in which is struggling with enormous increased expenditure pressures for education, joined Doyle in the argument that Democrats won't be able to pay for their liberal governmental promises unless they back some form of sales taxation.

But his plea fell on deaf ears. Delegates clamored for the floor complaining that major diplomacy is now being handled "at the bottom of Bobby Kennedy's pool" and "if you can't do the twist you can't get into the White House."

But Goldwater also pledged the backing of congressional Republicans for what he called the anti-guerrilla warfare.

"Counter-guerrilla operations are neither new nor sensational both sides intend to make House of Representatives aware of this," said Lt. Gen. J. C. Munn, assistant commandant of the corps.

Munn declared that "probably started it off with the assertion that, instead of saving the taxpayers $1 billion as the Democrats claim, the bill would have cost $1 billion a year more."

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., disputed this. He said he was sure the bill was an "economizer" like Williams would oppose the bill. Morse teed off on former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who told a Republican rally here Friday night that the administration's bill was "based on the ruthless concept of ruling or ruining American agriculture."

"I'm ready to take on the great farmer from Gettysburg," Morse said. "We'll make it a partisan issue if that is what the Republicans want."

Williams and Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., clashed over the probable effectiveness of the administration's attempt in the defeated bill to link acreage reduction and marketing quotas to price supports for wheat, corn and feed grains.

Balance Important

Doyle had asked for a balanced combination of income and sales taxes, with liberal exemptions and deductions for both which will produce needed funds without ever more excessive reliance upon already overburdened property taxpayers.

Gov. Nelson has declared that Reynolds as a candidate for the governorship has the right to stand against sales taxation if he chooses but that a candidate also owes a duty to explain clearly what his alternative proposals will cost the taxpayers.

Thus far Reynolds has not responded to the Nelson challenge.

Platform Positions

In other platform positions, the Democrats:

Committed recent actions by both state and federal courts to compel reapportionment "when legislators fail to perform their constitutional duties."

Asked further action for substantial increases in faculty salaries at state operated universities and colleges. Another stand in the area of education calls for income tax deductions for persons paying tuition to non-public elementary and secondary schools.

The Republican platform seeks such relief for both public and private school enrollees.

New Rumble in Africa

There hasn't been much noise from the Congo in recent weeks but another African chaotic situation may be in the making. The twin countries of Urundi and Ruandi are due for independence on July 1.

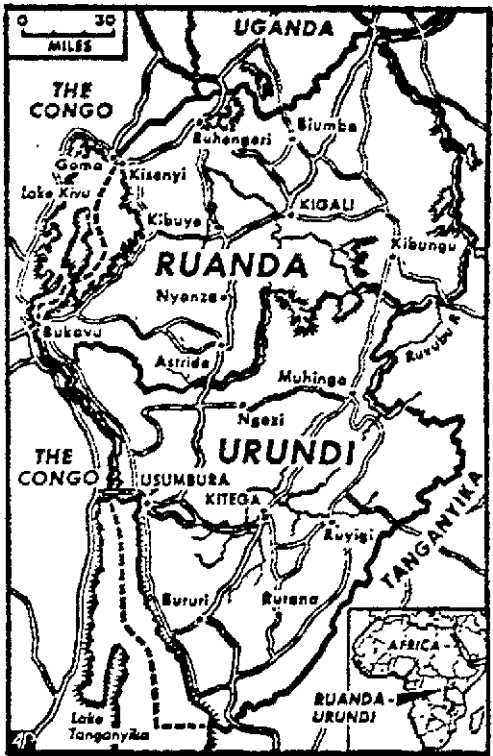

Ruandi-Urundi also have been under Belgian colonial control but this time the Belgians don't plan to get blamed for all the trouble. They are willing to keep troops and technicians in the area to help toward self-government but only upon acceptance by the native leaders and a specific mandate from the United Nations. So far there is no sign of either.

But in the two nations, there still are no solid plans for administration although the independence dateline is less than two weeks away. The natives not only are largely ignorant of the ways of government, they are violently torn by ancient tribal hatreds which are doing more than simmer beneath the surface.

The proposed kingdom of Urundi is the calmer of the two countries. Its king, Mwami Mwambutsa IV, is touring the little land trying to get acquainted with his political rivals. But he has made it clear that he doesn't want Belgian troops to remain to give him any help. The result has been an exodus of Europeans, the closing of the one newspaper and the turning of the capital city into almost a ghost town.

Ruandi already is on the verge of civil war. The Wahuti tribe is in control but it managed to get to the top by driving out thousands of the Watusi who are anxious to run the country once more. To that end they are camped on the borders and conduct sporadic raids into Ruandi intent on murder. There are no specific plans by the Wahuti for the election of a government to run what they believe will be a republic.

The countries are greatly underdeveloped and overcrowded. Some five million people live on the 21,000 square miles and the average family income per year is only $36. Since the Europeans began leaving in anticipation of independence and subsequent chaos, the one cash crop, coffee, has dropped off through lack of good supervision from 32,000 tons to less than 20,000. Belgium has pumped about $14 million a year into the two areas but certainly cannot be expected to continue if it has no way of assuring some intelligent use of the subsidy.

The United Nations reportedly has unofficially made it clear that it has no troops to send and no money either. In the absence of trained technicians, money and the means of keeping law and order, or even the understanding of law and order, things look pretty dim for Urundi and Ruandi.

But next month each country probably will send representatives to the United Nations and apply for admission with the same voting rights as organized lands. Maybe this time it would be better to let the tribes fight it out among themselves without any sort of outside interference. But we suspect that the Soviet Union will be all set to offer its good offices in case of trouble.

What's in a Name?

The British Minister of Education, Sir David Eccles, is in a tizzy. Unless some means are found for purifying the language, he says that English—as it is spoken by the peers in England, that is—will degenerate into a whole passle of dialects. The Cockneys already have trouble understanding Brooklynes, it appears. Pretty soon Canadians will be baffled by Australians, the Irish and Scots will need interpreters and our Georgians will be even more isolated linguistically than they are now.

Sir David points to Latin as a language which died when the common people so distorted it that it became Italian, French and Spanish—and the Italians, French and Spanish do not understand each other. It may be that Sir David recently has seen "My Fair Lady," or far more likely read Shaw's "Pygmalion," and became upset. But we think his concern is unwarranted—and impossible to implement in any case.

The amount of travel between nations of the world today indicates that more people are understanding each other's tongues rather than losing touch. The Scot may have his own lingo in Edinburgh, but he probably understands pretty well what even a man from Mississippi is saying. More than that, the man from New York is beginning to get a smattering of phrases from other languages besides that which is known as English. At least he knows what "nyet!" means.

The purity of English, as Sir David likes to think of it, certainly has its own beauty and importance of meaning. But there is a great deal to be said—and in a number of colorful ways—for the regional inflections, the pungent phrases and even the vulgar slang of various countries and parts of countries.

There is no evidence in history to indicate that speaking different languages increases conflicts between people. On the contrary, some of the most bitter and vicious feuds in all times—and the most petty and intense hates—have occurred within families who know all too well how to understand each other's words and meanings.

Treating Dope Addicts

New York has become the first state in the union to legally recognize that narcotics addiction is an illness rather than a crime. Last March, Gov. Rockefeller signed a bill passed by the legislature authorizing hospitalization rather than imprisonment for addicts convicted of minor crimes.

This is a big step, particularly in a nation with a Federal Bureau of Narcotics which rigidly refuses to consider anything except a tightening of penalties in dealing with addiction. But the problem does not end with getting addicts into hospitals for treatment. The percentage of backsliding is so high that a great deal more research and followup of cases is going to have to be done for any hope of lasting success.

Actually, despite all the publicity about narcotics in recent years, the rate of addiction in the United States has gone down tremendously. When the Harrison Narcotics Act, regulating the manufacture, importation and use of drugs, was passed in 1914, estimates put the rate of addiction as high as one American in every 400. Today the estimate is only one in 3,500. The rate of alcoholism also has gone down from those earlier days.

Harry Anslinger, director of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, insists that heavier penalties and tighter laws have been the major force contributing to this drop. He also can point to the lower rate of addiction, known or estimated, in the states with the heaviest penalties. But Mr. Anslinger has never satisfactorily answered the queries about the need to commit crimes in order to raise money for the drugs that plague the "hooked" people. Nor is there any answer at the bureau about exactly why addiction should be considered a crime in the legal sense.

The United States Public Health Service Hospital in Lexington, Ky., has treated some 35,000 addicts in its 27 years of existence. More than half have come back for at least one more session; a seventh have come back five or more times; one patient has been re-admitted 35 times.

Of the addicts in the New York area, it is estimated that 90 per cent of those who take treatment return to narcotics often within a few weeks of release. Clearly there is a problem here that cannot be dealt with merely through tougher laws unless the bureau thinks all addicts should be shot immediately and thereby wipe out the problem of recurrence.

Medical evidence indicates that the typical addict is not the fiction dope fiend of TV hiding in bushes to leap upon unsuspecting children or being closeted in a laboratory plotting diabolical schemes. He is more likely to be an emotionally disturbed individual who finds escape from the fears of living in drugs and who has a childish reliance upon self-indulgence. The preventing of addicts, many of whom are enticed into the dreadful habit through "pushers" who in turn are earning money for their own high priced drugs, is a psychological matter which should be of concern to everyone.

At this point in our dealing with addicts, stiff laws against "pushers" are essential. But there would be no need for the purveyors of the stuff if the serious addicts had an available supply while they were undergoing the physical and psychological treatment needed to get them permanently away from reliance upon narcotics.

There is a trend today toward regarding addiction as an illness in more states than New York. But a great deal more must be learned about treatment for withdrawal and the followup of former patients before the addiction rates are likely to go down much more.

'What's It This Time—Land, Sea or Air?'

Son of Irish Immigrant

Teddy Kennedy's Nomination Reminds One of Horatio Alger

BY MORRIE RYSKIND

Horatio Alger Jr. is out of fashion nowadays, but his books were the delight of my youth and they slowly—but surely: Mr. Alger was a devotee of the Happy Ending and could never have written the Play of the Week for TV—climbed from the lowest rung of the ladder into the sunlight of success.

It may have been because I could identify myself so completely with his newboys. For not only did my father have a newsstand, but it was my chore, after school, to deliver the afternoon papers to the homes of his customers. It must be in the blood, for, when my son was about 9, he decided to supplement his meager allowance by taking on a newspaper route Sunday mornings.

Used Limousine

And, like the postman and the two generations before him, neither rain nor snow nor hail could stop him. Even when he sprained an ankle one Saturday afternoon and could not walk without pain, he insisted on going through with his assignment. The next morning, driven by the chauffeur, he gallantly threw the papers on the porches of Beverly Hills from a limousine instead of a bike.

But I've read enough now of the tracts of the New Deal historians to realize that Mr. Alger was simply a paid lackey of the exploiting classes and that his sugar-coated fairy tales were written to justify the vicious system of child labor used by the capitalist oligarchy to protect its profits; and that, actually, the ragged newboys and bootblacks only got more ragged as they grew older and eventually starved to death.

He's Living Testimony

And I agree with the New Frontier spokesmen who argue we have been frozen into a rigid class structure from which only the warmth of the Welfare State can rescue us. As a matter of fact, I'm living testimony to this contention: I began my career as a cub reporter at $20 a week, and, years later, I'm still a newspaperman—with about the same take-home pay!

But that is my head speaking and not my heart, which, I suspect, will always belong to Horatio Jr. His escapist literature brainwashed me so effectively that no amount of reason and the cold, hard facts of life as presented so dispassionately by the ADA and the Medicare lobby ever really got a fair hearing from me. I remain the incurable romanticist who believes that anybody in this country willing to work diligently can rise, if not from rags to riches, at least to the other side of the tracks.

Dreams Revived

True, the statistics of the professional lobbyists often overwhelm me, and I am shaken when I learn that 60 million school children are being taught at half-time sessions and that 17 million Americans (most of them school teachers, obviously) are slowly starving to death. But just when I'm about ready to endorse the administration's megalomaniac program, including more aid to Tito, along comes something to revive my old dreams again.

And surely the victory of Ted Kennedy at the Democratic state convention in Massachusetts was in the genuine Alger tradition. On the one hand was an inexperienced young man whose forebears were poor Irish immigrants and who had nothing—but nothing—to offer the electorate except a dedicated willingness to serve and a sunny smile. He had never even had a million dollars till he was 21.

Opposed to him was the Bay State's attorney general, a proven vote-getter who had behind him the entrenched power of the speaker of the House of Representatives and his machine.

Teddy Endorsed

And yet, brushing aside the promises of patronage and defying the threats of political extinction, the unbossed delegates assembled at Springfield refused to bow to pressure from Washington and voted as their consciences dictated, endorsing Teddy Kennedy as their candidate for U. S. senator.

Well and bravely done, men of Massachusetts! So there is a

Big Three Lobbyists Informed, Responsible

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON—A woman lobbyist in a moment of impatience during a legislative committee debate recently illustrated one of the important characteristics of state capitol politics.

The topic was extra-territorial land use zoning jurisdiction for cities, proposed as an aid to the growing urban centers of Wisconsin in preparing for the inevitability of their physical expansion.

"Ask the Big Three," snorted the female lobbyist. "You won't go ahead without their consent anyway. Let them work up a bill and then consider it."

She referred to the professional legislative agents of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, the Wisconsin County Boards Association, and the Wisconsin Towns Association.

She was right. Without the consent, tacit or otherwise, of at least two of these organizations, nothing very basic involving the functions or the rights or the responsibilities of local governments is likely to be enacted in this legislature—or any legislature the people of Wisconsin seem inclined to elect at an early time.

WHY

The lady was over-simplifying, to a degree.

She was reflecting one of the great limitations of contemporary political debate and discussion. Over-simplification is the curse of public communication on political affairs. She obviously intended to pay a sour compliment to the political skills of the three professional representatives in the room, as individuals, as separate and skilled political personalities.

Actually they are important not because of their personal qualities, which are admirable and sufficient, but because of their clientele.

The local government interest in Wisconsin is one of the most powerful that is at work in the state capitol legislative process, and it would continue to be potent if the three men who happen to be its most conspicuous agents resigned tomorrow.

All of the mayors and aldermen and city clerks, and the rest, represent an alert, articulate and responsible force that the legislature would ignore at its peril. All of the county board members and their associates represent an even more cohesive and formidable interest—and everybody who sits in a state

Santa Claus, Virginia, and don't let anybody tell you there isn't. Kind hearts are still more than coronets, and right still makes might.

Perhaps there are more things in heaven and earth than were dreamed of in the philosophy of Horatio, but the Horatio that Hamlet referred to was certainly not Horatio Alger Jr. If he had a last name, it was probably McCormack!

(Copyright 1962)

office knows it well. There are those bigger city representatives who can afford to ignore the state-wide associations, but those from Milwaukee, as an example, are even more pliant in the hands of their city and county lobbies than are those from out state in dealing with the associations.

REASONING

Nor is this necessarily unwholesome, whatever horrible image of selfish lobbyists may be conjured up by some of the idealists. Who is more likely to have a better grasp of the essential public will, that amateur politician who happens to be elected to the state assembly for a term or two and is confounded by a thousand separate propositions on his calendar, or the state-wide association representative who has sifted the reactions of a couple of thousands of elected local public officials?

All of this is in addition to the fact that "The Big Three" (and a couple of other local government voices the lady critic didn't mention) are able, attentive and sophisticated men on their own account. All things being equal, they will continue to have their way on those matters that are important to their clients. They are influential also because they have learned to confine themselves strictly to their own concerns. When they occasionally lose a round, as in a tussle with the organized labor lobby, their defeat tells more about the essential drift of state politics than is often realized.

Yellowstone Park Garbage Cans Can't Defeat Caggy Bears

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP)—What Yellowstone National Park needs is not a good 5-cent cigar—but a bear-proof garbage can.

The brown bears which abound in Yellowstone Park may amuse the tourists with their antics, but to park rangers they are litter-bugs and nuisances.

So far, man hasn't been successful in coming up with a garbage can that man can open to deposit garbage—but bears can't open to spread it around.

Park officials are trying several new types of garbage cans this summer to test the ingenuity of the caggy bruins. So far, the bears have won on all counts.

One of the experimental models is designed like a mail box. But it didn't take the smart bears long to figure that one out.

Another model hangs from a T-frame, but Park Superintendent Lemuel A. Garrison says it isn't working too well, either. "The bears knock it around like a punching bag," he said, "and it makes a big racket."

Takes on Billie Sol Estes Next

McClellan Perfect Investigator

BY G. MILTON KELLY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., generalissimo of the Senate's investigation of the Billie Sol Estes case, has clashed with presidents. He has stared big shot mobsters in the eye and called them "scum."

He has sent crooks to prison, won respect as a tough, fair adversary in courts, congressional hearing rooms and in the political wars.

First Big Case

But just about the biggest kick he ever got from victory was when, as a young trial lawyer, he won a suit for damages for the death of a snake.

He tells the story with gusto for it was a case to test a man's talents as lawyer, investigator, strategist and in the art of springing a surprise at the psychological moment.

His meticulous preparation for that long ago case of the deceased snake has been typical of McClellan's approach to any challenge: Prepare yourself well, then meet it head-on.

As chairman of the powerful Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, McClellan has chosen exactly this approach to its forthcoming public hearings on the Estes case. He shrugged off some grumbling from the sidelines over his refusal to dive right into a public airing at the first hints of scandal in dealings between Texas financier Estes and persons high on the Washington scene.

Expert Background

In that snake episode, McClellan was counsel for a partner in a snake show venture. The partner sued an express company for damages, contending that his $550 python had caught pneumonia and died because the express company let the reptile get chilled on a railway station platform.

McClellan produced temperature records from the Weather Bureau, treatises on the care and feeding of pythons, expert testimony from snake experts.

He grins now at recollection of the description he gave the jury of the poor python's pitiful death throes; and how he capped this by producing the snake's hide, dramatically unrolling it on the courtroom floor with a flourish like a man rolling a bowling ball.

McClellan was only 12 when he set out to become an attorney, studying in the law office of his father, Isaac S. McClellan. At 17 young McClellan passed his bar examination with flying colors. The Arkansas Leg-

Communism and Food Shortage Go Together

From the Wichita Eagle

Food shortages are in the news from three places currently. The Soviet Union is short of many items, but particularly of grain, meat and butter; Cuba is barely on subsistence rations; mainland China has millions virtually starving.

No opportunity should be lost to point out to the underdeveloped nations eyeing communism as a system they think might serve them best the one thing these three countries have in common.

The international hammer-and-sickle symbol of communism should be replaced by one showing a food queue ending at a sign reading "All gone."

islature had passed a special law to let him take the test before the legal minimum age limit of 21.

Taught by Father

Isaac McClellan was a stern and able lawyer-teacher who drove home the idea that a lawyer who accepts a client but doesn't prepare adequately for the case is an abomination.

The lesson stuck and has served the son well. Lawyers who have opposed him call the senator a perfectionist. Sometimes they express awe at his memory for facts and details.

At 66, McClellan is in his 20th year and fourth term in the Senate. His colleagues like and respect him, sometimes call him the "old pro" of the congressional sleuthing business.

He's Independent

McClellan's public career has been stormy, and there has been much personal tragedy in his life.

His hard-nosed independence brought him into conflict first with President Franklin D. Roosevelt, then with President Harry S. Truman. He pulled no punches nor did they.

McClellan has an amazing capacity for work and for organizing it so it counts. Work, in fact, has been his antidote for sorrow.

A son, Col. Max McClellan, died in North Africa in World War II. The body was returned to the United States after the war and a second son, John Jr., was injured fatally in an automobile accident en route to the funeral in 1949.

The senator's sole surviving son, James H. McClellan, was killed in an airplane accident in 1958.

West Virginia: Proving Ground of the New Frontier

BY CHARLES R. LEWIS

CHARLESTON, W. Va., (AP) — Just how about West Virginia, the real — or assumed — economic proving ground of the New Frontier?

President Kennedy has made no bones about it — he's both politically and sentimentally indebted to the rugged mountain country west of the Alleghenies.

But have the various federal programs formulated with West Virginia obviously first in mind really amounted to a kind of economic rescue mission?

Is the state really the horrible example of depression and poverty?

West Virginia was just about the biggest stepping stone of John F. Kennedy's climb to the Presidency, and he hasn't forgotten it. Determined to redeem the promises of his primary campaign Kennedy has concentrated his welfare programs on the state. But it's still not clear whether or not this stepping stone will become a stumbling block for the New Frontier.

erty it has been so widely pictured?

There's no clear and definite answer for either of those questions, but on one thing there can be general agreement.

West Virginia, the 35th star in the flag and an up-and-down land of 24,300 square miles and 1.8 million people, is the most giant kind of paradox.

Two Extremes

It's a place where well-paid chemical workers and destitute, jobless ex-coal miners live virtually side by side.

Where gleaming new stretches of interstate highway cross country roads for which there never has been enough money to fill chuck holes.

Where top-notch state parks lie amid breath-taking mountain scenery, but unhealed strip mine scars mar the landscape and many streams run black with coal wastes.

It's been called, in one breath, the Switzerland of America — in others, an "inefficient relic of an ago past" and a North American Bolivia.

"It's a state of touchy pride, as evidenced by its unofficial name — 'West-by-God-Virginia' — to differentiate it from Virginia, from which it split off during the Civil War.

And it's a state in which the light-hearted remark of a visiting sportswriter, describing Morgantown as a "dirty little river town," drew an official protest from the state commerce commissioner.

Cussed, Discussed

Yet a state university professor in the same Morgantown saw West Virginia going out of existence in 10 or 15 years to become "a province of the federal government, testing the appropriate methods for eliminating the

Even Geography Is Insultable

Tax Supported Art Good but Who'll Handle Pressure Groups?

BY ERIC SEVAREID

With graceful assists from the First Lady, the Kennedy administration has been trying to do some thing that both the New Deal and the Fair Deal did not do, and what Adlai Stevenson was preaching about several years ago — that is, to radically increase the quality, not merely the quantity of American life.

The remarkable Kennedys have made court favorites of artists, writers, musicians, scientists and scholars in general with the same assiduousness President Eisenhower showed with business leaders. They have tried to elevate the practice and appreciation of the arts in America; and one of the most disturbing thoughts produced by the prospect of a deep recession is that concern with our material quantities will again exclusively absorb official energies. The last label this President could want for his regime would be The Re-Deal.

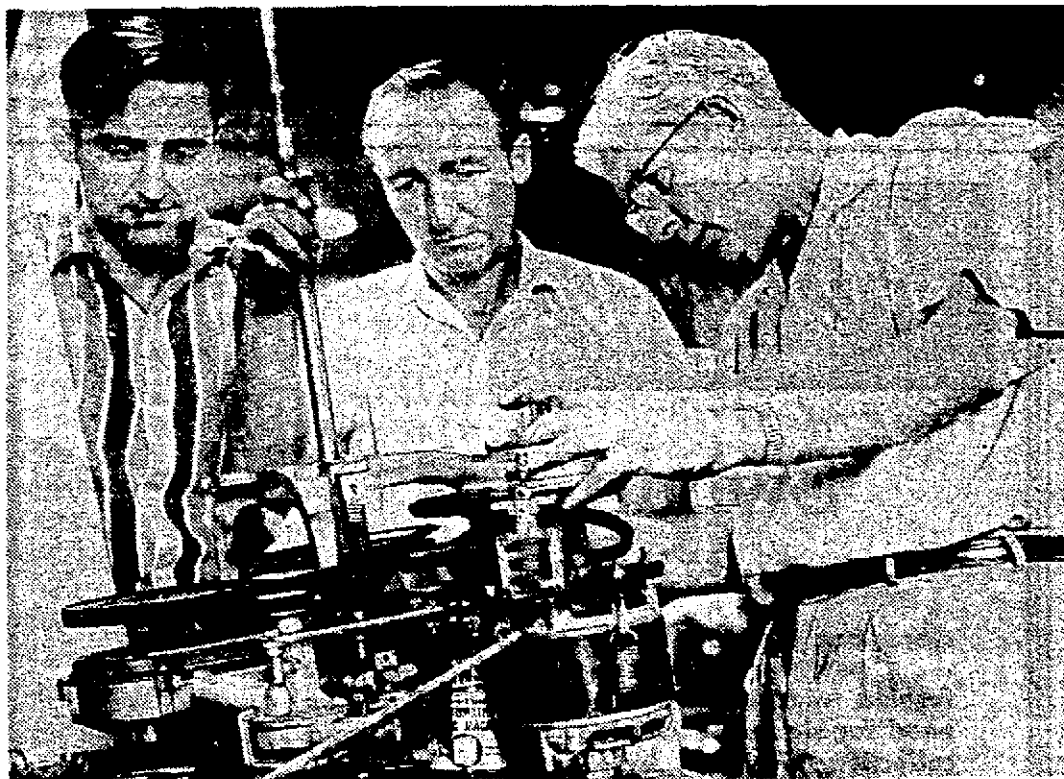

But what prompts this long view-with-alarm is a sharper snapshot of a smaller cloud on the horizon of the cultural new frontier.

National Theater

A hard effort is being made by the high-minded August Heckscher and others to build a governmental, tax supported footing under part of the structure of art in America, as governments in Europe have done for generations, most notably for their national theaters. I am persuaded that the attempt

An Abandoned Coal Mine Tippie at Shrewsbury, left, and a bustling big new garment plant in the Parkersburg area point up the contradictions in West Virginia's economic situation. Opening of new plants, expansion of old ones or conversion to new uses, defense contracts and other aid from the federal government mean jobs for some of the state's vast pool of unemployed. But there are still 70,000 jobless, many from the shrunken mine industry, in a population of 1.8 million.

Learning a New Skill, two of West Vienter, are instructed in electric repairs by Everett Chapman at Huntington East Trade School in Huntington. This is one of the job retraining classes set up under a pilot program for the jobless, many of whom know only coal mining.

hitherto sacrosanct rights of a state, when that state proves naught but a drain on the economic, moral and spiritual resources of the country."

In recent years, West Virginia has become one of the most discussed — as well as cussed — areas in the nation.

It now is looking forward to its 100th birthday in 1963. Even in celebration, there is the dark as well as the bright side.

State centennial planning is major league all the way. But a provincialism as old as the hills and hollows threatens to jam the works. The centennial commission still must raise a half-million dollars by private solicitation. And people in the hills and valleys may, or may not, cooperate.

Citizens elsewhere have read millions of words about the state since John F. Kennedy took on Hubert H. Humphrey in a slam-bang Democratic presidential primary in May of 1960.

Kennedy's primary victory was his biggest single step to the presidency — and he hasn't forgotten this.

It's a Pilot Model

Under Democratic administrations, federal and state governments have been stepping up programs alternately praised and condemned (according to politics) as leading to a bright new future, or a pilot model for an American welfare state.

For the first time, West Virginia is receiving substantial numbers of defense contracts. The state commerce department says those and other federal government orders have amounted to about $60 million in the last year.

New plants are opening old ones being converted to new uses. In seven months from last September, other commerce department figures show, new plants and expansions have added more than $48 million in investments and almost 9,000 potential new jobs. However, a Charleston glass plant shutdown this fall apparently will wipe out 1,000 current jobs.

Jobless Continue

Pilot job retraining is under way, and federal food stamp and other programs have been instituted in depressed areas. Interstate highway mileage has been boosted, with additional federal funds thus allotted to West Virginia.

But the jobless continue to number more than 70,000, and the population continues to slip as younger and better-trained West Virginians emigrate to other areas.

It's simply too early to measure the real effect of many of the federal aid programs. Retraining of the unemployed, for example, still is largely in its infancy.

The federal food stamp program launched in southern McDowell County as one of half a dozen such pilot ventures across the nation a year ago has increased the buying power of the needy in that depressed coal-producing area by $1 million.

In One County

The state welfare department has insisted that the program has touched the lives of 152,341 individuals and 34,628 families — "documented facts which speak for themselves." But — it has been operated in only the one county so far.

The welfare department will spend between $70 and $75 million dollars in the fiscal year to end June 30. About $50 million of that will be in federal aid.

All of which puts food into hungry mouths. But state Welfare Commissioner W. Bernard Smith is the first to stress that the philosophy of public assistance has been derailed.

"Relief has come to mean just a government check," he said. "Somehow, we have to develop a new and positive attitude about welfare services."

"We want to rekindle initiative in our people, rebuild their pride," Smith continued. "How else can they become independent once more, and productive members of society?"

Free of What?

The West Virginia motto is "Montani Semper Liberi," or "Mountainers Are Always Free." But free of what — want or civilization?

A West Virginia University's electrical engineering professor has said, "for 99 years the state . . . has blundered through time with no greater consequence for her passivity than the shame and frustration of her citizens, the loss of her people and the continual deterioration of her character."

Edwin C. Barbe added in a campus newspaper: "She is an inefficient relic of an age past, who can no longer assume the anonymity of one among 50 — nor can the nation longer afford to ignore her."

There have been positive rumblings among the mountians. More than half of the state's 55 counties have received federal Area Redevelopment Administration approval for overall redevelopment plans.

The Ohio and Kanawhy valleys house industrial giants, particularly in the chemical and aluminum fields. Many communities hard-hit by recession are trying hard to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps.

Garment Plant

Logan (Pop. 4,200), in the sprawling southern coal fields, shrugged off its economic burdens to raise $256,000, largely from a public stock subscription drive, to help finance a new garment manufacturing plant. It is expected to employ 300, and show an annual payroll of more than a million dollars, in three years.

What Others are Saying

Issues Lost in Fog In Medicare Debate

Chicago Daily News Service

The emotional fog generated by the battle over medical care for the aged is getting so thick the real issues are being obscured. We are now treated to the ridiculous spectacle of the President of the United States arguing with the American Medical Assn. about long-forgotten attitudes of the 1930s.

An exchange of insults in which the President participates personally can hardly be called an equal contest. The avenues of communication and propaganda open to the White House dwarf the opportunities for rebuttal.

Yet it does nothing for the dignity of the office when the President resorts to petulance and innuendo, and it certainly does not make for understanding of the issues.

At this writing, it is not wholly clear what the official stand of the AMA was in the 1930s about social security. The record indicates, however, that as an organization the AMA took no stand at all on the basic provisions of the social security law, though it did oppose compulsory inclusion of physicians.

Some members of the AMA doubtless opposed it or some of its provisions. An AMA "spokesman" — later fired because he spoke too much on too many subjects — expressed some criticism. But so did many people, including members of the President's party.

A good many attitudes have changed since the '30s, and it is patently unfair to rehash the quarrels of that era to make a political point in 1962. What matters is not what the AMA did 30 years ago, but what it is doing and saying now, and there is no secret about that.

Of all the organizations opposed to the administration's medicare bill, the AMA has been the most outspoken, and its arguments have carried weight. Therefore it has become a prime political target, to be attacked by political methods.

If the President, with all the resources at his command, believes he must resort to hurling dead coals in an effort to discredit an opponent, one must conclude that he fears his case is not strong enough to win on the basis of current facts and calm reason.

I-Highways Almost Third Complete

BY ALTON SLAGLE

AP Newsfeatures Writer

A motorist, crossing the great Midwestern plains of the United States, follows a hopeful red, white and blue sign directing him to one of the nation's new Interstate highways.

He swings across a cloverleaf onto the smooth, wide, divided roadway and drives luxuriously for a few miles. Then the dream ends.

"Construction for the next 5.42 miles," proclaims an unsympathetic sign, and the detour begins.

That's one of the prices you pay, in many states, for using the Interstate this summer. But as the accompanying maps show, the sections of broad, limited-access super-highway are lengthening all across the country.

30 Per Cent Open

According to the Bureau of Public Roads, almost 12,400 miles of the network — roughly 30 per cent of the planned 41,000 miles — are now open to traffic. Construction is in progress on another 4,450 miles.

Toll roads, bridges and tunnels incorporated in the system total 2,303 miles. The bureau says that work is underway, or completed, for 68 per cent of the total project. "Underway," in the bureau's terminology, however, includes the very preliminary job of obtaining right-of-way, which occurs months ahead of actual construction.

Figures show that 1,716 miles of the system were completed to final standards during the past 12 months.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 required the Interstate system to be designed to accommodate the traffic needs of 1975, and completion was set for 1972. But delays have pushed the program back, and the completion date now is open.

Includes Turnpikes

More than half of the mileage now carrying traffic has been built or improved under the federal-aid program, with the federal government paying 90 per cent of the cost and the state involved furnishing the remainder.

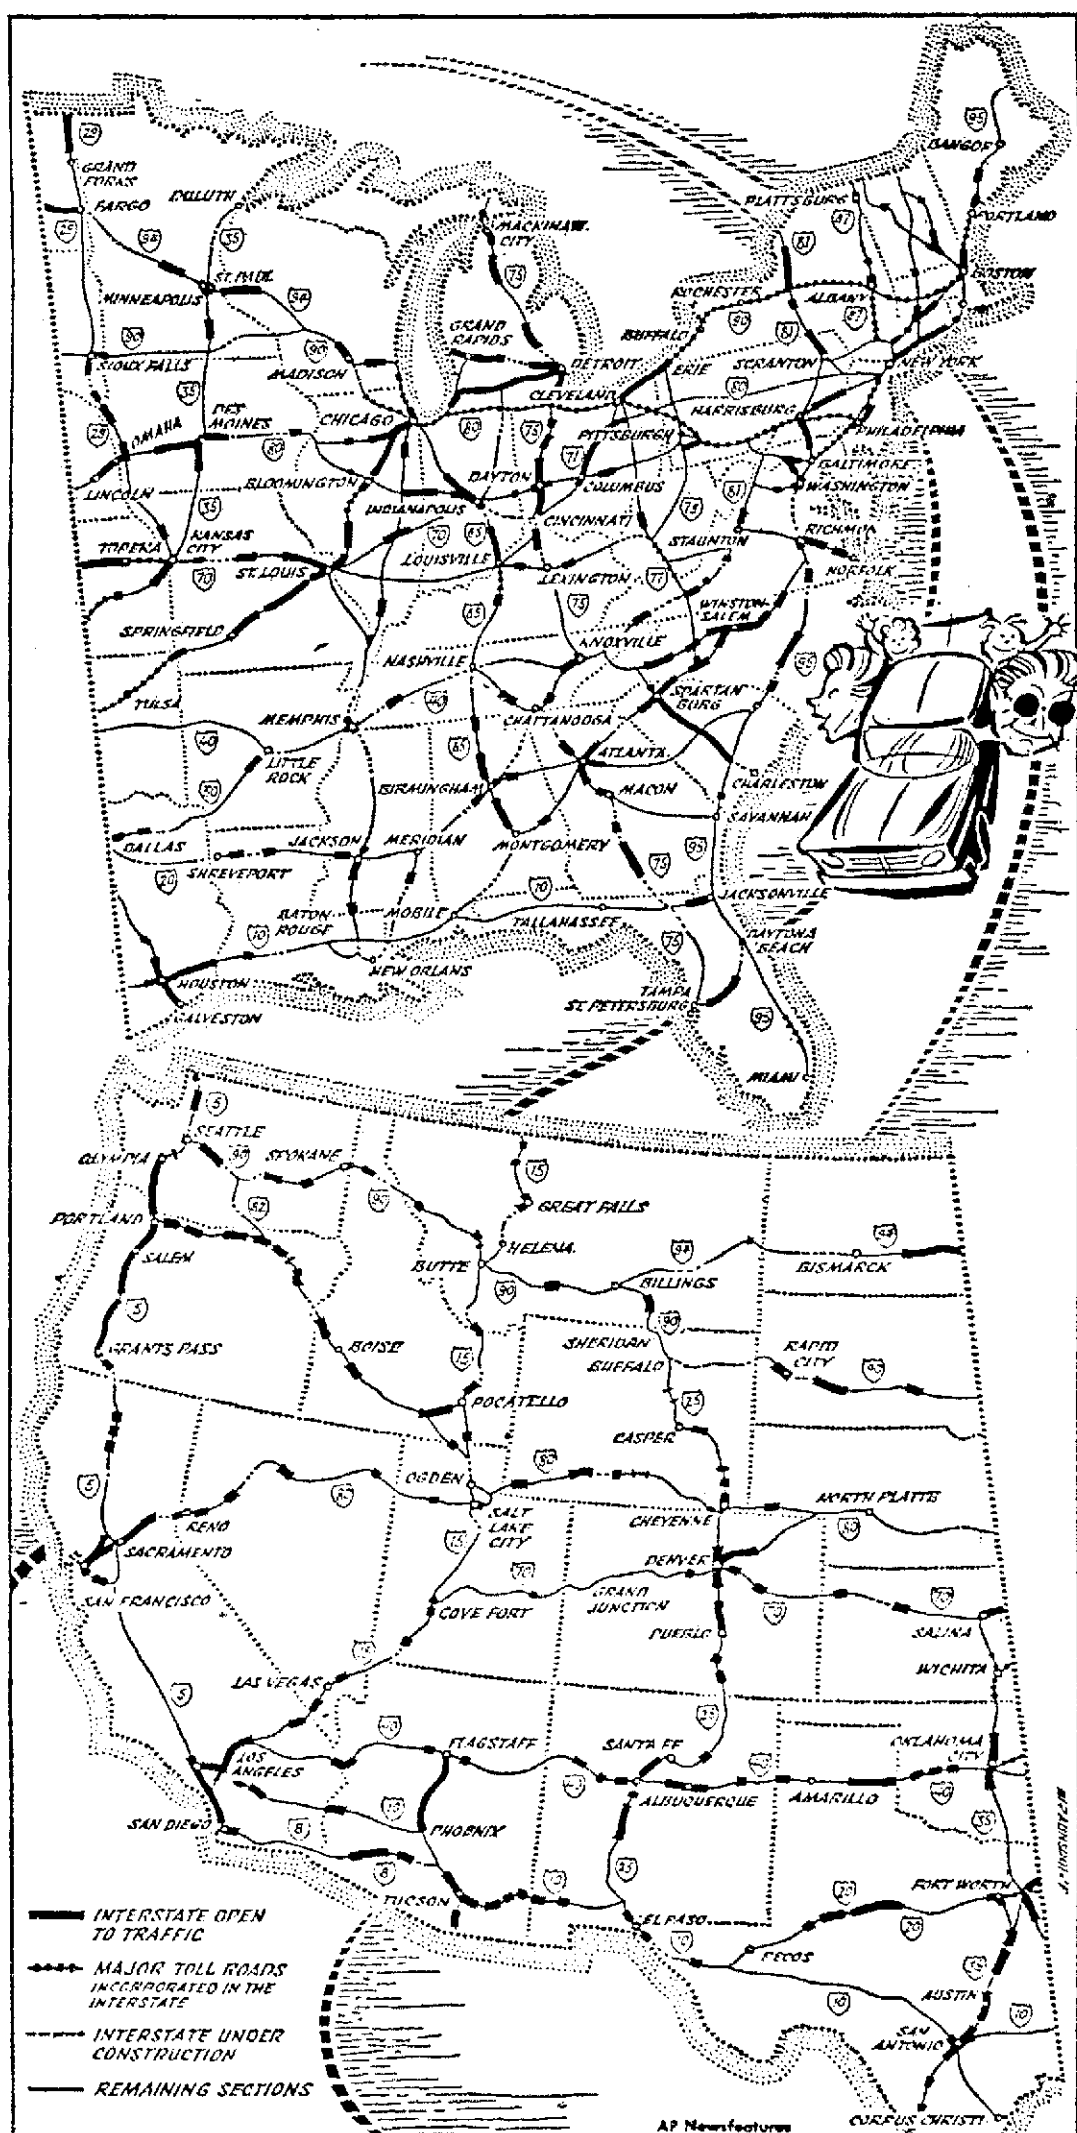

In some cases, existing toll turnpikes have been included in the system, such as the Pennsylvania and Ohio Turnpikes and the New York Thruway.

Cost of the huge network: More than $12.9 billion spent since work was begun six years ago. Construction completed since July 1, 1956, has cost $6.45 billion, while other construction authorized or underway is worth another $5.32 billion.

California will lead the nation in the size of its Interstate network — 2,178 miles designated, of which 664 is now open to traffic and 566 is in some stage of development.

Tiny Delaware will have the least Interstate mileage — 41 miles, of which only 3.5 is now open to traffic. Another 21.9 miles is in progress.

A system of Interstate highways first was proposed more than 35 years ago after the army experienced difficulty in moving supplies and men around the country during World War I.

Interstate will serve 65 per cent of the nation's urban population and 45 per cent of its rural citizenry. The broad highways will connect 42 state capitals and 90 per cent of all U. S. cities of more than 50,000 population, and are expected to carry about 20 per cent of the nation's traffic.

By law the program must operate on a pay-as-you-build basis. Federal highway officials say the system, when finished, will more than pay for itself in reduced travel time and costs, in lives saved, and in the boost it will give the nation's economy.

One such official estimated the Interstate's built-in safety features will save at least 4,000 lives a year.

Deadline Near For Staging of Manawa Rodeo

Citizens Busy Preparing for Colorful Show

MANAWA — As the deadline for fourth annual staging of the Mid-Western Championship Rodeo approaches, most of the 1,037 residents here are shouldering their share of work in preparing for the colorful event.

Rodeo weekend will be Saturday and Sunday, June 30 and July 1. Last year about 10,000 people converged on Manawa to take part in the spectacle.

While Carl Dretzke is general chairman of the 1962 event, all of the sponsoring Lions club members have important roles. The last month has been punctuated by breakfast, lunch and dinner meetings and work "bees" on the new rodeo grounds.

All three of the previous rodeos have been successful, but this year's event is calling for an "all out" effort as the club purchased a 16-acre rodeo plat, which will need the revenue for financing it.

'Like Clockwork'
Everything is going like clockwork, but there are still a few major projects to be completed. A couple of work bees will be needed to get the pens in shape before the club members and their scores of auxiliary helpers will be ready for the big show.

In addition to the usual executive committee and budget and finance committee, the club also has special groups working on publicity and promotion, road signs, the rodeo parade, queen contest, western style decorations, grounds and seating, lighting and sound system, programs, ticket sales, parking, ushering, first aid, lunch and refreshment stand and beer stand.

One of the special features of this year's rodeo will be the presentation of LaRue Olson and his trained buffalo, "Pat." Those who were at the rodeo two years ago saw the LaRue-Pat act and were among those asking to recall the show.

Main Feature

The main feature, however, will be the five major events of the rodeo, including Brahma bull riding, bareback riding, calf roping, saddle bronc riding and steer wrestling. There also will be a girl's barrel race.

The rodeo is again being sanctioned by the Rodeo Cowboys Association, Inc., the country's biggest name in rodeo promotions. The association sets the standards which must be met by the sponsoring club.

Cowboys from all over the country will be competing in the events for the $1,800 prize money and the entry fees which will provide a purse of about $2,700.

Calvin Greely, El Campo, Texas, won the championship last year, although James Jones, Akron, Ohio, the runner-up won the Governor Gaylord Nelson Trophy Saddle for high points in the four state events.

Rodeo activities will start at 8 a.m. Saturday, June 30, when the contestants in the queen's contest will meet at Jannusch's Supper club for a breakfast with the judges and rodeo queen committee.

View Candidate

The queen's candidates then will move to the rodeo grounds where they again will be viewed and interviewed by the judges.

All of the girls will take part in the parade, which will start about 11 a.m. Following a chicken barbecue dinner at the rodeo grounds, the girls will take part in the opening ceremony for the first rodeo session at 2 p.m.

The queen's contest is open to all single girls 16 years and older. Horsemanship, personality, beauty and western attire will be the point categories.

Other full rodeo shows are planned at 8 p.m. June 30 and at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 1.

Nehru Accuses U. S. Of 'Anti-Indian' Attitude on Goa

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — In an angry speech, Prime Minister Nehru accused the United States and Britain Saturday of "always adopting an anti-Indian attitude" on matters such as Goa and Kashmir.

He also lashed out at what he called pressure tactics designed to keep India from buying Soviet MIG fighter planes. He said India would decide the MIG question regardless of "threats that aid will be lessened or that it will not come."

"All our five-year plans depend on that aid but we are not going to take that aid or ask for it if it means giving up our independence in any respect," he said to the applause of Parliament.

Catholic Shrine at Holy Hill Is Seen by 500,000 Tourists Yearly

One of the outstanding tourist spots in Wisconsin that Fox Cities trippers should not overlook is the Catholic shrine and church at Holy Hill in Washington County.

Besides the beautiful shrine that attracts 500,000 visitors from every state in the union each year, the view at Holy Hill is breathtaking.

The Romanesque church with its imposing twin towers stands on the highest hill in southeastern Wisconsin in the heart of the scenic Kettle Moraine country. The spires of the church are visible for miles in all directions. From this tower vantage point visitors can see the Milwaukee skyline, about 30 miles away, and the four surrounding counties with many lakes, farmlands and clusters of villages and cities dotting the landscape.

Holy Hill is the culminating point of a group of hills, scenic in themselves, known as the Lapham range. They were named for Increase Lapham, early surveyor who mapped the country more than a century ago.

Holy Hill's 321 acres is under the direction of the Discalced Carmelite Order, one of the oldest orders in the Catholic Church. A public Way of the Cross is held every Sunday, led by one of the priests and several altar boys. The Stations of the Cross start at the bottom of Holy Hill and the connecting path winds through the woods up to the church and monastery on the top of the hill. The last Station is under the steps that lead to the upper church.

There have been some changes made at the famous shrine. Replacing the old set of steps that were a long climb up the steep hill are two 65-foot elevators designed to carry 4,500 persons per hour from the base of the hill to the upper platform in front of the present upper church. The century-old priests' building and another building have been razed to make way for the new installation. There also are new guest facilities including a cafeteria, and an enlarged gift shop.

Holy Hill may be reached from either Highway 93, which starts on Highway 175 (old Highway 41) between Addison and Slinger, or Highway 167 out of Richfield by way of new Highway 41.

There are several scenic country routes to take from the Fox Cities, by skirting the east shore of Lake Winnebago on Highway 55 and then angling east and southward on county trunks at Brothertown, Pipe or Peebles. All of these country roads connect with southbound Highway G which traverses part of the northern Kettle Moraine State Forests to Kewaskum. Highway 28 at Kewaskum leads to Highway 41 that may be followed to Richfield. If the Highway 83 approach is preferred, several short roads lead from the new Highway 41 to the old, now Highway 175. The best route is to turn west at Allenton on Highway 41 and travel two miles to Addison on 175. Highway 83 starts about three miles south of Addison. Highway signs directing travelers to the shrine are well marked as they approach the area and the church, high on its hill, can be seen for many miles in the distance as a traveling guide.

Animal 'Stars' Slated to Perform at Calumet Fair

CHILTON — Movie "stars" of the Saturday night stock car racing program. On Sunday morning, before the wild animal show, the horse pulling contest for the Northeastern Wisconsin Championship, will the Gene Holter Wild Animal Show has been booked for the grandstand.

Herbert Harder, Fair Association secretary, announced that the Gene Holter Wild Animal Show has been booked for the grandstand. Sunday afternoon grandstand performance.

Headliner of the bill is the elephant that performed a key part in the movie, "The Greatest Show on Earth." Holter, at his California ranch, trains many of the wild animals used in the movie industry, Harder said. Many of them will appear in the show here.

Booking of grandstand acts for the fair, which opens Aug. 31 at the county fairgrounds here, has been virtually completed.

The wild animal show Sept. 2 will also feature unusual races. Camels and ostriches will be raced and for the ostrich races, local drivers for the sulky-like carts will be recruited. "It is a very interesting and unusual show," Harder said.

Riding Exhibit

Opening the grandstand entertainment on Friday night will be a horsemanship exhibition by the Calumet County Riding Club. The opening date, children's day when the rides are half-price and gate admission is free, holds the only attraction still tentative. Harder said he has been trying to arrange the appearance of television's Colonel Caboose, but hasn't yet been given a commitment. To be repeated after a highly successful staging last year is

Foundations—Prange's Second Floor Fashions

New Shapes! New Colors! New Fabrics!

The Feminine Look In Beachwear

Making the biggest splash on every beach is the relaxed mood of the feminine look. Silhouette, color, fabrics or detailing . . . the new concept of individual femininity is decisive!

But with the contrariness of LA FEMME, fashion contradicts itself, moving in two extremes . . . the uncovered look and the covered up look. Take your choice!

There's the look of the twenties' swimming dress in the '62 version of the midgy or tunic styles, which just skim the outlines of the shape. Then there are bikini styles that bare the midriff, yet cover the bust and add wide camisole type straps or a diagonal wrap skirt. These two extremes ride the crest of the fashion wave this summer.

Color . . . More of It

Fashion trends move toward two and three color combinations — new duo-tri-multi mixtures in both prints and stripes. The combustible combination with greatest impact is red, white and blue . . . an off shoot of the Americana Look. Also black and white (most refreshing when used together in prints and patterns) and the newest of all . . . rich chocolate brown combined with white . . . and for extra drama, black.

Fabrics in the Swim

The mood is light . . . and the fabrics are as light as a whisper. The last two or three years have seen the introduction of U.S. Rubber's Vyrene . . . Dupont's Lycra and Helanca . . . new Spandex fibers that weigh nothing (a whole suit might tip the scale at less than five ounces) yet assure firm figure control. Look for such outstanding new fabrics and textures as silk and Vyrene, cotton and Vyrene, Helanca and Lycra, Lycra satin, knits and double knits, Lycra Leno, lustrous cottons and many more!

Sunswimmer or Waterswimmer

The look is stunning . . . whether you choose sunning or swimming. It's easy . . . the silhouette relaxed. This "new look" has been achieved by side draping . . . necklines that have tiny gathers and shirrings across the front . . . bodices and waistlines that are bloused through the use of inset belts or ties. And of extreme interest the new fashions in sheer fabrics give you that extra bit of figure control for flattery plus! Try these new styles and you'll see . . . body line sheaths, maillots, boy leg types, middies, blousons and softened draped sheaths!

While the two piece suit continues in popularity, there is a new interpretation appearing . . . the costume look . . . the swim-suit fashion that doubles as an "after swim" suit. You'll be interested in the matching skirts that fashionably create the affect of a patio dress. A versatile addition to any woman's wardrobe! And there's much more coverage than ever before! Jackets with hoods, blouson pull-overs, long sweat shirts, beach dresses, etc. done in cotton knit, terry denim or dacron and cotton for an entirely new look on the beach.

Eye Appealing Fashion Details

But a trip to the beach without the important accessories is about as tragic as going without your new suit! Top it off with a colorful new swim cap or a straw hat. Carry everything conveniently in a bright beach bag . . . and face up to the sun beautifully in a pair of sun glasses in a provocative new contour. Got everything? Then you're set to launch a private campaign to keep our beaches beautiful!

Lawmakers Gather to Wrestle With Reapportionment

When the Wisconsin state legislature returned to Madison last week to break all Wisconsin records for length of deliberations, Post-Crescent Madison News Bureau photographer Tim Wyngaard was on hand to record some of the scenes.

Here is a pictorial record of the legislature on a typical day during the extraordinary session occasioned by the threat of federal court intervention on the legislative and congressional reapportionment issue.

The session is likely to last at least another week. Calendar action on the reapportionment controversy is likely to be scheduled for next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Historically state legislative sessions have lasted about six months. The 1961 legislature, elected in the fall of 1960, already has sat far beyond the normal duration and has established a new record for longevity.

Two of the most complex issues in state politics, tax revision last year and redistricting this year, occasioned the historic length of legislative deliberations.

There Are Notes of informality during and between talks on the floor of the legislature. Above, State Sen. Gerald D. Lorge, Bear Creek, shows his son some of the sights and sounds around the capitol. Below, Assemblyman William Steiger, Oshkosh, relaxes as he listens to debate.

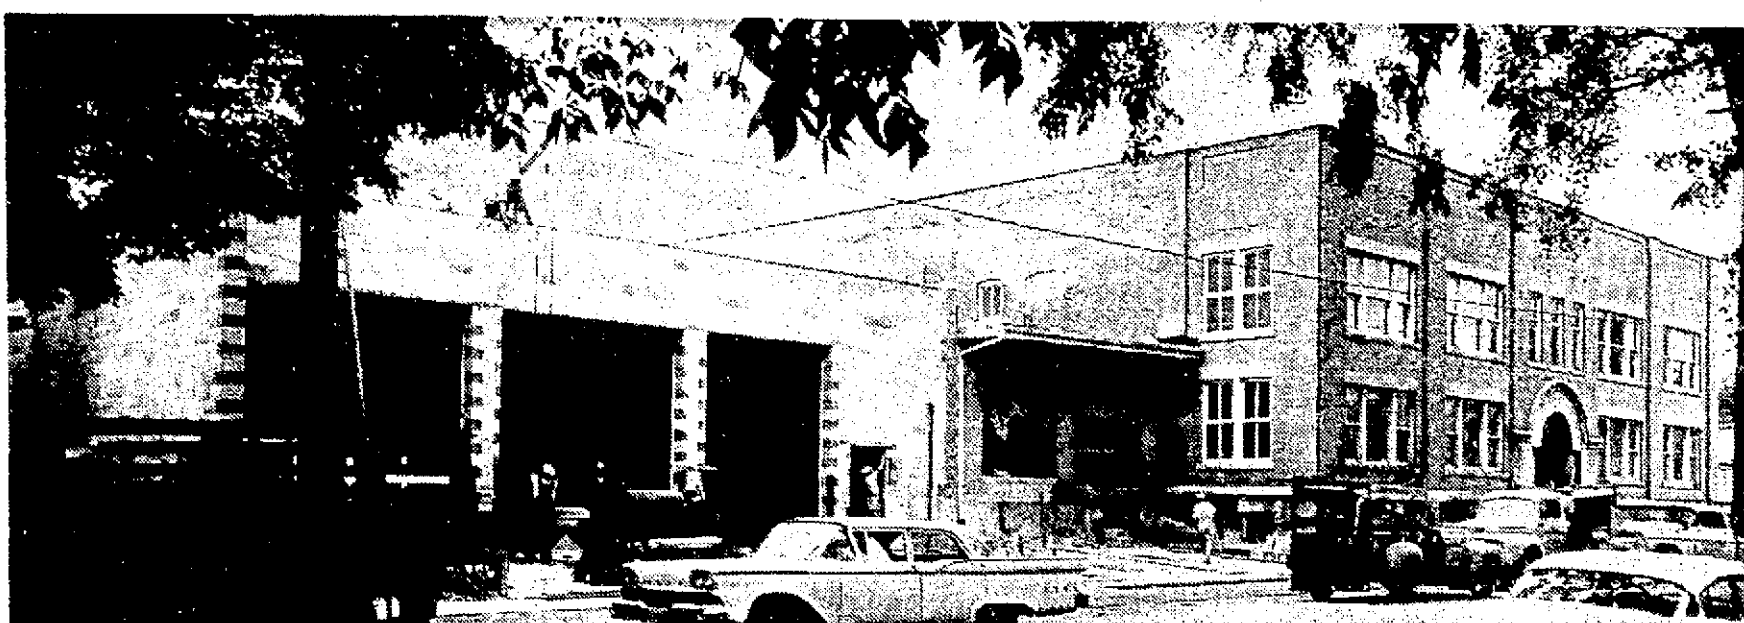

Assemblyman Everett Bidwell, above, Portage Republican, listens intently to a speaker in the state assembly. He is a key lieutenant of Speaker David Blanchard and chairman of the assembly wing of the legislative joint finance committee. Below, two veteran Milwaukee Democrats in the assembly, Frank Shaeffer and Robert Huber, Milwaukee, Democratic floor leader, discuss strategy.

GENERAL TIRE HEADQUARTERS

Dear Friends and Customers of RAY'S TIRE CO.

In celebration of our 25th Anniversary and the wide acceptance and growth of our tire service since that time, we are remodeling the former Shannon Wholesale Warehouse and adding a huge, modern tire service garage and offices to that premises at 531 N. Morrison Street. The first of July we will move into these spacious new quarters and carry on our complete business from that address.

All this is the culmination of 25 years of growth, starting with the purchase of the General franchise in 1937, and accented last year by the purchase of the Green Bay General Tire Store, now an affiliate of Ray's Tire. We hope you will like these new quarters — they mean better and better GENERAL tire service for all Fox Cities drivers!

By Air, Sea Whites Flee Free Algeria

3,500 Europeans
Arrive Daily in Port of Marseille

BY HARVEY HUDSON

MARSEILLE (AP)—By air and sea, the once defiant Europeans of Algeria are fleeing the land they had vowed to keep French forever.

About 6,500 sad, bewildered, bitter and disillusioned French people from Algeria arrive every day in the homeland that many have never before seen.

The number seems to be limited only by the availability of transportation.

If there were ships to take them out, no Europeans would still be in Oran," a man said as he stepped onto the dock.

The old, the young and the women make up the biggest share of the arrivals. They come with their dogs, cats and canaries. Some come with their cars.

Seek New Homes
Many have come seeking new homes, but some are looking only for a haven. Almost all fear that Algerian Moslems may run wild during the next month in celebration of independence.

France today represents security that they could not be sure of in independent Algeria.

"The number of men coming by ship is relatively small," said Albert Payan, police commissioner for the Marseille port. "One day this week we had 4,882 arrivals by sea, and only 530 of them were men between the ages of 17 and 60."

"My husband stayed behind to guard the apartment and the furniture," said a woman with three small children. "He may come later or we may go back to Algeria. We'll have to see how things go."

Tears in Eyes
An 80-year-old retired farmer had tears in his eyes. "I've lived there for 40 years. I wanted to die there. I didn't want to leave, but my children wouldn't let me stay."

About 3,500 repatriates — they are never called refugees — come to Marseille by ship on an average day, and another 3,000 arrive by air. Other planes go to Paris, Lyon or Toulouse. A few ships make the longer trip to Bordeaux. Marseille, the traditional gateway to France from Algeria is about 36 hours from Algiers by ship and two hours by propeller plane.

Nelson Lauds State Guardsmen At Missile Site

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Gov. Gaylord Nelson took time out from his party's convention today to pay tribute to Wisconsin's National Guardsmen at a review and inspection of the Nike missile site in Milwaukee.

Nelson told the guardsmen in a prepared talk that the history of America in time of crises "has been a history of citizen soldiers defending their homes, their country's shores or America's best interest on remote frontiers and abroad."

He referred to the 32nd Division's call to federal duty and Guardsmen, "The 250 men of the 1st Missile Battalion, 126 Artillery, began to just how much the United States depends upon its National

Tax Breaks Asked for 32nd Losses

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Vernon W. Thomson, R-Wis., has asked the Internal Revenue Service to allow men of the 32nd National Guard Division to deduct, for income tax purposes, the expenses that have resulted from dislocations from their jobs and businesses.

The 32nd Division, from the Wisconsin area, was called to active duty last year and now is stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash. Thomson, who made his request public today, said that men of the 32nd had been put to great personal expense because of the dislocation of their families and themselves from farms, businesses, jobs and professions.

"Citizens whose jobs take them away from their homes for a year or less are entitled to deduct from taxes expenses incurred because of such jobs," he told the IRS.

"It seems only fair that the men of the 32nd Division, whose lives were disrupted by the peacetime call to service, should be entitled to deduct from their taxes the additional personal expense, the same as would any civilian."

Guardsmen and just how well the Wisconsin men stand "We are both proud and confident in knowing that an important part of our bulwark of strength is composed of the men of the 1st Missile Battalion and all the other Wisconsin National Guardsmen," the governor said. The 250 men of the 1st Missile Battalion, 126 Artillery, began to just how much the United States depends upon its National hatchery of the Wisconsin Conservation Department is becoming an instructional stop for various groups of high school and college students.

Donald Czeskleba, hatchery superintendent, has established a policy of inviting any and all people to the hatchery to see the operations. P. J. Jacobs High School, Stevens Point, one of the pioneer schools in the conservation field, sent a delegation of 23 sophomore and junior boys to the hatchery last Friday.

The Stevens Point group, headed by Raymond Hager, biology teacher, and John Jacobs and Carl Anthony, teacher - students from Stevens Point State College, is visiting many places in the state as part of the conservation course.

Struck Sentinel To Resume Talks

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Bargaining talks between the Milwaukee Sentinel and Local 51 of the American Newspaper Guild were scheduled to resume Saturday as the dispute completed its fourth week.

Four hours of talks on Friday failed to produce any progress, according to Clement J. Murphy of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

The Sentinel, the city's only morning newspaper, has been idle since the guild struck May 27 encourages such groups to visit the hatchery, Czeskleba said.

'Friendly but Independent'

Mexico's in Nobody's Pocket, Lopez Mateos to Tell Kennedy

MEXICO CITY (AP) —

When Kennedy arrives here

next Friday for a 48-hour visit,

Mexicans hope he will get the message: Mexicans are definitely friendly but definitely independent neighbors.

They plan to give the President the greatest welcome ever received by any foreign dignitary.

But with all the cheers, flowers, confetti and music, Mexicans only want Kennedy to understand that Mexico cannot be counted in anybody's pocket; that Mexico is fiercely jealous of its right to manage its own affairs as it sees best—even if this occasionally flashes feelings in Washington.

Mexicans see no reason why

this attitude of strict independence should prevent friendly relations with their big northern

OAS.

9th Inning Homer Gives Bucs 4-3 Win

Hoak's Four-Bagger
Brings Pirates 1-Run
Victory Over Cubs

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Don Hoak of Pittsburgh hit a two-run home run in the ninth inning Saturday as the Pirates edged the Chicago Cubs 4-3.

With one out Smoky Burgess was walked by relief pitcher Don Elston and then Hoak slammed his fourth homer of the season over the left field wall.

The Cubs had taken the lead in their half of the ninth when starter Bob Friend walked Don Landrum, batting for pitcher Don Cardwell, with the bases loaded.

Diomedes Olivo then relieved Friend and struck out Lou Brock to end the inning.

Chicago tied the game with two runs in the seventh on doubles by George Altman and Andy Rodgers and a pinch-hit single by Bob Will.

The Pirates grabbed the lead with a run in the first on Bill Virdon's leadoff triple and Dick Groat's infield hit.

Dick Stuart's home run against the light standard in left field in the sixth inning, his 10th of the season, provided the Pirates with their second run.

Olivo was credited with the victory, his second against two losses Elston, who entered the game in the ninth, took the loss. He is now 2-3.

The victory was the Pirates' ninth in 10 games with the Cubs this season.

Foxes Held to Two Hits, Drop 3-0 Decision to Waterloo '9'

Watt Allows Only Three Safeties, Loses

WATERLOO, Ia. — The Fox Cities Foxes were held to a pair of singles and dropped a 3-0 decision to Waterloo in the first game of a Midwest League double-header here Saturday night.

Ed Schollenberger, ace of the Waterloo mound staff, posted his seventh victory of the season. He displayed fine control, walking only one batter and recording five strikeouts.

Ed Watt of the Foxes was tagged with the loss, his sixth of the campaign. Watt allowed only three hits but a pair of fielding errors and three walks kept him in trouble. Watt fanned six batters.

Ryan Homers Mike Ryan supplied all the margin that Schollenberger needed when he poked a 350-foot homer over the right-centerfield fence in the third inning. Waterloo added single runs in the fourth and sixth frames to pad the lead.

Bob Lewandowski erased any thoughts Schollenberger may have had before the game about pitching a no-hitter. Lewandowski smacked the first pitch of the game into centerfield for a clean single but managed to get only as far as second base.

The only other hit the Foxes managed was another single by Jack Seymour in the fourth inning. The Foxes stranded only four runners in the game as Schollenberger had the batters driving the ball into the dirt or hitting high popups.

Waterloo's 3-0 victory was the first of the season for the Foxes. Waterloo's 3-0 victory was the first of the season for the Foxes.

Braves Defeated, 4-2 By Mike McCormick

Shaw Loser, Milwaukee Gets 4 Hits

Lee Maye Gives Losers Early Lead With 2-Run Blast

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) The San Francisco Giants backed Mike McCormick's four-hit pitching with a 10-hit attack and beat Milwaukee 4-2 Saturday.

The Braves went ahead 2-0 in the sixth on Lee Maye's two-run homer. McCormick had put down Milwaukee without a hit until Denis Menke singled with two out. Maye followed with his first homer of the season on a 3-1 pitch.

Jim Davenport batted in two Giant runs in the San Francisco half. His sharp single to left scored Matty Alou and Orlando Cepeda. Alou had singled and taken third on Cepeda's single to center.

Maye Doubles Willie Maye started a two-run seventh inning rally with a double. He scored when Menke threw past Joe Adcock at first on Matty Alou's infield hit. After Cepeda was intentionally walked, Felipe Alou scored brother Matty with a single to center.

Bob Shaw, Milwaukee starter who had struck out six but allowed 10 hits, was relieved by Jack Curtis. The loss was Shaw's third against nine wins.

McCormick went the distance for the first time this season in winning his fourth against two losses. He struck out four and walked one.

The Giant triumph ended a three-game losing streak. It was the fifth San Francisco victory in 17 games.

Hank Aaron of the Braves was blanked in four trips after hitting safely in 11 straight games.

San Francisco's 4-2 victory was the fifth of the season for the Giants. Milwaukee's 2-4 loss was the fourth of the season for the Braves.

Twins Whip Angels As Jim Kaat Hurls Three-Hit Shutout

Vic Power, Zoilo Versalles Hit Homers in 5-0 Minnesota Victory

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP) The Minnesota Twins whipped the Los Angeles Angels 5-0 Saturday with lefty Jim Kaat coasting to his seventh straight victory by hind the home run muscle of Vic Power and Zoilo Versalles.

The victory, third straight over the Angels, was a choice anniversary gift for Twins Manager Sam Mele, who took over the reins from Cookie Lavagetto one year ago.

The Twins, sticking in second place in the American League, have gone 86-79 under Mele for a .521 percentage. A year ago the Twins were in ninth place, 17 games out of first.

Kaat (18-4) held Los Angeles to three hits and retired the last 22 batters in order following Joe Koppe's two-out single in the second inning.

Versalles, hitting .210 going into the game, cracked his ninth homer in the second inning with two aboard. Power belted solo homers in the third and sixth.

Kaat's victory was his sixth straight. He issued no walks and struck out seven.

The Twins got only five hits off starter and loser Eli Grba (3-4) and reliever Bob Bolz as the teams whipped through the game in 1 hour and 56 seconds.

Los Angeles' 0-5 loss was the fourth of the season for the Angels. Minnesota's 5-0 win was the 10th of the season for the Twins.

Rookie Hurls 6-Hitter for Washington

CLEVELAND (AP)—Dave Stenhouse pitched last-place Washington to a 5-3 victory over league-leading Cleveland Saturday, limiting the Indians to six hits, including a two-run homer by John Romano in the fifth inning.

The rookie right-hander had retired 16 men in order when Willie Kirkland singled with one out just before Romano clouted his 12th home run. Stenhouse walked Woodie Held, and with the tying run at the plate, Tom Cheney relieved and got the next two men out.

Jim Grant (4-2) was the loser to Stenhouse (5-1) in what was a close hurling duel through seven innings. Grant doubled home the first run of the game after Bubba Phillips' single and a walk in the second inning.

Bright Homers A sixth-inning home run by Harry Bright, the visitors' third hit, tied the score at 1-1, and Jim Piersall's third single of the day put the Senators ahead by an unearned run in the seventh. Piersall drove home Ken Retzer, who singled and went to second on Kirkland's bobbie.

Grant was chased in the eighth when Washington scored a third run on singles by Chuck Cottier and Bright, with a sacrifice and intentional walk sandwiched between the base hits.

Washington added two more off reliever Gary Bell in the ninth. Retzer's single, a walk and a bad throw to first by Bell filled the bases, and Cottier singled two runs home.

Washington's 5-3 victory was the 10th of the season for the Senators. Cleveland's 3-5 loss was the fourth of the season for the Indians.

Johnson Wins Title Bout In Germany

BERLIN (AP)—Harold Johnson retained his world light-heavyweight championship Saturday night by outpointing West Germany's Gustav Scholz in a 15-rounder in Berlin's Olympic Stadium.

Johnson dominated the German almost throughout the fight. There were no knockdowns. The official scorecard was not disclosed as is customary in European rings. An official AP count gave Johnson eight rounds, Scholz three and made four even.

The bout was staged in the open air arena before 35,000 people. Johnson weighed in at 172½ pounds, to 171 for Scholz.

Johnson exuded confidence throughout the fight, easily taking the sharp lefts from Scholz.

The crowd agreed with the decision of the referee and two judges, although the local fans had strongly rooted for the German. It was the first world title fight on German soil.

'Campy' Gains Membership in New '200 Club'

NEW YORK (AP)—Roy Campanella received another citation Thursday.

It came in the form of a beautiful silver-trimmed plaque proclaiming the former star catcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers a member of a newly formed "Two Hundred Club."

The inscription on the plaque, above the signatures of league presidents Joe Cronin and Warren Giles, reads in part:

"To Roy Campanella, the 35th major league player to hit 200 or more home runs."

Campy, who hit a total of 242 home runs, cracked his 200th on August 31, 1955, at Busch Stadium, St. Louis.

Roy's last season was 1957. He suffered a broken neck in an automobile accident in January of 1958 and has been paralyzed from the neck down ever since.

Wisconsinite Wins Women's Golf Tourney

CAROL SORENSON TAKES COLLEGIATE LINKS CHAMPIONSHIP

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP)—Blonde Carol Sorenson of Arizona State University fired sub-par golf and blazed to a 5 and 4 victory over defending champion Judy Hoetmer for the 18th Women's Collegiate Golf Championship Saturday.

Miss Sorenson was as hot as the 34-degree temperature which wilted both girls over the par 76, 6,476-yard University of New Mexico course in the scheduled 36-hole final.

She was 2-under par through 32 holes, hit every fairway, missed only three greens but still never was able to string two winning holes more than once.

Even though the heat was sapping both girls in the afternoon second tryout, Miss Sorenson, 19-year-old, daughter of a Janesville, Wis., high school golf coach, shot a par, with the Grand Rapids, Mich., birdie and three more pars to Shamrocks, champions of the close it out.

Miss Hoetmer, a 21-year-old University of Washington graduate and daughter of a Seattle golf pro, fell 7 down before she started her charge in the afternoon round. The slender bespectacled blonde won only one hole in the morning 18.

Glenn Harke to Make Second Try With Viking '11'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Three Wisconsin players will report to the Minnesota Vikings when the National Football League Club opens drills July 25 at Bemidji, Minn.

Halfback Glenn Harke, formerly of Stout State, will be making his second tryout. He was released by the Vikings after the 1961 training period and played last fall high school golf coach, shot a par, with the Grand Rapids, Mich., birdie and three more pars to Shamrocks, champions of the close it out.

Another of the players also at Stout is tackle Pat Krall. The third is Dennis Penza, formerly of St. Norbert who resigned recently as an assistant coach at St. Catherine High School in Racine.

Zarley Wins NCAA Golf Championship

Takes Title With One Under Par Game And 7 Stroke Lead

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Kermil Zarley built up a seven hole cushion in the morning round and went on from there to trim Homero Blancas, his heavily favored All-America teammate from the University of Houston, 5 and 4, and win the NCAA Golf Championship Saturday. Zarley, a 20-year-old junior from Yakima, Wash., was 1-under-par for the 32 holes played over the par 71 Duke course that was stretched out to some 6,900 yards. The bespectacled Zarley, who had won the medal, became the fifth Houston champion in the last six years. He won only one of the 14 holes played in the afternoon, but held his 7-up lead through the 27th. Blancas won two holes on the final trip around the back nine, but time ran out on the No. 1 player of the Houston NCAA team champions. Once In Trap Zarley, who played No. 3 for Houston, had eight one putt greens and no three-putters while Blancas had five one-putters, four in the afternoon, and three-putted twice. Zarley, who works in the kitchen of his father's restaurant, missed only four greens, three fairways and only once hit into a trap. The 6-foot, 155-pounder, who hit some 200 practice balls an hour after winning his second match of the day Friday to correct what he called a sloppy swing, led from the third hole of the morning round. His morning play was superb. He played only one hole badly, the 16th, where he hit into the trees, a ditch and overshot the green. After chipping 7 feet short of the carpet, he conceded a winning birdie 3 to Blancas. Giving Zarley a double bogey on this uncompleted hole, he had a pair of 34s for 68 against 73 for Blancas. Zarley finished the 32 in 19 holes. Rodesch gained the semifinals by eliminating the only other Zarley had 6 one putt greens, sinking putts of 30, 25, 18 and 14 in the field. Edward Haber of Los Angeles, 4 and 3, in the morning's ninth he won five holes in a quarter-final round. Castleman row, four with birdies, to pile up his incredible lead.

On Wrigley's reaction, one paper quoted him: "Charlie is doing very well with our club. Unless something unanticipated develops, I'd say he'd stay in charge."

System Is Same
Another paper recorded: "I endorsed Charlie Metro as the head coach when he took over as head coach. And, he'll stay head coach as long as he does a good job. But our system is the same. Nothing has changed that."

Still a third had this from Wrigley: "We just don't rotate coaches to rotate coaches. I agree absolutely with what he (Metro) is doing and have instructed John (General Manager John Holland) to tell him we're all behind him. Charlie is doing a good job and anyone who does a good job is going to stay in there."

Metro has achieved a 9-9 record, including five straight since he took over as head coach. The intense, dark-eyed former successful minor league manager came to the Cubs this season as replacement for Harry Craft, now manager of the Houston Colts. He was regarded as a no-nonsense, strong-man type of leader who eventually would land in the Cubs' driver seat, rotating coaches or not.

Wrigley commented Saturday: "I received much criticism for not putting Metro in command right at the season's start. He was that highly regarded. But Charlie needed time to get adjusted. He wasn't with us last year. He was just stepping up to the majors. I felt that Metro deserved a chance to analyze the Cubs and the other National League teams. The limited time he had in spring training hardly seemed sufficient to give the man a fair chance."

Metro, who was with Denver last year, emphasized he wasn't mad at anybody in particular for "taking defeat too lightly." "I'm just a tough loser," Charlie said. "Maybe I'm wrong when I expect other people to suffer in defeat just as I do. It burned me when I saw some of our fellows laughing after Dick Ellsworth lost that tough one (Thursday)." The Cubs, now riding ninth in the National League with 25-44 finished seventh (next to last) the past two seasons and have not been out of the second division since a third-place finish in 1946.

Rodesch Wins Belgian Meet

WATERLOO, Belgium (AP) — Francois Rodesch of Belgium edged Bill Castleman of Midland, Tex., Saturday in their 21-hole semifinal of the Belgian International Amateur Golf Tournament. J. Demeulemeester set up an all-Belgian 36-hole final Sunday by besting J. A. Irvine-Edwards. Rodesch gained the semifinals by eliminating the only other Zarley had 6 one putt greens, sinking putts of 30, 25, 18 and 14 in the field. Edward Haber of Los Angeles, 4 and 3, in the morning's ninth he won five holes in a quarter-final round. Castleman row, four with birdies, to pile up his incredible lead.

Veteran Milwaukee Braves' hurler, Warren Spahn, greets 19-year-old University of Arizona baseball star, Dan Schneider, also a pitcher. Schneider, a southpaw, was signed by Milwaukee for a reported $100,000 bonus and is traveling with the Braves on their current road trip. Schneider is from Tucson, Ariz.

Packer Stadium Groundskeeper Feels Better, Goal Posts are Up

GREEN BAY — Johnny Proski, keeper of the green blades at City stadium, feels better. . . the goal posts are up. The home of the Green Bay Packers had something missing since 3:30 p. m. of last Dec. 30 when thousands of Packer backers snapped off the steel posts. Some of the uninitiated wondered how five-inch steel pipes could be snapped off. . . enthusiasm, engendered by the Packer championship victory, comes first. Then muscle power. The trick is to bend that pipe back and forth until it snaps. It's the same way you'd break a piece of wire without a pliers. The "old" goal posts, which went up with the stadium in 1957, are now scattered around Packerland in various shapes and sizes. The broken pipes after the championship game were lugged downtown and cut up with blow torches or steel saws. Chunks are now used for bracelets, paper weights, goodluck charms and ash trays — or you name it. New Top Soil This started out to be something about the green grass at City Stadium. So: Proski reports that he has top-soiled the wall-to-wall turf was started from seed one year ago. It would be double thick and soft come the first Packer presentation — the Giants Sept. 3. This new grass has yet to cushion a Packer loss. In fact, since Vince Lombardi took the handle in '59 the Packers have lost only one league game at City Stadium. His initial production gained four straight victories, opening with that now historic 9-6 victory over the Bears. The next year the Packers lost their opener to the Bears 17-14, with the Bears scoring all their marks in the last period. Last fall, the Packers won all four — plus the championship game. Including the title game, the Lombardians scored 12 wins against one loss. The league record for the five years since the new stadium has been in operation stands at 13 wins, 5 losses and 1 tie. Liz Blackburn, in his last year as Packer coach, posted 1-2, including the dedication win over the Bears. Scooter McLean, in his one year at the helm, had a 1-2-1 record.

Kimberly Tips New London

Schmidt Picks Up Win on Rally in Seventh Inning
KIMBERLY—With four walks, three hits and two errors, Kimberly's Central Division Legion squad came back from a 7-2 deficit in the seventh to score six runs and go on to drop New London, 10-9 here Saturday. Al Schmidt, the winning pitcher, came on in the fifth to allow only three hits while striking out six. Gary Dollevoet led Kimberly at the plate with a key triple in the seventh and a double in three trips. Jim Vanden Heuvel got three hits in five attempts including a triple. Muskevitch led the losers at the plate with a home run and a triple in five trips. The losing pitcher, Jim Hedtke allowed four hits, eight runs, and one walk.

Berlin Wall Blocks East Germans From Seeing Title Bout

BERLIN (AP)—East Germany's boxing fans were shut out of Saturday night's world light heavyweight championship by the red wall through Berlin. The official East German news agency, ADN, in an apparent attempt to convince them they had missed nothing, called it "a colorless fight." ADN described it as "a so-called world championship" and devoted most of its report to the profits made by the managers.

Bob Gibson Hurls Cards To 9-1 Win

Ken Boyer Clouts Ninth Homer in Victory Over Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bob Gibson posted his ninth victory of the season Saturday as he pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-1 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies. Ken Boyer clouted his ninth homer with a runner on base to help the Cardinals spoil the mound debut of Billy Smith, an undersized 23-year-old southpaw. Smith, whose only other National League start was for the Cardinals in 1958, worked five innings and gave up five runs. Gibson, who has never lost to the Phillies, scattered six hits in his easy effort, striking out six and displaying perfect control. The Redbirds went ahead with two unearned runs in the fourth when shortstop Bob Wine and outfielder Wes Covington committed errors on easy plays. But in the fifth St. Louis sewed up the decision on singles by Curt Flood, Julio Javier's bunt and an RBI single by Charley James before Boyer unloaded into the left field bleachers. The Cardinals added another run in the sixth and three more in the eighth off rookie Paul Brown.

Ashburn Homers Twice As Mets Post 13-2 Win

Jay Hook Registers Fifth Triumph for Hard Hitting N. Y.

NEW YORK (AP)—Helped by a six-run explosion in the third inning, during which Richie Ashburn hit the first of his two home runs Saturday, the New York Mets crushed the Houston Colts right field for his fourth home 13-2 to take a 40-1 edge in the five-game series. The Mets amassed 16 hits off the four Colt pitchers to make it fourth, an inside-the-park job to the right field bullpen. It was his fifth victory against eight defeats. U. S. Economists Flare Up Over Possibility of Recession Next Year

Government Helps Stop Strike With Airlines; Stocks Decline

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The question of the nation's economic outlook—Will there be a recession in 1963?—flared during the week. Strikes and threats of strikes were jarring notes. And the stock market continued to pursue its downward course.

Oregon Places 8 on NCAA Track Squad

Runnerup Villanova Has Five Men on 1962 All-Star Team

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—Champion Oregon and runnerup Villanova dominate the 1962 all-star team of the NCAA Track and Field Rules Committee. Oregon earned eight places, Villanova five. Southern California, San Jose State and Southern Illinois placed three men each. The team is composed of the first three finishers in each event at last weekend's championship meet in Eugene, with these exceptions: Glenn Passy of Utah State, who did not compete at Eugene, was added to the discus list; the four men who tied for the pole vault championship were all named; four also were named to the hop-step-jump team, and only two of the four who tied for second in the high jump were included.

Women's Baseball Savvy Shown at Tigers' Clinic

DETROIT (AP) — A man is "out at home" when he thinks the little woman doesn't savvy his baseball lingo. Consider the questions asked at the Detroit Tigers Women's Baseball Clinic held Friday at a downtown Detroit department store. "Is there any difference in American League and National League pitching?" "With three successful starting assignments behind him, will Hank Aguirre be kept in the Tigers' starting rotation?" "Why did it take Rocky Colavito so long to get started hitting this season?" Tiger Manager Bob Scheffing and right-hander Jim Bunning were targets for the ladies' version of the "who's on first, what's on second" game. Scheffing, whose handsomeness and crew-cut business executive's looks surprised many of the 300 ladies and young girls present, was at ease as he fielded the barrage of queries. Demonstrate Pitcher The tall, gray-haired, husky manager kept the ladies giggling with nervous laughter as he thoughtfully paused before answering and then dove in. Some of the queries were loaded ones, too.

Australia's Laver Wins London Finals

Top Wimbledon Seed Drops Fellow Aussie Emerson, 6-4, 7-5

LONDON (AP) — Red-haired Rod Laver defeated fellow Australian Roy Emerson 6-4, 7-5 in the men's final of the London Tennis Championships at Queen's Club Saturday in what could be a preview of the final at Wimbledon.

Laver, reigning champion and No. 1 seed in the Wimbledon tournament starting Monday, coolly disposed of the agile Emerson, who is the Wimbledon No. 2 seed. It was Laver's ninth victory out of 11 clashes with the sinewy Emerson since last fall.

"Rod is playing better now than when he took the Wimbledon title last year," Emerson said afterward. In another match pointing to Wimbledon, Margaret Smith of Australia and Justina Bricksa of St. Louis, Mo., took the women's doubles title by defeating Darlene Hard of Long Beach, Calif., and Maria Bueno of Brazil 6-3, 6-2.

Principal Rivals Miss Smith, favorite for the Wimbledon women's crown, never dropped her service and hardly put a foot wrong against the two girls who are likely to be her two principle rivals this week. Miss Hard is seeded No. 2 at Wimbledon and Miss Bueno, champion in 1959 and 1960, is rated No. 3.

The powerful Australian girl appeared to play at half-strength with a lot in reserve. The fans already marked her out as the likely new Wimbledon champion. By comparison Miss Bueno looked shaky and earned frowns of disapproval from Miss Hard. Even so, it was the blonde American Wightman Cup star who dropped her service twice in the second set—and that sealed their defeat.

Rita Bentley, 30, a field hockey international star, gained her first major tournament success by defeating Mrs. Lorna Cawthorn 7-5, 7-5 in an All-British Women's singles final. Bob Hewitt and Fred Stolle of Australia won the men's doubles title, defeating Bob Howe of Australia and Ramanathan Krishnan of India, 6-4, 6-2.

Tennis Tourney Set

MENASHA — The city singles tennis tournament for boys under 14 will be staged at 9 a.m. Monday at the Smith Park courts. Boys who were under 14 last Jan. 1 are eligible.

Goldberg Disagrees

His boss, Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg, quickly disagreed, saying, "The economic facts do not bear out such an assumption" a recession in 1963. Seeking to clarify his remarks, Clague said he was not predicting a recession next year. "Rather," he said, "I was explaining that historic trends, which show a downturn in the economy every 3 to 3 1/2 years, when projected, indicate an economic peak might be reached sometime in 1963 which might be followed by a business downturn."

"It does not follow, of course, that there will be a recession, and the basic economic situation at the present time shows no sign of such a downturn." "Boom Through 1962" Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges told a conference of business leaders in Atlanta that, "Business will finish out 1962 still on the road to expansion and may do better than most economists now suspect."

He conceded, "The business advance so far this year has admittedly been slower than expected." The government stepped into threatened strikes against major airlines.

President Kennedy appointed a fact-finding board for the dispute between the Transport Workers Union and American Airlines over wages and job security. The action put off a walkout for at least 60 days.

Kennedy Victory After marathon negotiations, Secretary of Labor Goldberg announced settlement of the flight engineers' strike threat against Trans World Airlines. It also was expected to lift a threat of a walkout against Pan American World Airways and Eastern Air Lines.

The settlement was considered a victory for President Kennedy, who had called the threatened strike a menace to the national economy. The Federal Mediation Service entered the strike of the United Auto Workers Union against Ford Motor Co.'s stamping plant near Cleveland over production standards.

Without any pushes from adverse business developments, the stock market kept going downhill. Market experts were at a loss to predict when the decline would stop but some spoke of a summer rally. Averages by which the market is measured fell to new lows for the year.

'Good Old Days' Of Big Luxury Cars Returning

Longer, Lower, Flashier Models Due; Compact Look Abandoned

BY BEN PHLEGAR
DETROIT (AP) — The 1963 model cars will be longer, lower, flashier and more powerful—which makes next year sound like the "good old days" of the mid-30s.

Advance reports strongly indicate the recent Detroit enthusiasm to "think small" is a thing of the past. The auto companies apparently believe the compact honeymoon is over, economy is passe and the word for the coming year is "MORE."

There will be more models, more luxury and more horses under the hood. Still to be decided are the price tags. They, too, could read "MORE."

Every current indication is that 1963 will be a styling year. Major mechanical changes, outside of expected: a full lineup for the some new engines, will be rare. Ford Fairlane and Mercury Mustang are the first of the 1963 models—theor, including convertibles next Studebaker Avanti—already has spring, two and four-door hardtop introduced and it typifies the snowballing trend to expensive, personal luxury automobiles.

Long overdue convertibles for Falcon, Valiant and probably for Comet and Lancer. With the soft-top, and the Alpine contests at Naeba Skiing Resort, Niigata Prefecture, 200 miles north of here, is optional. Bucket seats, padded series.

New Products

Not Best Way

To Succeed

Copy Cats of Competitors Most Affluent

BY GEORGE LAZARUS
Chicago Daily News Service

CINCINNATI — Necessity may be the mother of invention but not for most of America's merchandising giants.

The best corporate routes to success, according to an executive Michael J. O'Connor, often are acquisition of new products and improvement of existing ones.

Invention offers the innovator no guarantee of success even though the product category may become highly popular with the consumer said O'Connor, a Chicagoan who's vice president and director of merchandising, Foote, Cane & Belding.

Product invention has some serious limitations—"Chances are, if it is successful, it will be copied quickly," O'Connor told the national conference of the American Marketing Association.

And More Powerful Before World War II, invention seemed to bring greater and longer-lasting rewards than it does today because —Advertising was much less powerful in its ability to quickly reach great concentrations of people.

—Competition was less able and less likely to copy a new product.

—Private label activities of the retailer were practically nil in most categories.

Before the 1940s, such brands as Coca Cola, Kellogg's Corn Flakes and Campbell's Soup got firmly entrenched, said O'Connor.

But today things are different, he added in the food and packaged goods business.

New ideas unprotected by law, are quickly copied, O'Connor said, citing examples.

—The original heavy duty detergent was copied in less than a year and overpowered almost immediately.

—The first cake mix now sells less than 3 per cent of the market.

—The first liquid detergent (Procter & Gamble's Joy) for washing dishes now ranks third in sales nationally with heavy competition from 10 other national brands and scores of private labels.

—Alluding to product improvement O'Connor noted that P&G's Mr. Clean came on the market 4 1/2 years ago and in two years took over the leadership from Lestoil (the innovator).

Kleenex and Scott, two general purpose brands of tissues, dominated that business for years until P&G's Puffs recently came on to gain a good share of the market.

Fox Cities Artists Represented at Show

FOND DU LAC — Four Fox Cities area artists and craftsmen will be represented next Saturday and Sunday when the second Annual Arts and Crafts Festival is held under the sponsorship of St. Paul's Cathedral at the parish house here.

They are Mrs. O. Reynold Steinert, Allen Loehndorf and Harvey C. Jorgensen, all of Menasha, and Catherine Heintz, Oshkosh.

Mrs. Steinert's work has won prizes at the Neville Museum Show, Green Bay, and the Oshkosh Museum Show. She has given one-man shows at Lawrence College, Appleton, and the Athearn Hotel, Oshkosh.

Jorgensen will give a demonstration of wood-carving Saturday afternoon. He plans to show wood sculpture, both round and relief; several pieces of aluminum sculpture, three mosaics and woodcuts.

On loan at the exhibit will be his bas relief entitled "Pieta," now owned by the First Congregational Church of Menasha.

Catherine Heintz will again demonstrate water color technique, and will show several of her paintings.

Fond du Lac will be represented by the oil paintings of Richard Trier, who has exhibited at the Paine Art Center, the Athearn Hotel and the State Fair, Milwaukee.

Marvels of God And Men Shown On U. S. Stamps

Issues Present Something for All Citizens to Enjoy

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

The big talk this summer is Century 21 — the Seattle World's Fair.

And the fair means one thing to most people — the Space Needle as depicted on the Seattle Fair commemorative recently issued. Thousands have seen it in all its reality; many thousands more are looking forward to getting to the top of this lofty edifice for a view that is unmistakably breathtaking.

Yet just about 60 miles south and east of Seattle there is a grander eye-filler. It's been there a long time and will be for a very long time to come. It's not man-made; it's God's handiwork. It's Mount Rainier National Park. Stamps of 1935, Mt. Rainier towers 14,400 feet above sea level in the midst of the beauty that is Mount Rainier National Park.

Then, while going west, there's an even more popular park in the northwest corner of Wyoming — Yellowstone. For years, its most famous sight has been the geyser, Old Faithful (bottom center stamp). Since the tragic earthquake of several seasons ago, Old Faithful has not been perhaps quite so regular in its eruptions.

But even the space age fails to obscure such marvels over which man has no control. So it is also with the Grand Canyon (bottom left stamp) which has even inspired some wonderful music.

For those who travel east as far as New York City, there's always the stirring Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor (top left stamp), or the Washington monument in Washington, D. C. Other man-made triumphs of imposing stature are the Golden Gate bridge (top right stamp), or the Mackinac bridge in Upper Michigan, or Mt. Rushmore with the magnificent sculptured heads of Washington, Jefferson, T. Roosevelt and Lincoln in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

All on stamps, and many more all waiting to thrill the traveling vacationer — whether going north, south, east or west. The wonderful thing about it all is that stay-at-homes don't have to be satisfied with seeing impressive views on just stamps. Just a few miles from our front doors, in any direction, there are wonderful things to see. And summertime is a wonderful time to see them.

Vacation Time Means travel to most Americans. Many will reach their destinations by air and rail. But millions of others will follow the open highway to the places they wish to see. Pictured are but a few of the many objects of special interest in the United States as shown on our postage stamps.

Marc Connelly 'Evening' Set At Roadstead

'Green Pastures' Author to Speak At 8 p.m., July 15

FISH CREEK—Marc Connelly, author of "The Green Pastures," will appear in Door county on July 15.

The program, "An Evening with Marc Connelly," will be at 8 p. m. on that date at Roadstead, the estate-turned-conference-center just south of Fish Creek.

Enrollment in the program of orientation, discussion and refreshments will be limited to 100 persons, according to the University of Wisconsin Extension Division which is sponsoring the program in cooperation with the Roadstead Foundation.

Connelly got his literary start as a reporter and columnist for the Pittsburg Sun. He first obtained success in the theater by learning, in 1921, with George S. Kaufman, some of the plays of those days. Connelly authored with "Dulcy," "To The Ladies," and "Merton of the Movies."

But it was in 1930 that he achieved his greatest fame when he wrote "Green Pastures." It won the Pulitzer prize for drama in that year.

Connelly has been on the faculty of Yale University's graduate school of fine arts, was on the executive committee of the U. S. commission to UNESCO and was man-made; it's God's handiwork. It's Mount Rainier National Park. Stamps of 1935, Mt. Rainier towers 14,400 feet above sea level in the midst of the beauty that is Mount Rainier National Park.

Baptist Assembly Scene Of Two Cultural Events

GREEN LAKE — Two widely-attended conferences for writers, editors and artists will be held at the American Baptist Assembly here during the summer months.

They are the Fifteenth Annual Christian Writers and Editors' Conference, scheduled for July 7 to 14, and the Church and the Arts Conference, Aug. 25-Sept. 1.

The writers' meeting, of which Ben Browne is director, is open to all faiths and sponsored by the American Baptist Board of Education and Publication; the National Religious Publicity Council; the Associated Church Press; and the International Christian Writers' Seminar.

Among the lecturers and workshop leaders are George Markarian, author of Song of America; Edwin H. Maynard, president of the Associated Church Press, and "Pieta" Is the Title of this bas relief by Harvey C. Jorgensen. Presently owned by the First Congregational Church, Menasha, it will be on exhibit at the second annual arts and crafts festival, sponsored by St. Paul's Cathedral, Fond du Lac, next Saturday and Sunday.

Friends of Museum Name Chairmen of Committees

NEENAH — Chairmen and committee members for the forthcoming year were announced today by William Hug, President of the Friends of the Bergstrom Art Center.

The committee heads and members met last week with officers of the group at the John Nelson Bergstrom Art Center and E. Columbian Ave., Neenah, and Museum, 165 N. Park Ave.

Present at the meeting, in addition to Hug, were Mrs. Eugene Olson, Appleton, vice-president; Mrs. Henry Bailey, Appleton, secretary, and Don Hill, treasurer. Mrs. Gordon Hardie and Mrs. Fred Leech, both of Neenah, will continue to serve as co-chairmen of activities and children's and women's art classes, Hug said.

Serving on the finance committee are Don Hill, chairman, and Mrs. Hugh R. Moore, Neenah. Mrs. John H. Witterding, Menasha, chairman, and Mrs. Thomas M. Dietrich, Appleton, are on the membership committee.

Mrs. Charles Buchanan, Appleton, chairman of the program committee, will be assisted by Thomas M. Dietrich, Mr. and Mrs. David Mayer III, Appleton, and Mrs. Robert St. Pierre, Menasha. James Auer, Menasha, continues as publicity chairman. Mrs. Harry Hoeffel, Appleton, Elizabeth Yates, author of "Pebble in a Pool," life story of Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

Further information on the conference may be gained by writing to Dr. Ben Browne, American Baptist Headquarters, Valley Forge, Pa.

"Treasure in Earthen Vessels" is the theme of the conference on Church and the Arts.

Lecturing on the popular arts are Harvey G. Cox and Richard M. Jones. Workshops in music will be conducted by Russell A. Hammar and John T. Burke. W. Currier will discuss painting and sculpture, and Mrs. Mildred Hahn Entertine, drama.

A festival of the arts is planned for the evenings. Further information may be obtained by writing to the American Baptist Assembly, Green Lake.

Circus Buff Paints Clowns

Lawless Is Also Conjurer

NEENAH — Pencil sketches made in the "backyard" of the Greatest Show on Earth provide colorful subject matter for the brush of Tom Lawless, Lakeshore Drive, whose oil painting, "Clown Emmett Kelly," is currently on display at Alex's, S. Oneida St., Appleton.

A long-time circus buff, Lawless is also represented by "Blue Clown," a study in blue and black, at the Heid Music Co., Appleton.

"I find sketching around circuses fascinating because there's so much to choose from," Lawless declares. "Clowns or any circus folk are most helpful when they see you want to sketch them."

Bringing "Clown Emmett Kelly" to a point where it satisfied him took Lawless nearly five years. During that time, he also completed a number of other paintings and sketches, including two a view of Lawrence College's Old Main Hall by moonlight and the lighthouse at Two Rivers — currently on display with the clown portraits.

A commercial artist at Marathon, a Division of American Can Co., Lawless prefers to work from a sketch, but will take a photograph for reference purposes if he does not have time to make a drawing.

He is a member of the Circus Fans Association of America, and plans to make sketches "like mad" next weekend as the association has its 31st annual convention at Baraboo, site of the Circus World Museum.

Despite the universal appeal of his clown paintings, Lawless does not limit himself to circus subjects and scenes. He has a particular fondness for sketching and painting the New England charm of Martha's Vineyard, where he and his wife have made four trips.

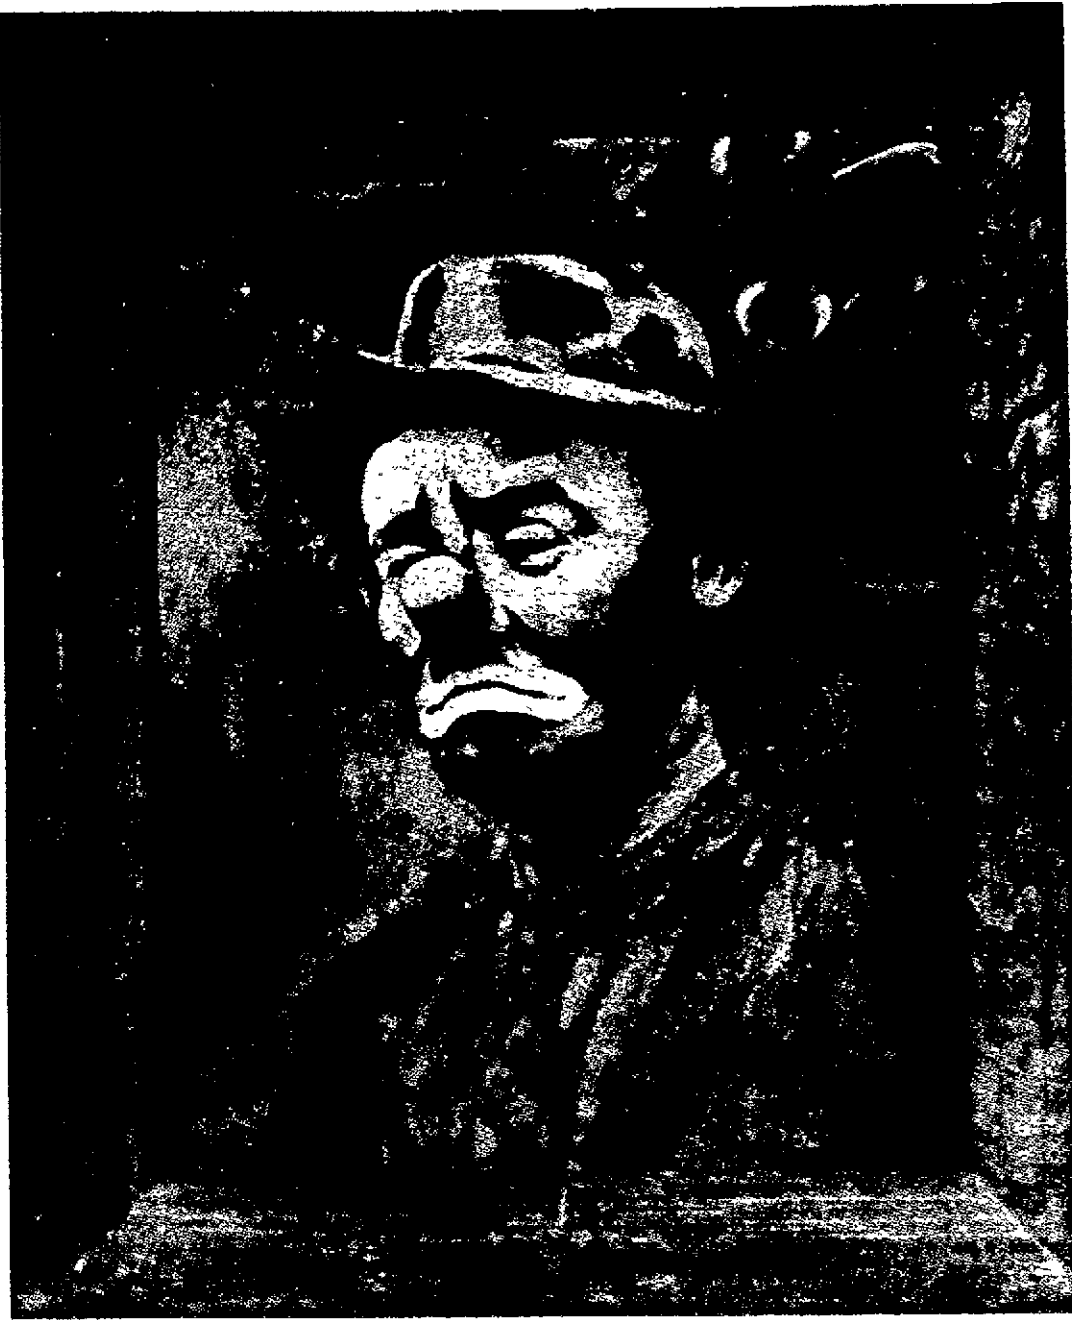

Almost as compelling as Lawless' love of circuses is his fascination with the art of conjuring. An accomplished amateur magician, he has illustrated many articles in Genii, the Conjuror's Magazine, as well as two books, "Nothing Up His Sleeve" and "Diary of a Magician's Wife," both by Geraldine Larsen-Baker, of Los Angeles.

He has also illustrated catalogs issued by a number of nationally-known magic companies.

A native of Freeport, Ill., Lawless was graduated from Notre Dame University, where he majored in art. Prior to joining Marathon in 1952, he was employed as a package designer by W. T. Rawleigh Co., Freeport.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawless are particularly proud of the fact that their interest in art is shared by their three daughters, Patricia, Anne, a stewardess with United Airlines; Mary Paulette, recently elected "Miss Foreign Service" at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.; and Ellen Macy, who will enter the eighth grade at St. Margaret Mary School at Neenah this fall.

Lawless is a member of the board of directors of the Appleton Gallery of Arts.

"Clown Emmett Kelly," an oil painting by Tom Lawless, Neenah, expresses this artist's enthusiasm for circus life. A long-time member of the Circus Fans Association of America, he is also a director of the Appleton Gallery of Arts.

'Let's Go to West Point'

Book for Young People Written By Appleton-Born Author-Editor

"Let's Go to West Point," a book for young people by Lee David Hamilton, Appleton-born author and editor, was published this week by G. P. Putnam's Sons, Inc., New York.

Now living in New York City, Hamilton is science editor of junior Scholastic Magazine. His articles have appeared in a number of national magazines, including Engineering News, Science Digest, Medical World and Scholastic Teacher.

Forthcoming articles will appear in the American City, Architectural Forum and Field and Stream, among other nationally known magazines.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hamilton, 1120 E. Nevada St., Hamilton attended the public schools here and was graduated from Appleton High School in 1950. He received his B.S. degree at the University of Wisconsin in 1954, and his M.S. degree at Boston University, Boston, Mass. Hamilton has traveled widely throughout Europe and North and South America. He recently returned from a tour of Arctic Research Installations on the Greenland ice-cap.

In the course of his tours of the nation's military research centers, he has interviewed the astronauts of the Project Mercury team, as well as Major Robert White, of the X-15.

He is a member of the National Advisory Council of the United States Civil War Centennial Commission at Washington, D. C., where he is active in developing national programs concerning Civil War materials for young people.

Two more of Hamilton's books for young people will soon be published. They are "Let's Go to a Dam" and "Camp Century: Secret City of the Arctic Snows."

Amateur Gardener Can Make His Own Type of Flower, New Book Says

Chicago Daily News Service

Can a rank amateur raise a new rose, a new gladiolus, daffodil, sweet pea or what have you? The answer of D. Gourelay Thomas, a British writer, is a firm "Yes" in a delightful little book, "Simple, Practical Hybridizing for Beginners" (St. Martin's Press, Inc., 175 Fifth Ave., New York $3.95).

A hybridist's work or hobby, the author says, is one of the most spiritually rewarding jobs any man (or woman) can find.

Newsmen Tell Invasion Story

Cuban Debacle Is Subject of Noteworthy Book

The Cuban Invasion: The Chronicle of Disaster. By Ted Sauts and Kurt E. Meyer. Praeger, $3.75. Ballantine, Paperback, 30 cents.

It has been one year (on April 17) since this incredibly confused misadventure in U. S. hemisphere policy. Appropriately, on the anniversary appears this documented chronicle of the awesome series of blunders which culminated in the ill-starred invasion of Cuba at the Bay of Pigs.

By this account, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) emerged from the fiasco with a weirdly comic opera look. To the authors, the CIA agents—"our men in Miami" at the time of the invasion attempt—"were tripping over each other like hapless extras in a movie farce."

Sad Recital

Sauts, a veteran of Latin American service for the New York Times, and Meyer, of the Washington Post, piece together a melancholy recital of events leading up to the tragedy.

Most of the story of the Bay of Pigs is well known by now to the U. S. public. But, put together in a single, readable package, the story presents a frightening picture of the persistent ignorance in Washington of what makes Latin Americans tick.

The book presents a picture of CIA agents, in a dramatic contrast with their European cloak-and-dagger counterparts, apparently concerned with public relations and, as the authors say, "almost as conscious about projecting a favorable 'image' of themselves as the United States Information Agency."

Handles JFK

The authors are fairly gentle, however, with the Kennedy administration. Circumstances, they say, were not equipped to make the write, "conspired to make a military and political decisions young administration, staffed with megabright intellectuals, the execution is drawn: that 'the agency's error of an astonishingly inept scheme that on its merits might never have been initiated.' President Kennedy, they write, "seriously underestimated his adversary" Fidel Castro. But they add:

Hawaiian Post To WHA Official

MADISON — Robert Reed, Special Projects Director for WHA-TV, has accepted a summer appointment at the University of Hawaii, it was announced today by H. B. McCarty, Director of the University of Wisconsin television station.

Reed, who joined the staff of WHA-TV in August, 1959, will serve as the Assistant Director in charge of educational television at the newly created Communications Center at the University of Hawaii.

that the new President by that time was pretty much committed. Basically, the authors say, the invasion fiasco was the result of military and political miscalculations which in turn rested on intelligence miscalculations and "the burden of the institutional blame falls most heavily on the agency (CIA) that conceived and directed the invasion itself."

The agency, they add, simply was not equipped to make the write, "conspired to make a military and political decisions young administration, staffed with megabright intellectuals, the execution is drawn: that 'the agency's error of an astonishingly inept scheme that on its merits might never have been initiated.' President Kennedy, they write, "seriously underestimated his adversary" Fidel Castro. But they add:

Barbara Casper--1962 Miss Appleton

Marquette Student to Read 'Dandelion Wine' In Competition for Miss Wisconsin Title

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Barbara Casper is a sparkly kind of girl. Not flashy diamond sparkle, but polished pearl and iridescent opal shine. Barbara's kind of flash is the one that brightens her brown eyes and lights her face when she smiles.

Miss Casper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Casper, 535 E. Lincoln St., has what she hopes will be a date with a title next weekend at Kenosha. Crowned 'Miss Appleton' at the Appleton Jaycette Pageant May 5, Barbara won the right to compete with other Wisconsin finalists for the Miss Wisconsin title.

Since she won the Appleton award, Miss Casper has had a busy few weeks. She has completed her freshman year at Marquette University, Milwaukee, opened the 1962 Foxes baseball season, appeared with Elizabeth Cole, last year's Miss Appleton, at the Jaycee Honors dinner and led a snake line at the state Jaycee Convention in Milwaukee. The line was part of the state campaign for offices, and her candidate won. Barbara hopes there's something prophetic in that.

The new Miss Appleton is studying drama and speech education. What she'd like to be, she says modestly, is an actress, but, being the practical sort, she's thinking of bread and butter. Actresses don't always eat.

The wish to teach and the desire to act go back a long way in Barbara's young life. The 20-year-old decided early that teaching was a worthwhile goal. Then, in second grade, she was placed behind a row of boys in a Christmas pageant and decided that would never happen again. She would be too good to be hidden.

Apple Tree Played Its Part

Barbara's acting talent — and it's a substantial one — was given an opportunity to develop when she was a student at Appleton High School. She credits Jack Burroughs and Miss Ruth McKennan with getting her started. Another incident, one that started as a tragedy, also played a part in directing Barbara's interest.

Although Miss Casper has just finished her first year at Marquette, it is almost two years since she first registered there.

In September of 1960 Barbara was attending Freshmen Welcome Week at the University. A few days after arriving Barbara went along with other freshmen for a picnic at Maryhill, outside of Milwaukee.

"The kids piled out of the buses and ran up the tallest hill", she recalls. Some of them spotted a volleyball court and began a game. The thing that attracted me was an apple tree.

"I've always loved to climb trees. I had no trouble getting up, and I was swinging down, a la Tarzan, when I fell."

Barbara was in St. Joseph Hospital for two weeks with a fractured spine. The force of the fall paralyzed her internally for 48 hours. She came home wearing the back brace she would use for four months.

In December she went to work as a messenger at the First National Bank; then was given a job operating an IBM machine; and was soon put in charge of transit.

Attic Theatre was a natural place for Barbara to seek expression for

Miss Barbara Casper

Miss Appleton's eight-year-old sister, Mary, above right, is a willing listener as Barbara reads one of her favorite books. Miss Casper says that, as one of a large family, she had to learn to have interesting things to say or no one would listen. She was 10 the first time she realized 'everyone was listening and it was wonderful'.

In addition to appearing in 'Picnic', an Attic Theatre production, Miss Casper will work in the box office. Barbara won the Sigma Sigma Epsilon trophy at Marquette University this spring for her reading of 'Dandelion Wine'. The contest was open to all students in the English department.

Pos-Crescent Photos

One of Miss Appleton's duties is appearing in parades such as the one held on Flag Day. Above, Miss Casper throws a kiss to cheering children. She says she is looking forward to the Jaycee Fourth of July Civic celebration when she can enjoy all the rides and cotton candy she wants.

Vinyl Flooring Saves Work

Vinyl tile is a durable flooring with a high resistance to stains and wear. To retain the strikingly clear colors and patterns which make vinyl so popular, damp-mop it daily or as often as the traffic indicates.

Also wash it thoroughly once a week, using a mop wrung out of thick soap or detergent suds — followed by rinsing with a mop wrung out of clear water.

Appleton Miss Vies For Title

her dramatic bent. Three weeks after shedding her back brace she started rehearsals as a dancer in "Peer Gynt."

This was her first experience with Attic Theatre. Barbara says she was so excited about it she would have broken her back all over again to be in the play. She believes the dancing actually strengthened her back, although she smiles ruefully about the outcome of the dancing performance itself. She says she will be eternally grateful to the reviewer who only called the dancing "sterile," he could have said much more.

The next summer Mrs. Theodore Cloak encouraged Barbara to try out and she was rewarded with the lead in "The Petrified Forest." She was head of sound for "Once More with Feeling" and by this time was in love with the theater.

looks the same, but the feeling is that there must be a different aura about someone with a title. Mr. Casper laughingly threatens to have Barbara sleep in the backyard tent if she doesn't make it at Kenosha.

Honors have been many in the Casper family. Mr. Casper says they have been fortunate. But there surely is more than luck involved. The oldest daughter, Lynn, won many honors at Lawrence College, and daughter Helen was both Mortar Board president and editor of the Lawrentian. Brother Lee, employed at Appleton Coated Paper Co., served with the Army in Korea. David, 10, and Mary attend Sacred Heart Catholic School. David is a Little League, and Barbara is often called upon for a fast game of catch in the back yard.

Mr. Casper says that he and his wife have encouraged their children to be individuals. They support them all the way. If Barbara wants an acting career, then they want it for her. He believes that people should do the kind of work they like, as work is one of life's big enjoyments. The family code has led the youngsters not to travel with the pack, but to satisfy them as individuals. The Casper children have been encouraged to read, read, and read some more.

Barbara says that her mother has literally "listened for years" as she read aloud.

Has 'Picnic' Role

Barbara will have a busy summer. As 'Miss Appleton' she will reign over the Jaycee Fourth of July celebration where "I can have all the rides I want and eat all the cotton candy there is. She appeared on television Saturday for Clarence Mitchell of Appleton and will be queen of the Soap Box Derby. In addition to this she will work at the Attic Theater box office and will appear as 'Madge' in "Picnic."

The district will become a part of the Appleton school system July 1. The present District Four, which includes Woodlawn, Columbia and Sunny Slope Schools, The first district was formed

Grand Chute School Districts Plan Party

Graduates, friends and former teachers of School Districts Four, Five and Six of the Town of Grand Chute have been invited to attend a reunion and farewell party at 7:30 p.m. Saturday evening at the Grand Chute Town Hall. Special guests will be Mayor Clarence Mitchell of Appleton, members of the Appleton School Board and past and present members of the district school boards.

Invitations have been sent to 300 who have been associated with the school. The committee has also invited everyone who attended the schools to attend the party, at which school records and keys will be presented to Appleton School representatives.

Mrs. Stanley Gross is reunion committee chairman.

Will Repeat Dandelion

Last fall Miss Casper again went to Marquette for her freshman year. She stayed away from that particular apple tree, and, in addition to her freshman courses, studied "Basic Principles of Acting" with the Rev. John Walsh, S.J. On Sundays she took lessons in pantomime and modern, jazz and ballet dancing. She also sang first tenor in the Sacred Music Choir.

Miss Ruth Beyer Tell Troth of Ruth Beyer, D. C. Bergman

The engagement of Miss Ruth Ann Beyer and Donald Curtis Bergman has been announced. Miss Beyer is the daughter of Mrs. Alfred E. Beyer, 2324 S. Carpenter St., and the late Mr. Beyer. Mr. Bergman's parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. Harold Bergman, Wauwatosa.

The bride-elect was graduated from Appleton High School and is employed as a dental technician by Dr. Richard A. Beirl. Her fiancé was graduated from Lawrence College where he was affiliated with Delta Nu chapter of Delta Tau Delta fraternity. He has received his commission in the Air Force and will be stationed at Luke Air Force Base, Arizona.

The couple plans a winter wedding. Miss Beyer insists that she still

Neenah Women Illustrates VNA Work With Miniature Rooms

BY MARION DREW
NEENAH — Imagination, patience and loving care were used lavishly on the two miniature rooms showing "A Day with a Visiting Nurse," made by Mrs. William M. Wright, Bayview Road. Made in 1946, the rooms have been lent to Visiting Nurse Associations all over the state, to be used in educational projects and fund raising drives.

Mrs. Wright recently "redecorated" the rooms and changed the nurses uniforms to copies of the summer attire worn today. The bedside nursing scene is a scaled model of a bedroom, depicting a mother in bed, a baby in a bassinet, and the visiting nurse working with a complete set-up for bedside care. Each tiny object is a perfect facsimile of the real article.

A pink princess telephone is on the bedside table with a box of tissue that really pops up. Lampshades are made of small paper cups. The new mother is reading a miniature Twin City News Record. Reproduced newspapers are used for covering the nurse's work table and to make the refuse bag. Tiny magazines are on the table.

Nursery equipment jars are hand-painted spoons; the drinking glass is half a capsule, as is the Lysol bottle with a piece of eraser for the cork. The thermometer used by the nurse is a tiny nail, painted in exact reproduction. Scales have moving weights.

Mrs. Wright made the furniture of cigar and cheese boxes. The bassinet was handwoven and is placed on a folding stand of balswood. Furniture is all made to scale. Buttons on the nurses' uniforms are infinitesimal beads. Even the pulls on the shades in the bedroom are carefully made of circles cut off hooks and eyes.

The dolls, faces are made of white pine. Separate strands of yarn were sewn into pieces of mesh with a bead needle to make the hair. Curls were made by winding the dampened yarn

Your Problems

Pack Rat Husband Incurable, But Children Can Be Stopped

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN: Please tell that one was a jerk, that one was a poor woman who is married to a "pack-rat" to keep cheerful — because she isn't going to win anyway.

My pack-rat is over 50 years old. He has saved every one of his report cards, every dance program from his DeMolay days, and every letter and envelope ever addressed to him.

Not only that, but he has two old cars parked in my flower bed and a disreputable, beat-up motorcycle behind the shrubbery. And if you think this is bad, you should see what his sister keeps!

These people who can't bear to part with anything are suffering from an incurable, inherited illness. Their mother or father had the sickness and they caught it. I'm trying to train my children to take after me in this respect, instead of their father. Every week I insist they go through their closets and drawers and throw out all the junk. I admit my husband is a lost cause but I'm doing what I can to "spike the curse in the next generation."

— Snowed Under
DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter, Vera, is 16. She's good-looking, has a lively personality and is an honor student.

Most of the girls in her crowd have been dating since they were 14. My husband promised Vera she could date at 15 if she remained on the honor roll (and she did). Well, her 15th birthday came and went and her father announced that after looking over the crop of young men in our town he had changed his mind. This I leave their house even if I have only had a jelly sandwich.

My parents don't like Judy now because they say she has no manners. I feel bad about this. How can I help her improve her ways without hurting her feelings? She is my very best friend even if she does have some faults. — The Girl Next Door

Dear Girl: I see no reason why you should not tell Judy exactly what you told me. You'd be doing her a big favor by teaching her something which will be useful throughout her life.

To learn the knack of feeling comfortable with the opposite sex, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright, 1962)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 12-year-old girl who needs help with a problem. My best friend is a girl named Judy. She comes to our house very often and sometimes she has supper with us and sleeps here.

Last weekend my parents thought it would be nice if I invited Judy to come along with us on a weekend trip. We drove up north and had a wonderful time. When my father dropped her off at home she just said "Goodbye" and not one word that even sounded like "Thank you" or "I had a nice time."

I always remember to say "thank you" to her parents when

Cleanliness Wins Husbands

The Viking Medieval Reader — a book published some 600 years ago — has a chapter on the "Care of a Husband." In this, a wife is urged to keep her husband in clean linen — and to have his feet washed.

If a clean shirt and a good bath have lured men home for 600 years, the formula won't fail in 1962.

Michigan Setting for Honeymoon

NEENAH — Miss Judith M. Schramm became the bride of James E. Leach at 11 a. m. Saturday. The Rev. John Hephner officiated at the single ring ceremony at St. Patrick Catholic Church, Menasha.

Parents of the bridal couple are Roy Schramm, 314 W. Forest Ave., and the late Mrs. Schramm, and Mr. and Mrs. Sherburn Leach, route 2, Menasha.

Miss Barbara Vandermoss was maid of honor. Miss Nancy Bowens and Mrs. Richard Schramm, sister-in-law of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Best man was John Kuchan. Attending groomsmen were James Wilding and Richard Schramm, brother of the bride. Edward Spice, Darrell Enke, and Donald Wilkinson shared ushering duties.

A dinner, reception, and dance was held at the VFW Hall, Appleton. The home of the couple will be at 814 Ninth St., Menasha, following a northern Michigan wedding trip.

The bride was graduated from Neenah High School and is employed by Wisconsin Tissue Mills. The bridegroom, employed by Marathon Division of American Can Co., was graduated from Menasha High School.

Slam Bid Double Needs Expert Lead

The double of a voluntary slam contract calls for an unusual lead. The theory was first propounded by Theodore Lightner, a leading player and theorist since the earliest days of contract bridge, and experts have used "Lightner" doubles of slams ever since.

Let's clear the ground before we examine the logic of the Lightner double. It applies only to a slam bid voluntarily. When both sides are in the auction, one side may take a sacrifice at the slam level. A double of this kind of slam simply warns your partner against going on and punishes the opponents for their presumption.

Another exception applies when you are playing against rich lunatics. If your opponents bid and play so badly that you can confidently expect to defeat any slam, you can afford to close your eyes and double without referring to your hand.

Normal Situation
In the normal situation, your opponents are sensible bidders and competent card players. Declarer will either make his slam or go down one, and you won't get rich doubling at random.

As a matter of fact, a random slam double is a poor gamble. If declarer is in a major suit, for example, his undoubled trick score will be 180 points. If he makes his contract doubled, he gains 230 points. If he is confident enough to redouble, his score goes up from 180 points to 360 points. You risk a loss of 580 points in the attempt to pick up 50 or 100 points by your double.

Since there is very little to gain from a routine double of a slam contract, Lightner pointed out, the double can be used to suggest a lead that will defeat the slam. You don't need the double to suggest the "expected" lead, for you are content to pass and take your profit.

Hence you don't double for a lead in the unbid suit. That's the suit your partner will tend to lead if left to his own devices.

Some experts use the slam double to call for a lead in the first suit bid by dummy. Others use it merely to call for an unusual lead — not a suit bid by the defenders, not a trump and not an unbid suit. The leader can usually work out which suit is called for. A bidding convention is not always enough to defeat the opponents. You sometimes need a bit of brainwork, too.

East didn't expect to defeat six spades if diamonds, the unbid suit, were led. He doubled for an unusual lead, but his partner failed the read the situation.
West led hearts, the first side suit bid by the dummy. This did no good at all, from the East-West point of view.
Declarer won in dummy with the king of hearts, drew two rounds of trumps and knocked out the ace of diamonds. East re- turned the king of clubs, but it was too late. South discarded a heart.

East had an answer for this. "If I had wanted a heart lead," he observed, "I would have doubled four hearts. Since I didn't want trumps or diamonds, my double surely called for a club." "That's perfectly correct," South agreed. "The score for the hand is 1,860 points. Right?"

The Inside Story Home Agent Tells About Dress Linings

BY KATHLEEN WALSH
Home Demonstration Agent

"Can I use glass jars for freezing?"
"How can I better manage the family dollar?"
"What should I look for when I buy a new sofa?"
"What color would be best for a small north room?"

These are a few of the questions that come to the county home agent's office. Because they are of interest to you shop for lining fabrics because many women we will try to answer in a regular weekly column.

If you were to drop in for a visit at some of our 4-H members' homes throughout the county about this time of the year, you would find them busily freezing strawberries, painting a bedroom, making a pillow, or in the midst of making a new wool dress. Why? Because the 4-H Dress Revue and the County Fair are just around the corner.

On the other day I dropped in on a 4-H member, who was making a wool dress. She was debating what to use for lining. This is always a concern to most women who sew. They ask, "What will wear well and what will enhance the appearance of my garment?" The inside of the garment is as important as the outside when it comes to achieving a successful costume.

Purpose of Lining
A proper lining serves several purposes. It provides a garment that will retain its shape; it protects the outer side of the garment from skin oils; it discourages wrinkling of the outer fabric; it contributes to a finished look for the interior of the garment, and it can provide warmth depending upon the type of garment and the lining.

You might have heard the terms, underlining and interlining, and wondered what the difference was. Well, a regular lining is the type used for coats and jackets (for finish) and some skirts and dresses (for finish and support). It is assembled into one unit. When both the outer fabric and the lining are completed, separately, the two are joined, wrong sides together, giving the inside a finished look. Underlining or interlining is used primarily for support in construction. It is cut by the same pattern pieces as the outer fabric. Each piece is then attached, wrong sides together, to the corresponding outer fabric piece and thereafter completed as one. When the underlining garment is completed, the seam allowances are visible from the inside.

When you go shopping for lining for your garment, keep these points in mind:

1. Have a sample of your material at hand so that you may compare color, quality and weight.
2. Matching color is practical for lining, however, a print, stripe, or contrasting color can be decorative.
3. The quality of the lining should be equal to the outer fabric so that both will wear a comparable length of time.
4. The weight of the lining, unless it is planned for warmth, should be lighter than the outer fabric. If your outer fabric is a natural fiber such as cotton, the same fiber is desirable for lining. However, in a case of a wool, usually a lining of silk, synthetic fabric, or light-weight cotton is best. The lining fabric should be durable. It should resist fading color by perspiration and it should be wrinkle resistant.

Many Fabrics Available
You will find several lining fabrics on the market. Probably the most popular fabric for lin-and see what the 4-H'ers have to demonstrate. Also, that day, members enrolled in home economics projects are content to pass and take your profit.

Hence you don't double for a lead in the unbid suit. That's the suit your partner will tend to lead if left to his own devices.

Attic Storage Has Potential Charm

Attic storage space atop an old lon rug doubles as the hardest building, with a square of roof kind of floor covering and the beyond, might always have been room's key decoration. Color everywhere echoes the scheme of a derfroot — the white piano and the music room-sitting room with its two white-rubbed cabinets. Imaginative transformation of old own private terrace — a startling transformation sparked almost equally by practical ideas and style.

White rubbed into the simplest kind of pine planking makes a handsome floor. A Caprolan ny-

From the inspiration of the rug pattern, a plain cabinet was given lattice doors. Narrow strips of wood are set into molding and the which forms the door frames, and heavier molding smartly finishes the cabinet top and base. This idea is adaptable to the blue which outlines bright-painted finishes.

Painting Your House? Heed These Pointers

The color you paint a room can ten changes the appearance of a "make or break" the furnishings. It's important to know which colors are best to use where so that you can spotlight the beautiful and hide the unattractive.

The Don'ts
DO paint a small room a light color to make it look larger.
DO use deep colors in hangar-like rooms to give more warmth and intimacy.

DO accentuate the blues, blues-greens and blue-grays in rooms with southern exposures for a cooling effect.
DO stress the warm reds, yellows, golds and oranges in rooms with northern exposures.
DO mix both warm and cool colors in each room.
DO paint your ceilings in color—it adds so much to the room. If you want to make the ceiling seem higher, paint it a much lighter color than the walls. To lower a very high ceiling, paint it a deeper color than the walls.
DO study color samples and paint chips in both daylight and artificial light. Artificial light of

DO mix both light and dark hues in each room.

The Don'ts
DON'T use colors in equal proportion in any one room.
DON'T use very bright colors on large areas. You'll detract from your furnishings.

DON'T select colors just because they are neutral and cause they're the current rage or "will go with everything." Choose the most flattering colors for the size of the room and the type of furnishings in it.
DON'T overdo patterns in a room. Too many patterns or too "busy" designs give a cluttered look, particularly in smaller rooms.

DON'T be afraid to paint the furniture you've had for years just because it's a sentimental keepsake or you think painting it will "harm" it in some way. Unless it's an antique, all your older pieces should be beautifully painted or enamelled to give them new beauty and new distinction.

DON'T use gloss paints on ceilings or walls, except in the kitchen and bath. These two rooms need surfaces which are easily scrubbed and more resistant to moisture. Flat paints are the better choice for walls and ceilings because they reflect light evenly, without glare.

DON'T forget that the color will look darker on your wall than it looks on the color chip. Color always looks "more so" on large areas than small areas.
DON'T overemphasize the warm yellows, oranges and reds in the kitchen without relieving the effect with a splash of coolness... blues, blue-greens and blue-grays.

Stock Slump Cuts Expensive Home Sales

The stock slump is cutting demand for expensive homes. Many well-heeled investors who were house-hunting have now decided to postpone building or buying homes, according to builders and real estate men.
A Dallas builder of homes costing $50,000 and up states: "My company has lost several substantial contracts because of the stock market decline. One fellow said he had a million dollars in the market and absolutely had to put off building at this time."

The L-Shape of This design provides side wall linear dimensions of 80 feet viewed from the front walk, while the house actually is only 58 feet wide.

House of the Week

Modest Ranch Plays Role of Mansion

BY JULES LOH

A covered arch portico, a flagstone entry porch and the illusion of enormous frontage give this modest house the sort of dignified grandeur sought by most 20th century suburbanites.

Because of its L-shape, the side wall linear dimensions viewed from the front walk total 80 feet in the two-car garage version of the plan. Yet the total width of the house is only 58 feet (47 feet in the

J-27 Statistics

A three bedroom ranch with two full bathrooms, living room, dining room, family room and kitchen; full basement; with either single or double garage.
House contains 1,556 square feet of living area. Single garage would add 245 square feet of overall area, or 490 square feet for double garage. Overall dimensions are 49 feet 4 inches deep by 47 feet wide (single garage) or 58 feet wide (double garage).

The plan is J-27 in the House of the Week series, designed by architect Herman H. York. In Medium Class-1.

For all its appearance of vast size, the home is well within the medium category—only 1,556 square feet of living area. The single garage would add 245 square feet of overall area, twice that for the double garage plan. Depth is 49'5".

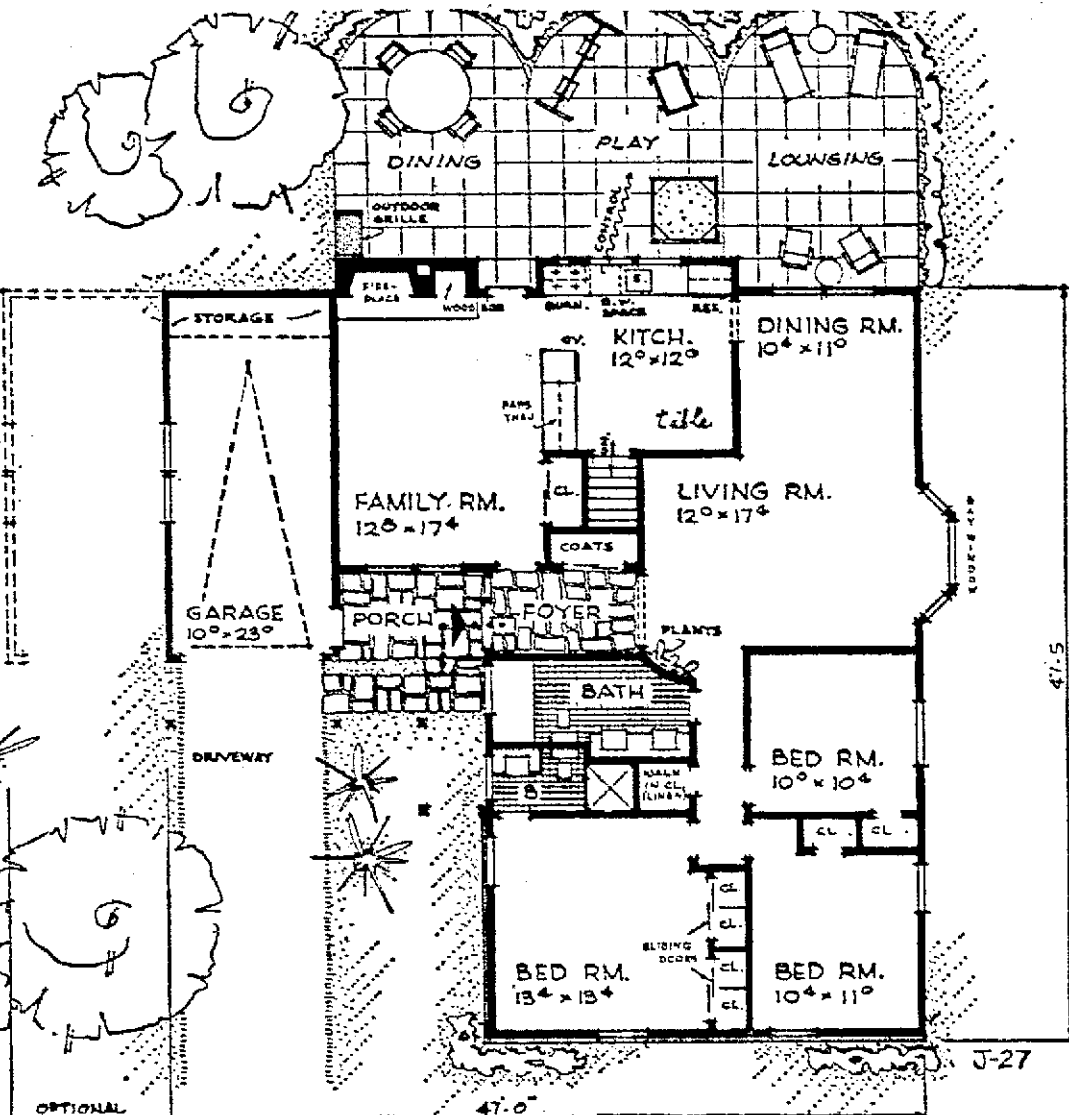

The design includes three bedroom, dining room, family room and kitchen. There is a full basement, with the stairs located in the kitchen.

The front porch flagstone extends right on inside to the foyer—a truly functional foyer, in that it provides direct access not only to the formal living room but to the family room as well.

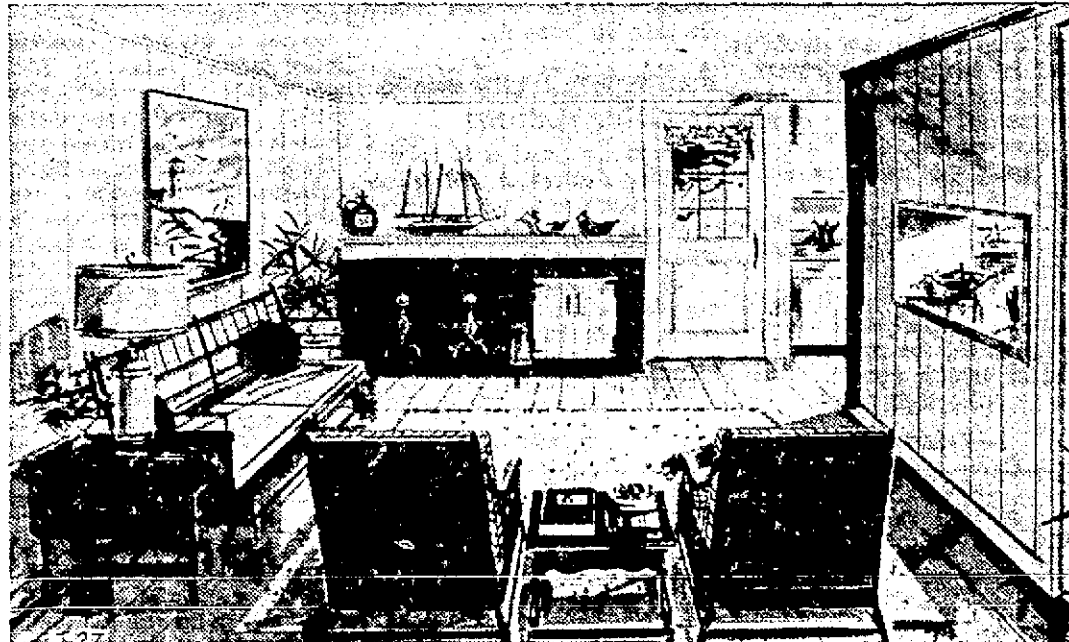

While the view from the foyer into the family room is a pleasant one, focusing on the fireplace, architect York has provided a door for those moments when the room develops that lived-in look most family rooms acquire as soon as school lets out. The room opens onto the rear terrace, and is developed in an open plan with the kitchen—the two most used areas on any house, especially at this time of year.
The shuttered and diamond-lighted windows, and the dove cote detail over the window with the arched head and windowbox, give the exterior real residential class.

Curved Wall Simple
Inside, note the curved wall surrounding the planter in the living room. Modern techniques make this a simple matter to build, and it certainly relieves the severity of right angles and straight lines found in most homes.

Such finery doesn't at all indicate the practical matters of space and economy have been ig-

Sliding Glass Doors could be substituted for double windows in the dining room if access to the rear terrace is desired. The house contains 1,556 square feet of living area in dimensions of 49 feet 5 inches deep by 48 feet wide in the double car version and 47 feet wide in the single garage plan.

This Artist's Conception shows the rear view of the family room from the front foyer. The room also has direct access to the rear terrace and opens onto the kitchen. A pass-through in the wall to the right adds convenience. At extreme right is a large closet.

nored, however. To illustrate, the bathroom plumbing is back-to-back so both rooms can be served by the same lines; and the single chimney handles all the flues for furnace, fireplace and outdoor barbecue grill.
A bay window, viewed directly from the foyer, gives the living room a good first impression. The living room—dining room ell is 28' long overall, large enough to develop interesting furniture arrangements.

Maybe, Sliding Doors
Sliding glass doors could be substituted for the double windows in the dining room, if access from the formal area of the house to the rear terrace is important. For general ventilation, however, windows are preferable and the plan as shown probably is more desirable.
Another optional change a home owner might consider would be to place a door in the main bathroom so both the tub and lavatory could be used at the same time. Though somewhat less glamorous, this would add to the bathroom's use capacity.
A final suggestion is to use pre-

Benson Proposes End Of Farm Price Curbs

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Former Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said Friday farmers need more official action that will eliminate price controls.
Benson said he thought Thursday night's House farm vote "was a victory for free men and freedom loving farmers and ranchers."
"It is a move in the right direction and will have the approval of the overwhelming majority of farmers. What we need is less government in agriculture and more freedom for farmers," Benson said he felt the 1953 act, in which farmers voted 71 per cent to eliminate controls on corn, was sound.

"What we need is similar action on other commodities, similar to the action provided on corn in the '58 act," he said.

Local Strike at Ford Nearing End

CLEVELAND (AP)—A quick end to the crippling local strike which resulted in layoffs of 77,000 Ford Motor Co. employees across the country was in sight today.
Top-level negotiators for Ford and the United Auto Workers union (UAW) reached agreement Friday night to settle all issues involved in the 17-day-old strike at the suburban Walton Hills stamping plant.
The 3,200 members of UAW Local 420 will be called upon to ratify the agreement Sunday morning. No details will be issued until then.
A joint announcement of the agreement was made by Manton M. (Mike) Cummins, Ford's director of labor relations, and Ken Bannon, chief of the union's Ford department. Both bargaining teams had been meeting with federal mediators.

State Groups To Ask for More I-Roads

SUPERIOR (AP)—Representatives of two state highway groups decided Friday to press the federal government for a bigger share of the interstate highway program.

A. J. Thelen, executive secretary of the Wisconsin County Boards Association, told delegates that only 10 states have been awarded less I system mileage than Wisconsin, given 453 miles of the total 40,482 in the nation. He said Minnesota and Iowa, with fewer vehicle registrations moving years from the age of a than Wisconsin, were allocated home-more I system mileage. Minnesota will build 898 miles of the super roads. Iowa 709 miles. Illinois 1,536 miles and Michigan 1,078 miles.

A resolution backing a bipartisan delegation to seek more mileage for the state was adopted by the Wisconsin County Highway Commissioners' and the Wisconsin County Highway Committees' men's associations.

Put New Life Into Walks

BY J. RALPH DALZELL

What can be done to relieve the severe monotony or plainness of concrete walks, particularly in garden and patio areas.

EXISTING WALKS: Any one of several special paints formulated for use on exterior concrete can be used to add interesting color to walks.

Apply the paint as directed on the can. In most cases, pastel shades, especially in the greens and reds, are more appealing and assure the best results.

NEW WALKS: As shown in pictures 1, 2, and 3, any one of innumerable designs can be formed in the surface of walks while the topping mortar is still plastic.

CURVED DESIGNS: (See picture 1): Before placing the concrete and mortar topping (see picture 5), use small stakes and string to plan the design on the ground. Then use a saw to create curved edges, as AB and CD, on one-inch thick boards. Buy or borrow a mason's crack tool (shown in picture 4).

When all is in readiness, place the concrete and topping. As the shine disappears from the topping, use a steel trowel to smooth it. Then, while the topping is still soft, place the boards on the topping and pull the crack tool along the curves. Push down on the tool so it forms the impression JKL in picture 4.

With a little practice, long before the topping will harden, the tool can be easily used to create the design shown in picture 1. Finally, use the steel trowel to make the shoulders of the impression, R smooth and sharp.

Allow the new walk to season and weather for at least a month. Then apply any color of special concrete paint to the formed design JKL in picture 4. The results will be strikingly interesting and decorative.

STRAIGHT LINE DESIGNS: (See pictures 2 and 3): These designs can be made using one-inch thick, board straight-edged and as explained for curved designs. First plan the designs, as EFGH and MNP, and then use the steel trowel and crack tool.

Because the painted surfaces, JKL in picture 4, are a little below the surface of the walk, they will be protected from traffic wear for a long time. However, repainting every three or four years is inexpensive and easy.

In freezing climates any new concrete sidewalk should be laid on a bed of gravel which is at least three inches thick (as shown in picture 6). This will avoid any possibility of cracks in the walk because water can drain harmlessly away before it freezes and causes heaving.

In some cases, due to frost action, poor concrete, or improper placing, the surfaces of sidewalks crumble and create concave and rough areas. These areas can be repaired. However, the color of the repaired areas will be different. The most satisfactory repair is to place all new walks.

When repair work is done, do not place the mortar patch as shown in picture 7. This procedure results in crumbling at X. To guard against crumbling at the edges of a patch, cut away concrete to create shoulders (shown at Y in picture 8). To make sure the patch will be even with surrounding areas after shrinkage has taken place, use thin shims and a straight-edge (shown in picture 9). Then, before the patch (composed of concrete mortar) hardens, use a steel trowel to smooth the edges, as at Z.

Q. What concrete mix should be used for sidewalks?

A. A mix composed of one sack

Humidity Necessary For Comfort

Average Person Is Relaxed in 35-50 Per Cent Humidity

When the relative humidity in the home is between 35 and 50 per cent, the chances are that the members of the family feel comfortable, although every person has his own comfort level and these percentages may vary a little either way. Relative humidity, by the way, is the amount of moisture actually in the air compared with the amount of moisture which air at that temperature is able to hold.

Thus, if air has half as much moisture as it could hold at a certain temperature, the relative humidity is 50 per cent. Change the temperature and you also change the humidity — since warm air can hold more moisture than cold air.

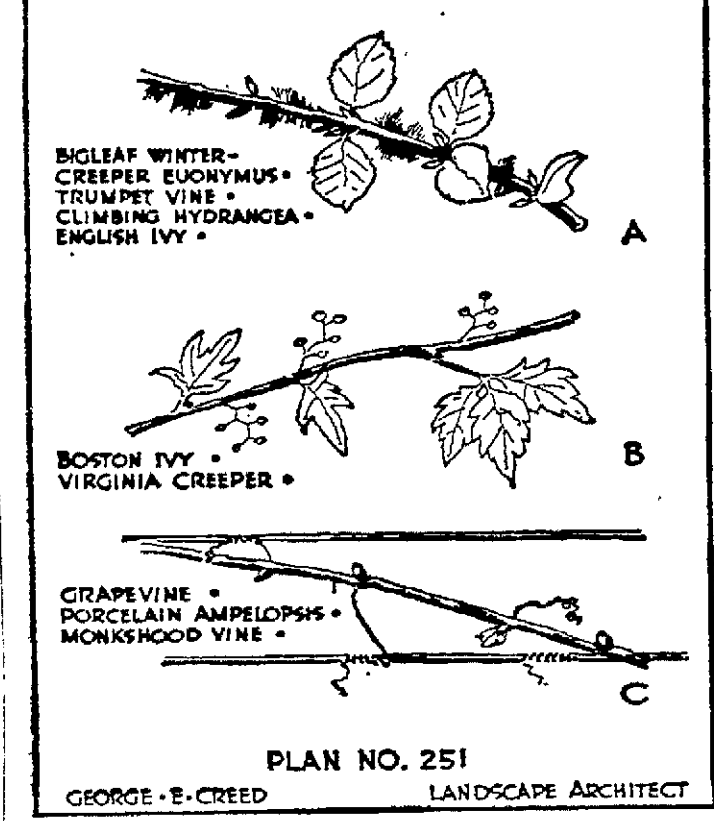

Dry air — when the relative humidity is too low — robs moisture from everything it touches. That's why wood shrinks, wall-paper cracks and veneer peels. Since our bodies are composed principally of moisture, we also are victims of too little humidity. Respiratory ailments and itchy skin conditions often are attributed to this condition. Another effect is a chilly feeling even when the temperature in the house is 75 degrees or higher. That's because, when the relative humidity is low, water evaporates quickly from the skin.

While a lack of humidity occurs outside and inside temperatures are.

In some areas as a fairly general condition, it is most prevalent during the winter in heated homes. Grandma might not have known the technical details, but she had the right idea in the old days when she placed pans of water on radiators. As the water got hot and moved into the air as steam, Grandma was adding moisture to the air and raising the relative humidity.

Bathroom Trend Shifts To Color Fixtures

Though the trend is to colored plumbing fixtures, a smart decorating touch is to use a colored seat on a white water closet bowl in the bathroom or powder room. The color chosen for the seat permits the use of matching colors in towels, bathmats, curtains, etc. to carry out a harmonious idea.

It's Your Landscape Ornamental Vines Cling, Twist in Many Fashions

BY GEORGE E. CREED

There are many oddities among ornamental vines. Some twine in a spiral that goes from left to right while others twine vice versa. There are also variations in methods of twining. For example, the bittersweet will wrap itself many times around a support in a sort of death grip, while the Kudzu vine only makes enough turns to support itself. Some of the more vigorous growing vines having a tendency to make many tight turns around a support can kill trees and other plants to which they cling.

Not all vines are twiners. Some cling to walls by tiny suction cups or rootlets. It is important to know whether a vine twines or clings. If it twines, you will have to provide some means of support. If it clings, you need not worry about support so long as it has an unbroken surface against which it can press its suction cups or rootlets.

Climbing Hydrangea, English Ivy and Euonymus cling by tiny rootlets that develop along their stems. Virginia Creeper and its varieties are supported by suction cups which develop at the ends of tendrils.

Common Vines

On a house of brick or other masonry, it is feasible to use both twining vines and those which cling by suction cups and rootlets, but it is a mistake to use the latter type on a frame house, because you will have to remove them when painting. With the twining type grown on supports, when you paint just remove the supports, lay the vine down on the ground, and then put it back in place.

Several of the more commonly-known twining vines are: Five-leaf akebia, Dutchman's pipe, Hall's Japanese Honeysuckle, Wisteria and Silver Fleece vine.

Sketch A illustrates a Bigleaf Wintercreeper euonymus vine which clings to masonry by means of tiny rootlets developed along stems. Others that cling in this fashion are listed alongside. Sketch B shows how Boston ivy develops suction cups that fasten it to a wall. Sketch C shows how the twisting tendrils of grapes cling to supports. Names of other vines that cling in this manner are given alongside the sketch.

Queries Answered

Q. Can you kill grass and weeds in a gravelled area with salt?

A. Yes. A concentrated solution of hot salt water will kill almost any type of vegetation. There are, however, chemicals that will make soil vegetation-free for longer periods of time.

Q. Is there such a tree as a weeping elm?

A. Yes. The Camperdown elm. (Copyright 1962)

Uncle Jack's GARDEN DIARY

Coddle Repairman, He's a Rare Breed

BY UNCLE JACK

Gardening, like many other hobbies, has been affected by our gadget-ridden age, which leads me to my little sermon for today.

Like other gardeners, I have been unable to resist the heavy appeal of the power mowers, trimmers, edgers, tillers, tractors, etc., and, sometimes the Beautiful Wife remonstrates a bit about my misshapen values.

What the B. W. doesn't appreciate, however, is that the busy husband of today with a taste for back-yard horticulture and vegetable gardening would be utterly unable to gratify that taste without such mechanical aids. Gardening is a time-consuming avocation and these marvelous little machines have an efficiency that stretches an hour after dinner and a couple of hours on a Saturday afternoon into days of Grandpa's more manly exertions.

But there are liabilities, as when the machines are out of order and need parts replacements or repairs.

Then comes the desperate search for the service man who will promise reasonably early work on the job, and whose face suggests that he may throttle the temptation to fleece the innocent.

Sometimes such a vital public servant is hard to locate, and especially when you've come to a new neighborhood. Ask your gardening friends and especially the old-timers. And when you find one, be sure that you retain him. Flatter him. Nod respectfully when he offers his views about baseball and international relations and what's wrong in city hall. Pay him what he asks, without a quibble, and thank him for charging such a reasonable fee. Establish as adroitly as you can the date of his wife's birthday, or better still, their marriage anniversary. Send some flowers.

For this fellow is one of the most important influences in your gardening life. Not only is the willing and handy machine repairman fairly scarce. But the honest one should be rewarded for his willingness to put aside temptation.

I know many gardeners. Some of them can draw air tight wills and deeds; some of them deal with enormous mortgages and loans. Some of them write books. Some of them hold high office. Some of them examine the insides of patients with utter confidence. But nearly all of them blanch, and stutter, and make themselves disagreeable around the house during the whole weekend, when the carburetor fails or some other mysterious component of the mower or tiller breaks.

Find your repair man, and hang onto him!

Rocket Scientist Convicted of False Report About Bomb

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dr. Olewig Von Roos, a California Tech rocket scientist, was convicted Friday of falsely reporting a bomb was in his luggage aboard a plane.

Von Roos, 37, made his "joking" remark to Miss Janice Evanson, 24, Seattle, stewardess aboard a Seattle to Los Angeles plane March 18.

U.S. Dist. Judge Michael J. Roche, who heard the case without a jury, found Von Roos guilty after the German-born scientist's attorney argued that it was "a crummy joke" but there was no intent to harm anybody.

How much does it cost to paint a house?

That depends on the house . . . $20, $60 or even $300. Any way you look at it, it costs money. That's why we (Peerless Paint, that is) feel we can save you money • We're not naive. We know people say, "Why use Peerless Paint when we can use an old, reliable, nationally-advertised brand?" • We say this is a mistake. After all, we're fairly old (since 1928). And we know we're reliable. Ask the hundreds of satisfied people who have used Peerless Paint • Okay, what's the point of all this? The point is, we can save you money when you paint your house. Why? Because our paint is the same high quality (if not better) than nationally advertised brands and costs you less per gallon. Makes sense, doesn't it? • On top of all this, we now have, for your convenience, a beautiful, new, air-conditioned store on College Avenue . . . it's called Color Unlimited and the address is 123 East College Avenue.

Drop in and let us tell you how you can save money when you paint your house!

The picture above is representative of the downtown the Project 70 committee of the Appleton Chamber of Commerce eventually wants to arrive at. This is the kind of downtown, the committee feels, that customers would like to frequent. They would feel relaxed as they shopped, the committee thinks. The picture below displays a good deal of evidence of the long past, the kind of old-time store fronts that have ruined many slow moving downtown areas in the country. The Project 70 committee wants to move now to preserve the thriving Appleton downtown area.

Give Concrete Fancy Touch by Using Color

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Characteristic of most activities, there are little tricks for dressing up concrete projects. They are, indeed, simple enough for anyone just trying concrete work for the first time to accomplish without trouble. Yet they'll add a fancy little extra touch to your work.

Suppose you decide to try your hand at putting down a sidewalk. Well, how'd you like to put in a colored inlaid border while you're at it? Very little extra work involved. All you need in addition to the concrete you're going to use for the walk itself is some concrete colors — which you can get when you buy the cement — and a collection of empty tin cans.

Any Pattern Here's the idea. You fill the tin cans with colored concrete ahead of time and let them harden. You place them along the edges before you pour the concrete for the walk, so as to make an "inlaid" pattern — just like an inlaid pattern around the border of a linoleum floor. They can all be the same color, or a variety of colors in different sizes and shapes, circles, ovals or squares. Or you can fashion your own shapes from strips of aluminum.

All the containers are lined up in position before the work on the walk itself begins, but if they're joggled a little out of position during the pouring and smoothing, you can set them straight again before the concrete sets up.

When the top edges of the cans rust away, it won't make any difference at all; they'll just seem to disappear.

The concrete coloring (powder form) can be mixed right in the concrete itself, or it can be dusted on and lightly troweled after the initial "set" of the mixture. Or you can paint the surface after the concrete has dried, using weatherproof masonry paint.

Raised Designs If you have a jig saw and some plywood, you can cut out initials, or a pattern of stylized leaves, birds, fish or whatever strikes your fancy. Then, to make a raised design, you simply press this stencil into the wet concrete hard enough so the concrete is forced up into the stencil. Keep a pointed mason's trowel handy for tucking in a little extra concrete, to be sure the pattern is completely filled.

To reverse the process, and sink a pattern or initials or designs into the concrete, you fasten ten letters, numbers or the pattern on a board (remember to use a variety of colors in put them on the board backwards) and press them into the wet concrete.

Another very simple but exceedingly attractive method of decorating concrete is to embed bits of colored stone, or sea-worn glass or designs in metal, such as wrought iron.

For example, suppose you're planning a low wall around your patio, or along one side of a garden. While the concrete's still malleable, press into it some square souvenir tiles.

One of the very handsomest outdoor tables you can imagine is one with a mosaic top. Thin strips of copper or aluminum are excellent for putting a scroll-type pattern in concrete. They're simply pressed in until the top edge is flush with the surface.

Ten Ways to Make House More Comfortable in Heat

There are at least ten ways to house make your home more comfortable during the hot weather, according to The Construction Research Bureau, national clearing house for building information, that do not require much beyond common sense to put into effect.

First, you'll feel cooler in a room that looks cool. Light colors — ice blue, blue green, pale yellow — have a definite psychological effect. Elimination of clutter, simplification of decorative scheme, has a similar effect on the housekeeper whose work is lessened. A smooth clear resilient tile floor such as vinyl asbestos or solid vinyl is quiet, more easily cared for and seems much cooler.

You'll be cooler if you keep the direct sunlight out of the Awnings and shades will protect individual windows. Keep the windows closed during the middle of the day. Open them and all doors when the cool of evening arrives.

Air Movement Simple movement of air is important as it speeds up evaporation, lowering actual body temperature. A window fan is most effectively used during the day room, when by opening the windows on the shady side just far enough, it pulls air from there through air in the house, exhausting it to the outside.

At night the same theory applies to the attic fan. Open the windows where the coolest air and pull it up through the house of hot attic air from accumulating.

Based on the same theory, a window fan can be used to excellent effect by letting it blow air into the room. This will help circulate cooled air throughout the room, much the same as drawing in evening air by means of an attic fan.

In addition to keeping out as much heat as possible, your house will be cooler if less heat is generated indoors. Iron in the cool of morning (you'll be more comfortable) when it is portable tool. Burn lower wattage bulbs and fewer of them. Exhaust night air through the house, a heat and humidity from cooking quickly from the kitchen and keep the door closed to the rest of the house to confine the heat where it can be quickly eliminated.

Excessive humidity, generated within the house by cooking, showers, clothes drying, etc. can be a big source of discomfort. Exhaust fans, strategically located to carry off the humid air before it saturates the whole house.

Attic Fan Running an attic fan to move the air through the attic during the day (shut the door to the attic) will prevent a great storehouse of hot attic air from accumulating.

Based on the same theory, a window fan can be used to excellent effect by letting it blow air into the room. This will help circulate cooled air throughout the room, much the same as drawing in evening air by means of an attic fan.

In addition to keeping out as much heat as possible, your house will be cooler if less heat is generated indoors. Iron in the cool of morning (you'll be more comfortable) when it is portable tool. Burn lower wattage bulbs and fewer of them. Exhaust

Three Out of Five Families Own Homes

From Wall Street to Walla Walla, it is generally agreed that buying a new home is the most important single investment a family ever makes. There are now about 32.5 million U. THE HANDY FAMILY By Lloyd Birmingham

BOY: THAT ENGINE PURRS LIKE A KITTEN NOW, DAD. IT REALLY NEEDED A TUNE-UP!

FATHER: YES, IT'S ABOUT TIME WE WENT OVER IT. NOW LET'S WASH UP AND GO INTO DINNER.

MOTHER: CORA, WHERE IS THE NAIL BRUSH?

DAUGHTER: IT WAS LOST ON OUR TRIP, DAD. BUT I'VE MADE ONE OUT OF AN OLD TOOTHBRUSH.

CHILD: JUNIOR'S NAIL BRUSH. CUT DOWN BRISTLES OF OLD TOOTHBRUSH TO ABOUT 1/4". THE BRISTLES WILL THEN BE STIFF ENOUGH TO CLEAN NAILS.

CHILD: JUNIOR, LOOK AT THIS FUNNY TOOTHBRUSH I FOUND IN THE BATHROOM. IT LOOKS AS IF THE MOTHS HAVE EATEN IT!

CHILD: WHY DO PEOPLE ALWAYS LAUGH AT GENIUS?

Hastens Rotting Of Canvas Items; Mars Good Finish

If you are one of those boaters who is having trouble with gray, unsightly spots on your boat's paint and its canvas and plastic equipment, come right in and join the club—you're a victim of mildew, and almost every boater finds himself at one time or another in the same boat.

Mildew won't cause permanent harm to most parts of a boat, but it will hasten the rotting of canvas products, and most of us want to be rid of it.

Almost Anywhere

Okay. Depending upon climate, you'll find it almost anywhere aboard. Under the most severe conditions, in the Deep South where humidity is a real problem, you will find it all over a boat. Farther north, it shows up in damp areas that are poorly ventilated.

You combat this growth in two ways. Make ample use of sunlight and fresh air, and of mildew-combating chemicals.

Stowing away canvas items while still damp is sure to cause mildew. When you return from a run, spread such things out in the cockpit to dry thoroughly. If items such as life jackets are still soggy, take them home to dry. Don't leave a canvas top folded down tightly in damp weather: open it up part way or all the way so air can circulate.

Easy to Remove

Storage lockers under runabout decks and cabins of outboard cruisers need all the ventilation you can get if you want to avoid the musty odor of mildew. Marine dealers also carry mildew-proofing solutions for canvas products. After being dipped in one of these solutions and drying, something like a cockpit cover will resist mildew for a season.

Some of the marine paint firms sell cabin interior paint which contain a chemical that is mildew-proof. Fungus-proofing chemicals are also available to be mixed with any hull, deck or cabin paint.

To remove mildew already on your boat, wash with a solution of household bleach, and it will come off as slick as a greased watermelon.

Bluegills Hitting Poppers, Worms in Most State Lakes

Knight Lake, One of the lakes in Waupaca's Upper Chain O'Lakes, gave up one of its "lunkers" when William Olson, 21, right, and his brother, Joseph, won a two and one-half hour battle with this 49-inch, 46 1/2-pound muskie. Joseph Olson, 17, rowed back and forth across Knight lake three times and his brother battled the fish. It was the first big muskie caught in this area this year.

Tribe May Continue to Sell Fishing Rights

State Realizes Reservation Issue Is Sensitive; Educational Program Seen

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON—The Indian residents of new Menominee County will probably continue to sell licenses for fishing and hunting rights within the county on lands held by Menominee Enterprises, Inc., that formerly comprised the holdings of the Menominee Indian reservation.

The forecast was made here in a report to the legislature by Randolph Runden, a state-employed advisor to the new county, when he was asked by legislators about an opinion of the attorney general that the Wisconsin conservation laws apply on the reservation as a result of the termination of the reservation status of the county's residents.

Sensitive Issue

Runden said the issue of hunting and fishing rights and regulations is a "very sensitive and controversial one," and said he has been assured by the conservation department that it will pursue an educational program and will avoid wholesale arrests for violations for a time.

He said he is sure that the Indian residents of the county will become accustomed to the need for buying state licenses, and complying with the state's season and bag rules for hunting and fishing, although it may take a long educational process.

But the Indians feel that they have a right to continue to control hunting and fishing on their lands by outsiders, through their own permit system.

Trespass Fee

"It will amount to a fee for trespass, for the use of their lands," he explained.

(Menominee Enterprises, Inc., as owner of the former tribal reservation lands, has already announced that it will post against trespass by non-residents of the county, as is the right of all private property owners under Wisconsin law.)

Program to Improve Ski Area Okayed

Fourth Rope Tow To Be Installed At Calumet Park

A three-fold improvement program for the 1962-63 season has been agreed upon by the Fox Valley Ski Club and the Calumet County Park Commission.

The program for the park includes increasing the size of the beginners - instruction slope to nearly double its present size, installation of a new rope tow - the fourth at the park and increasing the size of the main-advanced slope.

The new tow will serve the north side of the main slope and permit increased skier loads. New ropes will be installed on the three existing tows.

The ski club reported that the past season was the most successful ever with over 5,000 skiers using the facilities. All profits of the season will go toward the improvement projects. The ski club operates the facilities with the cooperation of the park commission.

A major portion of the planned improvements will be handled by ski club members through work bees.

Sporty, Good-to-Eat Fish Being Taken in Weedbeds; Summer Heat Drives Them to Deep Holes

BY JAY REED
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor

Bluegills, spunky and full of zip at the midway point in the spawning season, are biting better than gnats at a nudist colony in near northern Wisconsin lakes these days.

And in the best tradition laid down by bluegills over the years, the broad-beamed, brightly-colored fish are not at all fussy about the bait you offer them.

One evening at mid-week we creeled an even dozen big 'gills using a black and white popper on a spinning rig. This was on Kelly Lake in Oconto County near Suring. Another fisherman, about 100 yards away, was using worms and a bobber. He'd cast out and have a bite almost before the bait settled in the water.

Partridge Crop Lake

Reports of good catches of bluegills have been coming in from Partridge Crop Lake near Fremont. In all cases, anglers have been doing best when fishing near or right in the midst of weedbeds. The writer has always maintained that bluegills rank among the most sporty of all Wisconsin game fish. And you'll get your best fight yet if you go for them with light tackle.

Over the years we've leaned toward the fly rod as the best way to get the utmost action out of bluegill fishing but this year we turned to a whippy, 7-foot spin rod with an open face reel and cobweb-thin 4-pound test line. It's a good combination.

Seek a Popper

The 'gills, especially when they are feeding well at night, seek a popper good and solid. When hooked, he'll turn his broad side to you and swim off at right angles to the retrieve and that's when he'll put an arc in your rig and joy in your heart.

An adult, male bluegill taken from good water is one of the most brightly colored fish in Wisconsin equalled only by a native brookie or rainbow trout. He's a gaudy rascal, to be sure, but there are certain variations in color depending upon habitat, sex and age. The female is generally less colorful than the male which sports a breast of flaming rusty red and a combination of other shades ranging from blue to green to gold to black to white.

Good to Eat

But to many a man who fishes, the bluegill, a fine fighter and easy to look at, attains its finest hour in, of all places, the frying pan. The flesh is firm, white and flaky and possessed of a flavor preferred by some to the perch or even walleyed pike.

This summer, when the water grows hot and listless, the bigger 'gills will seek out deeper holes sources." will affect projects of the Army Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Department of Agriculture.

Objective in the formulation of plans is to be to provide the "best use, or combination of uses, of water and related land resources to meet all foreseeable short and long - term needs." Among development needs are: "outdoor recreational and fish and wildlife opportunities where these can be provided or enhanced by development works."

New Muenster Cheese Standards in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — New standards for the manufacture of Muenster cheese will be put in effect Aug. 25 by the Food and Drug Administration, Sen. Alex. Wiley, R-Wis., said Friday. The new standard will permit manufacture of the cheese without pasteurized milk when sold for production of processed cheese products which require the pasteurizing process in their manufacture, Wiley said.

Wiley said the new standard had been requested by the Wisconsin Swiss and Limburger Cheese Producers Association.

State Congressmen Get AMA Petitions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wisconsin congressmen were given petitions bearing the names of more than 57,000 persons who oppose governmental control of health care Friday.

Dr. L. O. Simenstad of Osceola, Wis., a delegate to the American Medical Association and its past president, delivered the petitions in 10 bundles—one for each of Wisconsin's congressional districts.

Warden Reviews Laws on Conduct and Use of Parks

Camp Areas Heading Into Peak Usage

BY CHUCK WRANOSKY
Outagamie County Game Warden

This is the time of the year when our state parks and forests are used most frequently by both Wisconsin residents and our visitors from other states. With the increased use of these facilities, it has been necessary to tighten regulations governing conduct and use of these areas. Here briefly are some of the regulations.

Wranosky

1. It is unlawful to destroy, molest or deface any natural growth or natural or archeologic features or any state property; to enter in any way, any building, installation or area that may be locked or closed to public use, or contrary to posted notice.

2. It is unlawful to destroy, molest, or remove the property of others.

3. It is unlawful for any person other than a permittee or licensee to scavenge golf balls on any golf course.

4. It is unlawful to discard or leave any refuse, sewage or other waste material on the ground, or in any building or installation, or in the water or on the ice of any lake or stream or to dispose of any such waste material in any manner except by burning or by placing in receptacles or other authorized location provided for such purposes.

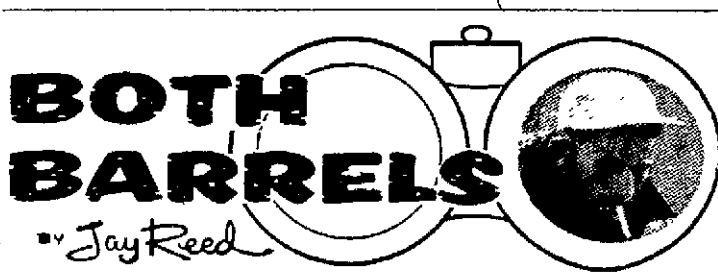

5. It is unlawful to wash vehicles or pets except at authorized locations in any public use area under the management, supervision and control of the Conservation Commission.

6. It is unlawful to wash any clothing except at authorized locations in any public use area.

7. It is unlawful to allow your pet to enter any public building or be upon any beach or lakeshore or in any lake or stream in any public use area. No person shall allow his pet to deprive or disrupt the enjoyment or use of any area by others. It looks like you will have to leave your pet at home.

Allen-Bradley Man Heads Safety Group

LAKE DELTON (AP) — Murdoch, Pryor, safety manager of the Allen-Bradley Co. of Milwaukee, was elected to an 18-month term as president of the Wisconsin Council of Safety at the council's annual meeting Friday. Pryor succeeds M. C. Olsen of Stevens Point.

by Jay Reed

Along toward the middle or tag-end of summer, give or take a couple of weeks, groups of men will be heading for the vast duck-breeding grounds of Canada to begin a survey which will go a long way toward determining what kind of waterfowl season we'll have this fall. They'll be counting quackers left and right. Maybe they'll count feet and divide by two or maybe they'll just count beaks and bills.

How they do it really isn't important. It's how many birds they find that matters. Based on population, estimated kill and the probable numbers of basic breeding stock which may buckle under to scattergunners, these men will draw a framework for a national waterfowl season. Or, if conditions are bad enough, they may even recommend no duck shooting at all.

—OO—

A good, safe guess at this point is that they'll come up with a season and bag limit much the same as last year. That means a short gunning season and a two-bird per day bag. When we were in Canada this spring we didn't get into the real duck country. We were told, however, that water conditions were better than the year before but still far from what it was during the peak years a few summers back.

But even that far north in Ontario there were a lot of ducks. Most of them were paired and ready for nesting. Back in Wisconsin, spring nesting conditions have never been better. We've seen mallards sitting in puddles in almost every field and swamp we've entered. Things look good for an excellent local hatch.

—OO—

All this is dandy but, unfortunately, it will not change what they fondly call the "big picture." The nesting areas of Manitoba and elsewhere must produce the bulk of our waterfowl if these birds are to be produced at all. Thus the duck picture could look good locally but, on a national basis, we may be in trouble.

Both Barrels fears for our duck population. We have always regarded the duck hunting season as a climax to our fall gunning activities. We've looked forward to its coming with even greater anticipation than the deer season.

We remember those years, in fact, when, after the deer season was over, we could sit in an ice-crusted blind on the Mississippi and peg at fat, northern greenheads as they whistled across the frozen marshes. This was duck hunting at its absolute finest and you had plenty of elbow room since few men ventured out in the cold to take advantage of the shooting. That wasn't too many years ago those late-season mallards were big and fully feathered. They looked almost all white, except for the green head, as they sat in what little open water remained. Their legs were redder than a deer hunter's underwear.

Maybe, if we play our cards right, those days will come back again. I hope so.

Dog Owners Must End Intra-Club Battles

BY BUD LARIMER

It would seem that the ideals and ultimate goal of any Dog Club or animal aid group should be to point up the pleasures and assets of dog ownership, breeding and showing. To illustrate the unity and congeniality of the groups so engaged. To aid the dog in becoming the best possible member of the society in which he has to live and to alleviate insofar as is possible the many and varied abuses to which he is exposed.

The same main objectives should apply to groups reputedly interested in and supporting other forms of animal life.

Instead of greater percentage of these groups are so occupied and preoccupied with Homeric Wars between groups and grims jousts and tourneys within the groups that adverse legislation after legislation and episodes and public conditioning pass them by as smoke. The only force that will affect legislation pro or con is the weight and threat of a voting majority.

Tears, lamentations, breast-beatings and individually-voiced protests are a lost cause before birth. It is ever an easier task to prevent a law from being enacted than it is to strive for its removal from the statutes. The wards dogs and their owners has unity, singleness of purpose and submergedness of personalities further deteriorate — still more among these unsympathetic to dogs and other forms of animal life.

We have come down through a long series of dog clubs and animal groups. In almost every case and all to consistently, all the dogs and other forms of animal life should bring shame to many long series of dog clubs and animal groups proclaiming themselves their champions.

The dog owner as a tax payer Braves were Chiefs and scalping gets less for his money than any was the Ultima Thule of accomplishment in existence. Seldom is dog plishment. Ergo, the conscientious dog owner. Small blame that much of the ner is supporting them in a man-Public feel that such groups are ner to which they wish to become a haven for the Neurotic, the Sob-accustomed, Public attitudes to-sister and the Ego-Maniac!

Lamprey Catch Total Down

Figures Indicate Control Program Is Working Well

ANN ARBOR — Catch of sea lamprey at Lake Superior barriers is down substantially, the Great Lakes Fishery Commission has reported.

The commission, a U.S.-Canadian agency which heads the fight against a predator that has nearly wiped out lake trout populations in the upper Great Lakes, opened its two-day annual meeting with some hopeful statistics.

GLFC Chairman Claude Ver Duin of Grand Haven (Mich.) reported that with possibly three quarters of the lamprey spawning run over in the United States and about half over in Canada, the U.S. catch at assessment barriers is now 6,191 lamprey compared to 51,628 in 1961, and the Canadian catch is now 454 compared with 1,555 at this time last year.

Chemical Treatment

Over-all, the 1962 catch is about 12 per cent of the 1961 catch at the same point — an indication that chemical treatment of Lake Superior streams, which was begun in 1958, is beginning to reduce the predator population.

"We can be justifiably pleased and encouraged by these results," Ver Duin said, "but I must point out that we still must determine whether or not the lamprey have been reduced sufficiently to allow a recovery of the lake trout and re-establishment of the fishery. I suggest, therefore, that the Commission, while acknowledging this major accomplishment of its agents, recognize that total success of the control program depends upon the rehabilitation of the trout population in Lake Superior."

The wards dogs and their owners has unity, singleness of purpose and submergedness of personalities further deteriorate — still more among these unsympathetic to dogs and other forms of animal life.

We have come down through a long series of dog clubs and animal groups. In almost every case and all to consistently, all the dogs and other forms of animal life should bring shame to many long series of dog clubs and animal groups proclaiming themselves their champions.

Activities included working with signal flags, making bridges, demonstrating scouting skills, swimming and other activities.

Highlighting the camporee was a "Spanfaerkel Supreme" in which an entire pig was roasted. The camporee, dampened slightly by rain Saturday night, closes today.

Chicago Man Hit by Train At Shawano

SHAWANO — A Chicago man was critically injured about 2:30 p. m. Saturday when he was struck by a Chicago and North Western passenger train near the city limits.

Hosea Neal, 56, a Negro, was sitting in a chair fishing from the railroad bridge near the Shawano Paper Co. mill.

Three companions told the sheriff's office they think Neal fell asleep. They said they called to him, but aren't sure if they woke him or if the noise of the train woke him.

Neal seemed to awaken just as the train bore down on him, but too late to get out of the way.

Former Appleton Man Killed in Indiana Holdup

A former Appleton man was shot to death in a scuffle with a man trying to rob a motel office in Bloomington, Ind., Saturday.

Carl W. Snyder, 44, a representative of Saltillo Corp., was shot when he refused to lie on the floor, as the robber had forced another motel guest to do.

Snyder went to school in Appleton. He moved with his parents to Chicago about 1940.

Donald Phillips of Indianapolis was forced to lie on the floor when he came upon the attempted holdup as he entered the motel office to check out.

Phillips said he couldn't see Snyder's scuffle with the robber but heard a click and then, "The gun misfired — you're lucky, but I'm going to shoot you."

A moment later, the gun fired, and Phillips said he heard Snyder's body slump to the floor.

Snyder's wife, Edna, found her husband dead when she passed the office later to join him for breakfast. Their daughter, Carla, 14, also was with them at the Var Orman Suburban Motel on Ind. 3, at the north edge of Bloomington.

3 Hurt When Plane Crashes at Takeoff

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A single engine plane crashed while taking off from the airport in neighboring Hales Corners Saturday, injuring three men.

The plane crashed into a pile of rubbish and timbers on the property of a construction company about a quarter of a mile from the end of the runway.

A witness said the plane reached a height of about 200 feet, appeared to stall and plunged to the earth.

The injured, who were taken to a hospital, were:

Millard Barnes, 36, the pilot of the Stinson aircraft; Karl Emsheff, 23, owner of the plane, and Sherman Salomen, 24, all of Milwaukee.

Barnes and Emsheff suffered fractured ankles and cuts while Salomen was cut and bruised.

The orders and items are placed on a counter by ward and nurses must sign for each prescription before taking it back to the ward. The original prescription is kept in a permanent file in the pharmacy.

The pharmacy's store of drugs, medicines, tranquilizers, vitamins, etc., is extensive almost beyond belief unless you've actually seen the packed shelves and cabinets. The inventory is large by necessity.

350 New Drugs

Approximately 350 new drugs are produced in the nation's pharmaceutical laboratories each year. St. Elizabeth's pharmacy habitually purchases every new drug certified for market whether or not there is an immediate need for it. With this policy, the pharmacy can dispense, at a moment's notice, any drug or medicine which is needed when it is needed. In addition, an inventory of older or more standard medicines must always be available for those physicians who prescribe it for their patients.

What about cost to the patient? A popular fallacy holds that hospitals charge exorbitant prices for their drugs. At St. Elizabeth, drug prices are kept precisely in line with prices anyone would pay purchasing the same item at a downtown drugstore. The pharmacy has a standard system for setting prices based on original per-unit cost to the hospital.

Certain drugs are expensive — no question about it. But they can save your life. One such drug is called Thrombolytic. A white powder, it dissolves blood clots, essentially, and is described as a classic example of the newest in life-saving drugs.

Pneumonia. For Instance

Another such drug is called Lente Iletin or insulin which, basically, permits a diabetic patient to eat many things normally restricted from his diet.

Nowhere can the worth of pharmaceutical treatment be better illustrated than in present day handling of pneumonia cases. Time was when classic treatment involved placing the patient in a room with windows open to provide plenty of ventilation. Quinine or aspirin water and pneumonia serum was administered. The mortality rate was about 20 percent and hospitalization extended to several weeks. Cost of treatment then could range between $300 and $500, largely because of the high cost of pneumonia serum.

Today a similar pneumonia case can be treated with modern therapeutic drugs for a cost of about $25 with the patient being back to normal in a matter of days.

So-called "shotgun prescriptions" were the thing some years ago. The theory then was if one thing didn't work another would. This has changed dramatically with the coming of "miracle" drugs. Precision and skill based on medical certainty has taken the chance and the "shotgun" out of prescriptions.

And the drugs serve still another purpose — important to the patient and his pocketbook. Hospitalization time has been shortened immeasurably since the advent of modern drug usage.

Extensive Records

The work of the pharmacy staff, understandably, involves a great deal more than dispensing of drugs. Record-keeping is necessary and complex. For each drug purchased an entry noting date and time of purchase, from whom purchased and per unit cost is made in the hospital records.

Drug orders must be carefully checked, unpacked and stored. Arranging, marking, inventory details and general housekeeping make up a great deal of the working day.

A precise record of all narcotics purchased and dispensed must be maintained. Stocks of special baby foods must be maintained and the pharmacy staff is obliged to keep abreast of current happenings in the pharmaceutical field by spending some time in the reference library.

Annual Inspections

Since the pharmacy is regulated by the Wisconsin State Board of Pharmacy, it is subject to annual inspections and must conform to all regulations applicable to private drug stores. In addition, the pharmacy must pay out in the neighborhood of $100 per year in special druggist, alcohol and narcotics fees.

Thus, then, is the St. Elizabeth's Pharmacy. Its operation is extensive and complex. It exists only to serve patients of the hospital. Its mission is to cure.

Racine Man Again to Head Group in UAW

DES MOINES, IA. — (AP) — Stephen Olsen of Racine, Wis., was re-elected president of the international wage and hour council of the agricultural implement equipment workers of the United Auto Workers Union Saturday. About 125 delegates from the United States and Canada were attending the three-day annual meeting, which ends Sunday.

Fox Cities Amateur Radio operators flexed their technical muscles this weekend. Members of the Appleton ham radio club set up operations in Outagamie County Plamann Park to try to make worldwide contacts, both for experience and for points to gain club recognition. Shown working in their bus radio station are Hillard Strebe, 1719 Lee Court, Appleton, and Robert Throne, route 4, Appleton. Not only does the converted school bus have a huge antenna on top of it, there are living quarters inside for emergency use.

People Asking People for Money — That's Definition of Fund Raising

Many Non-Profit Organizations Turning To Professionals to Help Run Campaigns

BY JACQUELINE FIF

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

People asking people for money.

That, basically, is what fund-raising is. But when it is multiplied by thousands of people and millions of dollars, it can become exceedingly complex.

For this reason, more and more non-profit groups are turning for help to professional fund-raising organizations — even up campaign divisions according to the potential giving power.

The St. Elizabeth drive has four divisions. 1. The initial gifts division which covers the "hospital family" (advisory board auxiliary, employees and medical staff). 2. The primary gifts division, which includes the potential big givers from $3,000 up, in industry, business and individuals.

"We ourselves don't raise a dime," explained H. Charles Hastings, building fund director. "We plan, organize and direct the campaign, and give volunteer workers the tools and know-how necessary for them to do the work."

Strict Standards Ketchum Inc., belongs to the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel Inc., which emphasizes strict standards for its members in a fair practice code. Foremost among these is that member firms do business only on the basis of a specified fee determined before the beginning of the campaign.

"No ethical firm will work on a percentage basis," Hastings emphasized. "We work on a fee based on man-weeks of service." The question "what are you getting out of this?" always comes up, Hastings said. "We are very frank. I tell them nothing more than a monthly salary."

Ketchum works for many non-profit groups such as churches, hospitals, colleges and universities, united funds, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, YMCA and YWCA but the firm will not work for a profit-making organization.

Sales First The work of a professional fund-raising firm as in any business, starts with a sales department. Once a contact is made, a salesman will make a survey and determine the possible goal and the number of man-weeks of service necessary to accomplish it. The firm brings more than 40 years of experience with institutions, people and problems to the campaign, but each campaign is tailored made. "Nothing in the St. Elizabeth campaign is exactly like any other campaign," pointed out Gardner Moon, Ketchum public relations man. "We don't create the problem we create the solution," he said. "Each problem is different, and so each solution is different."

Three Phases

The actual campaign falls into three major phases — preparation and planning, organization and execution. In the planning phase the firm works with local persons in studying the prospects and for contributions, determining the necessary manpower, and setting up campaign divisions according to the potential giving power.

The St. Elizabeth drive has four divisions. 1. The initial gifts division which covers the "hospital family" (advisory board auxiliary, employees and medical staff). 2. The primary gifts division, which includes the potential big givers from $3,000 up, in industry, business and individuals.

will take a minimum of five weeks.

The maximum is unlimited. Ketchum is now conducting a hospital drive for $11.5 million, and a campaign for the University of Iowa for more than $20 million.

The use of professional fund-raising help is gaining wider and wider acceptance. Hastings said, "Clients realize they cannot work on a do-it-yourself basis, and see the economy of working with a professional firm."

"There is a great deal of satisfaction in doing a campaign, then load of logs which fell from a returning to the community two truck.

or three years later and seeing a new hospital or a new university addition, and realizing you had some part in this," said Hastings, who has been in fund-raising work for 10 years. "This compensates for living out of a suitcase."

Moon stressed "the actual simplicity of what we do" — St. Elizabeth needs money; our job is to help people to raise it and to help the campaign to run smoothly.

"It's as simple as this and it must be as honest as this," he said.

Goldwater Has Reception At Press Club

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater came to Wisconsin Saturday to praise fellow Republicans and cry havoc on the Democrats at a rousing $100-a-plate GOP fund raising banquet at the Auditorium.

After a news conference and a television appearance, Sen. Goldwater held a small reception at the hotel for Republican leaders, added including Sen. Alexander Wiley, R-Wis., who would introduce his colleague at the banquet later. Goldwater declined to discuss the Wisconsin situation, where Wisconsin Press Club, where Goldwater signed another celebratory plaque for the club's famed of the party, on the grounds that the Signature Room, the chairman of Wiley, already endorsed by the Senate Campaign Committee Republican State Convention for lost no time in brushing off the a fifth term, will have no importance of intra-party troubles faculty winning his fifth term over Republican aims.

There is no difference in philosophy among Republicans," he said. "Only in the applications of policy."

Asked how the party can accommodate such divergent points of view as those represented by Sen. Jacob Javits of New York on the one hand, and members of the John Birch Society on the other, Goldwater said: "If the Democrats can accommodate Harry Byrd and Hubert Humphrey, we certainly won't have any trouble with the range of the John Birch Society."

And, as an afterthought, he said, "At that, we're closer to including Sen. Alexander Wiley, R-Wis., who would introduce his colleague at the banquet later. Music Camp Ends For 208 Students At Stevens Point

Tonight's Concert Concludes Two Weeks of Fun, Harmony

STEVENS POINT—A concert at the high school students elected Stevens Point State College this afternoon ends two weeks of fun and music for 208 high school youngsters who took part in the Senior High Session of the Point Music Camp, sponsored by the college music department.

Students came from all sections of the state to study with the Camp staff which included visiting musicians, the college music faculty and students doing graduate work in music here.

The concert today will show the results of intensive rehearsal sessions.

Junior Session

A session for junior high schoolers is scheduled for July 8 to 15 when another 200 plus students will fill the hall of Old Main with music and the carefree laughter of the very young. And these are talented young musicians. Many of them received awards this year in district and state music contests.

During the busy past two weeks either ensemble or class instruction that kept them at work from eight in the morning until noon.

There were more classes in the afternoon. Each student elected five hours daily, with the sixth session free for rest, private lessons or practice. Some of the students took part in a stage band workshop instead of the senior high program. The junior session will follow the same sort of schedule.

Parents Attended

Saturday mornings were given over to rehearsals for the major performance groups for the week-long Sunday afternoon concerts. Parents were invited to attend the Sunday concerts and they did so in great numbers.

Last Sunday's concert had Paul J. Wallace as conductor of the Concert Symphonic Bands. Prof. Wallace of the local music faculty is also director for the Music Camp.

Eagles Pledge $30,000 For Children's School

MANTOWOC (AP) — The Fraternal Order of Eagles in Wisconsin has pledged $30,000 to aid the Poynette Christian School and Children's Home for the next two years.

Some 400 delegates to the organization's 60th annual state convention, which ends Sunday, took the action. The plan is to provide $10,000 this year to complete the present unfinished quarters at the school and $20,000 in 1963 to acquire an adjoining 54-acre tract containing two additional buildings.

The Poynette school and home is a non-sectarian institution operated by the Rev. and Mrs. Lester Thistle who quit farming to devote their lives to helping children who are emotionally disturbed, handicapped, abandoned or the product of broken homes. The 30 children now at the school are living in family units with foster parents and foster brothers and sisters.

ern Illinois University at DeKalb, also conducted several numbers of the Concert and Symphonic Bands.

Louis H. Diercks, Director of Chorus, Ohio State University at Columbus directed the Chorus and the Madrigal Singers. Kathryn Carstens, a college music student, was piano accompanist.

Of course the sessions aren't all work. There was plenty of planned recreation to keep the students busy and happy, including swim sessions in the campus pool, dancing parties and picnics at Iverson Park. Students were housed in campus dormitories and ate at the Student Union.

Among those attending the camp during the past two weeks were Dianne Anderson, Waupaca; Bonnie Kay Brown, Ripon; Peter Fashun, Ripon; Kathleen Mary Franke and Ellen Mary Gardner, Horicon; John Hargrave, Ripon; Dawn Kimball, Pine River; Lana Kollath, Seymour; Margie Konitzer, Stevens Point; Jerry Kuhs, Ripon; Judy Levandowski, Menasha; Peggy Marquardt, Fremont; Dianne Marshall, Stevens Point; Sally Miller, Berlin; Jennifer Palmer, Amherst; Lloyd Peshke, Jr., Berlin; Dale Wahlers, Marion; Judy Werch, Berlin.

Want Ad Information

Closing Time

Want ads accepted to 4:00 p.m. the day before day of publication. For Monday-Before noon, Saturdays. For Sundays - Before 10:30 a.m. Saturdays.

Corrections or Cancellations

Want ad corrections or cancellations must be made by 10:30 a.m. for the same day publication. For Sundays-Before 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

IMPORTANT

Composition costs will be charged, if an ordered ad is cancelled before publication. After an ad is ordered, it cannot be changed before publication. When cancelling an ad, demand a "kill number." No claims are recognized on ads cancelled without it. The number of days an ad is published determines the rate of such ads.

Adjustments

The Appleton Post-Crescent assumes no responsibility for verbal statements in conflict with its established rules, policies or rates. All claims for adjustments or refunds must be made within 7 days after expiration of ad. Errors, not the fault of the advertiser, which make the advertisement less valuable, should be corrected the first day, when an extra corrected insertion will be made without charge. The Post-Crescent assumes no responsibility for error after the first insertion.

NOTICE

The Appleton Post-Crescent is exercising all precautions to avoid publishing any fraudulent or misleading advertising. However, if any ad appearing in the classified columns of the Post-Crescent can be proven fraudulent or misleading, we would appreciate your informing us immediately.

Rock-Hard Railroadmen and rivermen battled with clubs and tools one day in 1885 after Chris Dahl, a riverman, asked an Amberg railroad worker for the time of day and received a curse and punch to the jaw for his trouble. Almost 50 men took part in the battle, in which James O'Mally the railroad man credited with starting the fight, was fatally knifed. Dahl was later imprisoned, charged with the murder of O'Mally, only to be freed when the real culprit admitted his guilt in a death-bed confession. Amberg's population at that time was twice its present size of about 650. (Sketch by Bill Juhre, staff artist.)

'Sleepy-Hollow' Village Amberg Dreams of Battling, Bustling Past

Rowdy Quarrymen Produced Finest Granite in America; Founder Quit During Strike

BY CHARLES HOUSE
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

AMBERG — Huge piles of grey granite blocks, chips and waste stand about old quarries here like tombs to a memory of the old days. This quaintly attractive sleepy-hollow village of Marinette County was once the bustling producer of some of the finest "Amberg Grey" granite in North America.

In the distant long-ago, a total of some 400 quarrymen swelled the economy of Amberg and the community was lively and vigorous and promising. It was a community of vigorous contention too, for the lumbermen and the railroad men and the quarrymen were tough and rock-hard and they looked upon one another as a secretary bird looks at a snake. Some of the free-for-all battles between those sturdy men of yore are historical.

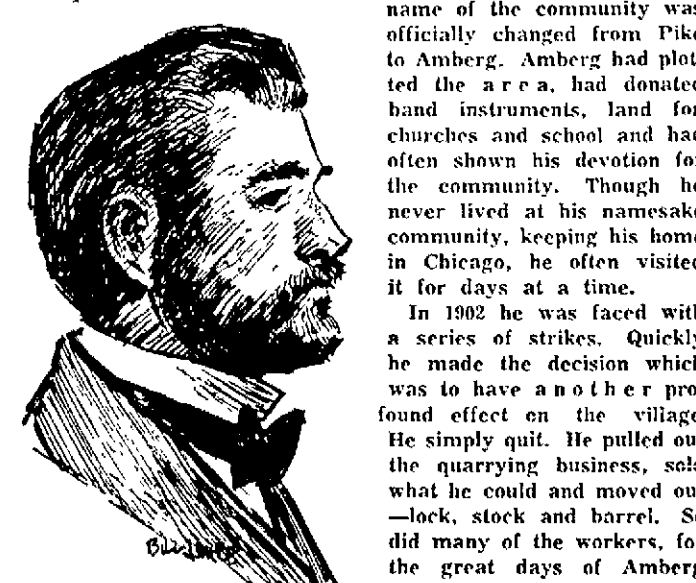

Born in the flowage of the Menominee and Peshtigo rivers, the community was first named Pike after the lovely trout-laden river which abuts it. To this white pine country, in 1863, came Pike's first white settler of permanence — Warren Buckman. He established a trading post for the lumbermen and the Indians who were swarming through this section of Wisconsin even before the arrival here of the railroad in 1884. Soon Pike became an important supply center for the lumber interests and its future seemed assured.

The Rails Came
When the rails came, so did people. One of them, a foot-loose Irishman named Mullaney, stepped from the train here because it was as far as he could go. His son, Raleigh, now 67, is still here and generally considered "an old timer." He managed granite quarries for 20 years before he bought a service station here on Highway 141.

Perhaps more important to the community was the arrival in 1887 of William Amberg, a 40-year old Bavarian who had already cut a swath in the Chicago business world as a partner in the booming stationery firm of Cameron and Amberg.

Aggressive and industrious, Amberg knew that the burgeoning Chicago needed paving materials, and he found the tough granites of this region to be superb. He established a total of three communities here — Martindale and Argyle, now ghost towns northwest of here—and then this village.

No man now can say how many miles of Chicago streets were made of the fine "Amberg grey," but there were many. As the years went on, building blocks, too, became important from here. Amberg grey built the Federal Building in Milwaukee, the old Chicago Post Office Building (now St. Joseph's Basilica in Milwaukee), the Wisconsin State Reformatory at Green Bay, the Courthouse at St. Louis, some of the prison buildings at Waupun, and part of the Menominee

William Amberg, a Bavarian-born businessman, founded the village which bears his name, and operated granite quarries in the area. He quit the quarrying business abruptly in 1902.

Assembly Seat Popular Post
Most Sought After as Third Candidate to Seek Vacant Position
CHILTON—The state assembly seat has suddenly become the most sought after plum on the Calumet County political tree. Paul Schwalbach, a Darboy tavernkeeper and grocery store operator, became the third candidate and the first Democrat to indicate his political aspirations. Schwalbach, route 4, Appleton, took out nomination papers this week from County Clerk Roland Miller.

Attractive Village
There is really more than that to present day Amberg. It is an unusually attractive village. The Pike River at its doorstep is beautiful and rich in trout. Its west side of the river is cathedral-like in its hushed beauty. Nearby Dave's Falls County Park, 61 acres of beauty, with a magnificently wild waterfall and rugged cliffs which attracts many a traveler. Nearby are lovely lakes and beautiful woodlands.

Dave's Falls was named for the long driver, Dave Frechette, who fell into the white water here with his business obligations and is long ago. Though efforts were made to save him, a stray log struck him and he was lost.

Today's Amberg, very different from the boom-time of the granite quarries, has many reminders of its busier days. In the present populace are many descendants of the old pioneers who came here long ago. The inescapable piles of granite and blocks and chips may stand forever as silent testimony to earlier days. Some of the present homes in Amberg have been brought there from the dead ghost towns which grew up around the quarries.

And one quaintly odd remembrance is a tombstone which stands along the railroad track here where it has been for nearly 45 years.

The tombstone which bears the name Bowron has been there so long that most citizens no longer see it; and many have forgotten how it came there.

It dates back to the quarrying days when the State of Wisconsin owned a quarry there and used inmates of the Reformatory at Green Bay to perform its labor. The superintendent of the Reformatory at that time was Charles Bowron who served the institution from 1902 to 1917.

A stone was cut for him, emblazoned with his name. It was completed, but not to the liking of those who judged it. Another stone was taken and cut, and the over the years — but today only one is still in operation. It is the tracks there to this day. Perhaps Peninsula Granite Co., Iron Mountain, Mich. Group of 45 Views Europe On CSC Tour

Crossing Ocean On U. S. Liner, To Return Aug. 2

STEVENS POINT — Bound for the cosmopolitan capitals of Europe are 45 persons who left Tuesday on a six-week tour sponsored by Central State College. Among the passengers is Mrs. William C. Hansen, wife of CSC President Hansen, who retires July 1. Also included in the group are Mr. and Mrs. Greg Charlesworth and their daughter, Mary, New London, as well as faculty members, students, former students and area residents who sailed Wednesday on the S. S. America for Le Havre.

Dr. Pauline Isaacson and Dr. Peter Kroner, CSC faculty members, are conducting the tour, for which many students will receive college credit.

The group left Stevens Point on the college bus, but proceeded to New York by train.

The itinerary provides for several days in Paris and a trip to Versailles. While in Europe the group will travel either by private motorcoach or train.

Lucerne, Milan, Rome, Florence, Venice, Vienna, Salzburg, Munich, Rothenburg, Amsterdam, Brussels and London are among the cities to be visited. A trip down the Rhine and an excursion to the Shakespeare country also are scheduled.

The group leaves England Aug. 2 aboard the S. S. United States although some members of the party will continue on to Ireland, Scotland or Scandinavia.

Chief Warns About Parking On Wrong Side

KAUKAUNA—Harold V. Engstrom, chief of police, issued a warning Friday to motorists in the habit of parking on the wrong side of the street.

This is a dangerous practice and could lead to serious accidents, said the chief. He has instructed his men to enforce the ordinance against this practice and indicated violators would not only be assessed fines, but would lose points on their driving record.

For Schwalbach, this will be the fifth attempt to gain the assembly seat. He has been the perennial Democratic candidate since 1954. He was defeated the first two elections by Republican Henry Peters and the past two by Hipke.

Seeking the Republican nomination are Wilmer Struening, and Lester Eding, Struening, route 2, Brillion, is the present Brillion township chairman and its representative on the County Board. He is an officer of the Calumet Memorial Hospital and has been an officer in two school districts. Eding, rural Kaukauna, is the former Woodville Town chairman.

No Rumblings
Aside from this notable exception, county political rumblings are non-existent at this point. The only non-incumbent who has taken out nomination paper is Under-sheriff C. J. Kosmosky, four-time successful candidate for sheriff on the Republican ticket. Kosmosky is running in place of his wife, who won the post in 1960.

Incumbents who have taken out nomination papers include County Clerk Roland Miller, Register of Deeds Mrs. Germaine Hume and Surveyor Ramond Jensen, all Democrats. Republican incumbents are Coroner Leroy Hughes, Dist. Atty. F. J. Schmieder, Clerk of Courts Math Nilles, and Treasurer Merlin Zahn.

Black Creek Butcher Keeps Fleet of 19 Antique Autos

Entire Family Helps Maintain Old Vehicles

By John Sawall
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

BLACK CREEK—With today's rushing pace and the need for personal travel, it is necessary for many families to have two or perhaps three cars. The Clarence Gregorius family here, however, has 19 cars, two trucks and a motorcycle.

Gregorius isn't worried about the depreciation on all those vehicles since 18 of the cars, plus one truck and the motorcycle, are antiques. Each year the value of his collection goes up instead of down.

The cars, all but two of which are in running condition, range from an 1897 Erie to a 1932 BSA three-wheel English car.

Gregorius has been a butcher in Black Creek for the past 25 years. His hobby of collecting and restoring antique cars started in 1946, about the same time he started operating his own butcher shop.

One of the first cars he purchased was a 1916 Ford and from that time on his fleet has continued to grow. However, he said, it is now difficult to locate antique cars, and when he does find one stored away in some back corner of a shed or barn the owner hesitates to part with the relic because of sentimental value or what he thinks is its value.

Costs Rising

When he first started collecting, it was possible to pick up an old car for under $25. Now this same car, if in good condition, will bring over $100 or if it is one of limited production, it may bring several hundred dollars.

Among the cars in Gregorius collection are a 1897 Erie, 1906 Cadillac, 1907 Brush, 1908 Maxwell, 1913 Ford, 1915 Buick, 1915 White Truck, two 1916 Fords, 1919 Ford, 1920 Packard, 1923 Franklin, two 1923 Fords, 1923 Chevrolet roadster, 1928 Ford touring car, 1930 Buick Roadster, 1930 Rolls Royce and the 1932 BSA. The lone motorcycle is a 1909 Harley Davidson.

The 1906 Cadillac is believed to be one of the first six to be built, and the 1930 Buick Roadster, which is in very good condition, is one of 132 built that year.

The cars are kept in a building in Gregorius' 10-acre farm near the western edge of the village. While working on one of his fleet, he moves it to a garage located behind his shop on Main Street. At present he is restoring the 1907 Brush. He does all the work on the cars himself with the help of his two sons, Don and Dan. Presently Don is serving with the 32nd Division, and this has put a temporary delay in some of the restoration work. Ten-year-old Dan also helps with some of the work on the cars and enjoys riding in the cars as his father races down the street at the terrific pace of perhaps 30 miles per hour.

Likes Older Cars
Gregorius said he prefers to own and work on older cars, meaning the pre 1930 models, but because they are rare he purchased the 1930 Rolls Royce and the 1932 English BMA.

In the past few years his collection has not grown as fast as it did when he first started collecting old cars, he said, but he does spend many Sunday afternoons traveling through the countryside checking on old cars he has spotted. He has also traded a few cars with other collectors. He is constantly on the lookout for any type of old car because, he said, if it can't be restored many times the car can be disassembled and parts can be used for one he owns.

Some of Gregorius' cars are now being put to use by Brothers of the Brush and Sisters of the Swiss who are touring surrounding counties advertising Black Creek's centennial, scheduled for July 2-8. Many of his collection will also be used during the celebration and fleet will, however, be well represented in the parade that will be held

This 1907 Brush is only one of 19 antique cars in the collection of Clarence Gregorius, Black Creek butcher. Gregorius hopes to enter a number of his cars in the community's centennial parade.

Pioneer Solomons Early Rural Justices Needed Wit, Integrity

BY STERLING SORENSEN

SAXEVILLE, Wis.—Prior to the days of blood testing to determine parentage and before ballistics and other scientific means of concluding guilt or innocence, pioneer rural Wisconsin justice was largely dependent on the intuition, prejudices and personality of its justices of the peace.

Newly uncovered, the opinions of a Saxeville justice of the peace records some of the Solomon-like decisions of this townsman who also served the township as magistrate.

Justice of the Peace William B. Coburn's qualifications for the bench included "a set of law books," personal integrity and his knowledge and acquaintance with his fellow townsmen. Entered in the 1880s and 1890s and indicative of his efforts to mete out even-handed justice are a number of interesting judgments.

In deciding a paternity case, Coburn held his findings in abeyance until, as he wrote, the child reached the age of two years.

Looked for Ears
"At that time," he recorded, "if the child has the huge, platter ears of the accused, I'll decide the defendant was in fact the father."

A married villager accused of relations with a teen-age girl was ordered to "absent himself from the county for three months."

The girl's father had threatened to shoot the accused on sight, and to prevent this, Justice Coburn made his ruling because, as he entered in his book, "there is to be no shooting in the township."

In another Solomon-like decision, Justice Coburn ruled on the complaint of a young man charged with defecating in a neighbor's open well. He decreed the defendant clean out the well, pay the plaintiff the sum of $15 and "never do it again."

July 7, Gregorius takes his cars to many of the surrounding communities for parades and centennials. In fact he prides himself in being the owner of the only old car—an 1897 Erie—to remain running throughout the seven mile parade route of the Appleton Centennial a few years ago.

Gregorius said he would like to enter all of his cars in the Black Creek Centennial parade, but it will be impossible to have the entire collection ready in time. His fleet will, however, be well represented.

Horse Stealing
Corburn's days were those when horse stealing was a most serious crime. A suspect brought before the Saxeville magistrate was given the option of returning the horse or "working on the farm of the plaintiff for a period of four months or until such time as the value of the animal is met," adding that "I'm not sure that the animal was in fact stolen, but we have to stop horse stealing anyhow."

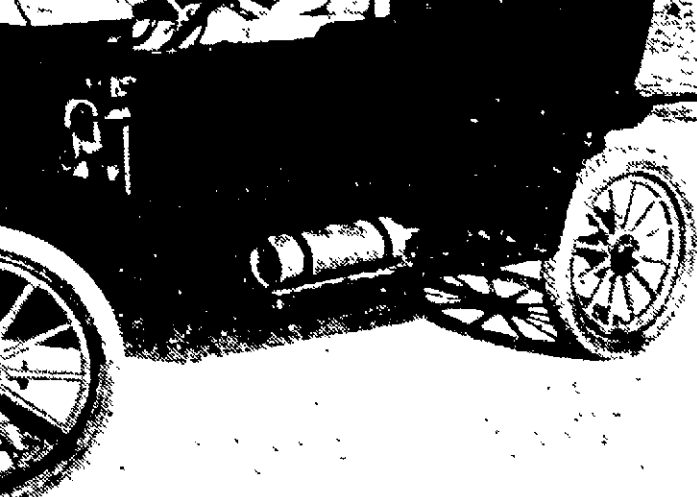

Many of the suits brought to the shoemaker-justice dealt with property lines and fencing. One suit involved his immediate neighbors. His decision: "Both are to stop their feud and settle down, since the land in question isn't worth anything, anyhow."

Young Business Man:
Even the small accompanying picture of Steve Fredrick lends credence to the fact that he is well built for his favorite sport — football. Only that kindly expression belies the rock 'em, sock 'em type.

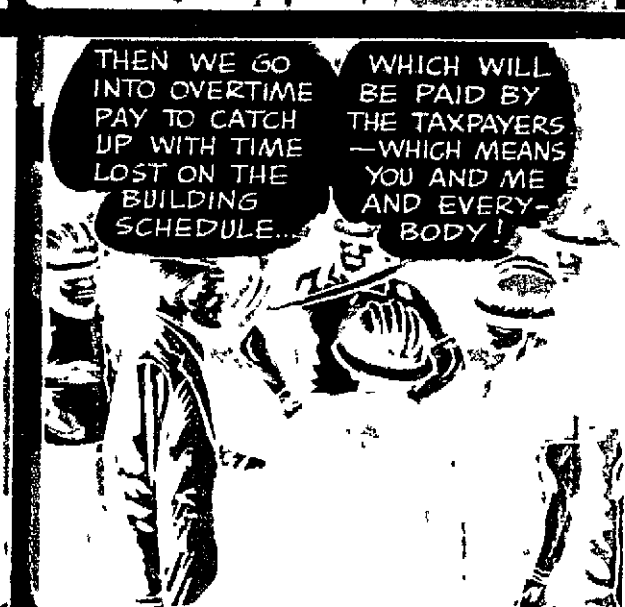

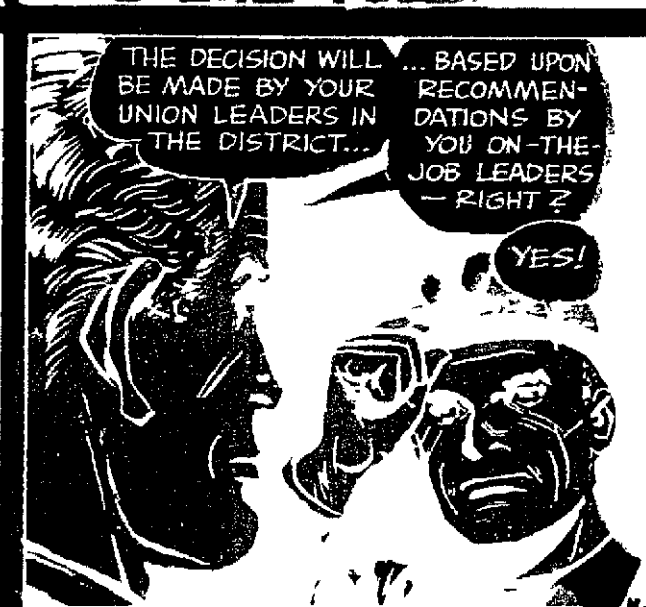

Steve, a native of Beaver Dam, lives at 1338 Hazel St., Oshkosh, where, since last October, he has built a good list of Post-Crescent customers for the Sunday paper. This he delivers every Sunday morning along Evans, Nevada, Fairview and Deamle Streets.

The young Oshkosh business man attends Webster Stanley School and the First Evangelical United Brethren Church of Oshkosh. He likes to dabble in modeling and music and, football season over, gets out on the baseball diamond.

Steve's profits go proportionately for savings and "for recreation or stuff like that."

Proudly Driving his younger son downtown in a 40-year-old Ford sedan is Black Creek butcher Clarence Gregorius, whose hobby is the maintenance and restoration of antique autos.

DO INSECTS RESPOND TO COLORS? YES ☐ NO ☐

Yes. Two "bug specialists," Drs. R. A. Morse and R. L. Ghent, of Cornell University found that bees were more likely to sting those in dark colors than those in light. Blue denim and serge attracted more flies and mosquitoes than hard-finished khaki, drill or nylon clothing. Hair oils and perfumes may also attract insects. Insect repellents are no good against bees.

EXPERIENCED SPEAKERS DON'T GET STAGE FRIGHT!

Wrong! Almost all speakers experience some stage fright, no matter how long they've been at it. Usually as soon as they're into their subject, this disappears. The best way to overcome stage fright is to have something important to say and be eager to say it. Look at your audience and watch their faces. If you avoid their gaze and look at a blank wall or the ceiling, you're more likely to be frightened yourself.

A CHANGE WILL ALWAYS DO YOU GOOD!

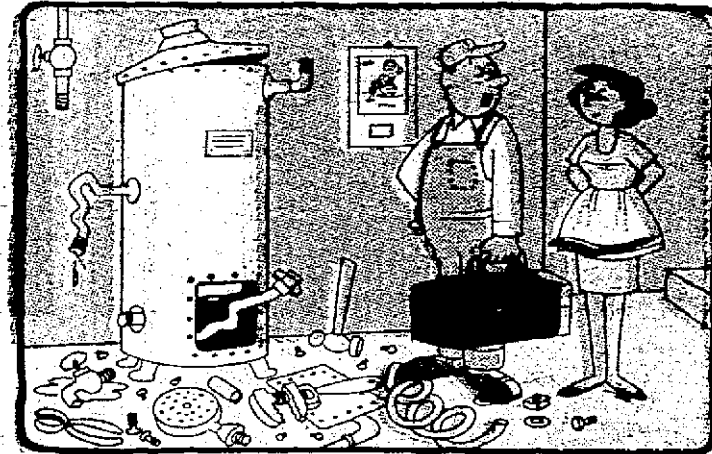

TRUE ☐ FALSE ☐

False. Two research physicians, Drs. Shand and Finesinger, studied navy personnel and found that changes, such as those that result from a new job, marriage or the birth of a child, sometimes result in nervous fatigue. Why? Because people must change their usual ways of behavior and do more, somewhat differently, than they have done before. The strain of such adjustments sometimes brings on that "tired feeling."

'Who in the World...'

BY ISOBEL ASHE

HOLLYWOOD — Without the daily newspapers of America, Ralph Edwards would have a much more difficult job presenting his latest weekly television show, "Who in the World," which commences on CBS-TV tonight in the Jack Benny time slot.

"The Show," says the ebullient master of ceremonies, "is not an audience participation program. It's a 'people' show, featuring front page news done with the human interest treatment.

"We are dealing with people currently in the news, and though the show will be taped on Friday nights, two days before it airs, the viewer will have the feeling he's seeing current news, as indeed he is."

The format of the show, Edwards' director Dick Gottlieb carried on, deals with persons in the news and someone who affected their lives. It aims to bring the headline personalities "face-to-face" with the American public.

Follow Headlines

"For example, if we had been on the air with this show when Col. John Glenn made his flight, we'd have tried to get on the show the man in Perth, Australia, who turned on the lights when Glenn passed over Perth.

"Why did the man do it? What motivated him?"

"Recently when the Shah of Iran and his Empress visited this country, the attendance was focused on him.

"She is a very beautiful woman and I personally didn't read too much about her. We think American audiences would have been interested in a woman in her position appearing face-to-face with them," Gottlieb went on.

Of Edwards' many programs, this is the first that didn't originate with him. It was, instead, suggested by an advertising agency to whom he was selling another series.

"They contacted me," Edwards went on, "and said they'd like to do my kind of show, not a news or documentary but one featuring news as pure entertainment.

"I came back here," Edwards gestured around the elegantly decorated offices on the 9th and 10th floors of a new Hollywood office building and we had a "noodling meeting."

At the "noodling meeting" were Paul Edwards, Ralph's brother and overall production head; Dick Gottlieb who will direct the show and producer Axel Gruenberg, together with Jim and Sue Chadwick who have directed public relations for the Edwards company for the past 18 years.

Edwards' Ideas

Interposed Sue, "It was mainly Ralph's thinking. We all made suggestions, but he wrote the presentation and developed the idea as it will be seen on the air."

Originally the sponsors had hoped that Edwards would M.C. the show, but preferring to function behind the scenes, he induced Warren Hull to emerge from his semiretirement—he has been living in Virginia Beach outside Norfolk, Va., doing daytime television shows—to come back to Hollywood as master of ceremonies.

Sue, a volatile and attractive brunette, pointed out:

"The M.C. had to have 'our touch.' What's that? A sincere liking of people—in our type of show, the person is the star, not the host. He must never overshadow the guest, and he has to be a good listener.

"Warren Hull has all these things. Remember, he did 'Vox Pop' on radio and 'Strike It Rich' for so long, and he loves people almost as much as Ralph does," she smiled.

How will the Edwards staff find their people to meet face-to-face on the CBS television network every Sunday night?

There will be a staff of three writer-researchers headed over by Robert E. G. Harris, head of the UCLA journalism department.

Into the Edwards offices each week come some 50 to 75 daily and Sunday newspapers from every state of the Union. Each of the three writer-researchers grabs a stack of newspapers and seeks stories of human interest, or general interest to viewers.

There is a staff meeting each week, at which all the story possibilities are discussed, and then the final group decided upon.

"There is always the chance," Edwards pointed out, "that we will bring people in here, do their segment of the show, and it will never be seen.

"It will land on the cutting-room floor, so to speak, if there is a big news story breaking that same day for example, and the participants in that story are available to us.

"As we call each of the participating guests on the telephone, we explain that this could happen. It's a calculated risk. If they are willing to take it, fine. We make all travel arrangements and bring them here."

This portion of the operation is then turned over to Janet Tighe who led a cloak-and-dagger existence in the Edwards office during the time "This Is Your Life" was on the air.

Guests Hidden

It was Janet who kept the guests hidden from the subject during the time they were in Hollywood. Her job will be easier on "Who in the World," since no secrecy is involved.

She will meet planes or trains, make hotel reservations, and keep the guests amused and occupied during the four or five days they visit here.

"Some of the guests have certain requests, like Marineland, Disneyland, visiting the beach, seeing certain night club performers who are working here.

"Others have business contacts they wish to pursue, or family they want to see. We are their hosts for the entire time, and function as such. We fulfill all their requests, if it's humanly possible," Sue Chadwick said.

Primarily "Who in the World" will be produced in the studios in Hollywood, but if the story absolutely demands it, it will be done on location.

In addition to seeking personalities in America who have done something interesting, it is not unlikely that foreign stories which appear in the American press will result in their subjects' being invited to appear on the program.

Dick Gottlieb explained, "We'll also use movie stars if there is a reason for them. For example, Peter Sellers is visiting here — his first time from England—to help publicize the movie 'Lolita.'

"Well, it's a known fact that he bases all his characterizations on actual people he has studied.

"We would try to get some of these people he has copied, and have them meet him face-to-face on our show. We would have wanted to get Stanley Berman, that famous gate-crasher after the Academy Awards, to find out what motivates him, what makes him tick.

Study 'Crasher'

"What makes him gate-crash, in other words. We figure enough people are interested in a man like this," Gottlieb said.

The Edwards staff, experienced as they are over the years in observing human antics, realize that there could be a rash of zany stunts breaking out over the country, generated by people who'd do just about anything for a free trip to Hollywood, with babysitters and interpreters provided too when necessary.

"We hope we're sufficiently experienced to spot the phonies," Gottlieb says. "Too, in the past, many of our best news tips have come from newspapermen around the country and if in doubt, we can ask them to check out.

"If any phonies do slip past us, the stories will have to be awfully good!" he asserts.

Warren Hull has stepped out of retirement to serve as host of the new "people" show, "Who in the World."

PIANO—FOUR HANDS

French Music for Piano, Four Hands; Robert and Gaby Casadesus. Columbia ML 5723 (Stereo MS 6323).

The relaxed lyricism and delicate, feathery touch of the Casadesus team make this a top grade recording of refreshing quality. The feature is a seldom heard performance of Debussy's "Petite Suite" in its original four-hand version, backed by works of Satie, Chabrier and Faure. Notes are excellent and the sound is very bright and clear.

Victor Herbert on Stage; Roger Wagner Chorale and Orchestra, Wagner conducting. Capitol T 1707 (Stereo ST 1707).

What a superb melodist Victor Herbert was. Sophisticates will probably call these familiar old songs, culled from his great stage hits, a field of corn, but they still pack a tremendous nostalgic punch, particularly in the presentation by the Wagner Chorale, which sings with affection in its typically lyrical style. Sound is very good and the tonal balance excellent.

Orchestral Treasures; Bamberg Symphony and Berlin Philharmonic, Willy Richartz conducting. Deutsche Grammophon LPEM 19262 (Stereo SLPEM 139262).

The title is a misnomer. These aren't exactly "treasures" but they're pleasant to take in arrangements by conductor Richartz. The Berliners play suavely and enjoy unusually opulent sound, the reading of Glinka's "Souvenir d'une Mazurka" being especially noteworthy. The Bamberg is good, but the recording here is not equal to that of the Berlin side.

Symphony No. 5; Minneapolis Symphony, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting. Mercury MG 50060 (Stereo SR 90060).

Skrowaczewski's second recording since he took over the Minneapolis podium strengthens his favorable first impression, despite the fact that this music is less responsive to his touch than the inaugural Schubert. Aside from a lovely slow movement the symphony is no great shakes.

Sound, while somewhat muted, is very clean, especially the clarity with which the inner voices of the ensemble come through. The comparison of the tone of Arnold Loesser's notes on Shostakovich and the blurb on the young Polish conductor make intriguing reading even if they don't add much weight to the album.

Two Pert, Spirited Performers Add Spice to Smash Broadway Musicals

BY WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Two pert, unlike ladies are adding to the season's musical gaiety in first appearances on Broadway.

One is a titian-tressed lark from over the sea, who has appeared only twice before on any bigtime stage. Her name: Patricia Bredin.

The other is gray-haired Molly Picon, currently kicking up her heels on the great white way after 57 years of performing almost everywhere else in show business.

Miss Picon portrays a high-spirited widow in the hit "Milk and Honey," a circumstance she credits to the author, Don Appel.

Miss Bredin, in contrast, is now Queen Guenevere in "Camelot" because she once auditioned for "My Fair Lady." She took over the regal role from Julie Andrews, soon to be a mother.

The far more strenuous assignment—seemingly—is the Picon workout. A matter she modestly deprecates.

"It looks a lot harder than it is," Miss Picon says of the mixture of singing and dancing with which she nightly hypnotizes audiences at the Martin Beck.

"One develops a bit of technique. As for those high kicks—I've been doing them all my life. And each evening I have a backstage routine to warm up."

Jack Kalisch, her spouse for 42 years, is at her dressing room for every performance. In years gone by he wrote a number of shows for her and is chief career advisor. As a matter of fact, he first got her an American reputation—by taking her to Europe.

Molly first went onstage in hometown Philadelphia at age 6, subsequently playing tot parts that included Topsy in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." But she grew up to only 59½ inches—"although I stand up straight"—and domestic impresarios weren't interested in a tiny ingenue.

"Nobody wanted such a little sawed-off runt," she grimaces. "So we went away for three years—I got from Boston to New York via Paris and Bucharest."

Returning home, Kalisch squired her as a foreign star. He wouldn't even allow her to speak English in public for several years. The career has been bubbling along ever since—with the single exception of Broadway. A year ago she appeared with Robert Morley in the London version of "A Majority of One."

The vivacious Miss Bredin, just 27, is also petite

Molly Picon

(5' 4½") and a great believer in outdoor sports—"sailing, tennis and that sort of thing."

Her biggest problems since arriving here, "are lack of fresh air and being closed in—all these big buildings worry me."

Patricia, as you might suspect, is a small-town girl. Specifically, Swansea, Wales.

"My mother was very much against the stage. She thought all actresses went to the devil. I loved to dance, but I studied the piano. I hated it. I wore my nails long so they would click on the keys and annoy the teacher."

After seven years of such juvenile indenture, the teacher suggested she try singing—and the promising Bredin pipes were discovered.

MALE CLOTHES-UPS by BRAUER'S

One of our customers came up with an interesting idea for hot weather suits. His suggestion:

"The golf jacket you helped my kids select for Father's Day has a feature I like. That's an opening under the arms. This 'air-vent' idea would be great for summer suits. How come it isn't used?"

A cool idea — except for one thing. While no one's too critical of breaks under the arms of an outer jacket, smooth fit is important in a suit. Luckily, today's sheer summer fabrics that "breathe" gives us "air-vents" in the entire suit.

The odd thing is that the man who led the famous Charge of the Light Brigade created this style — the Earl of Cardigan. We are not sure whether it was due to a fashion flair or an aversion to slip-overs. At any rate, he's responsible for this popular style.

World's Top Basso Forsakes Opera for Broadway Musical

BY WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Cesare Siepi, whom experts rate the world's top operatic basso, is suddenly singing instead in Broadway musical comedy.

"After all," booms the brawny star, "good jazz is like good Beethoven."

And, he hastens to add, "this is not a switch of profession — it is a parenthesis."

The man with the big voice has every intention of returning later on to the hallowed halls of classic culture — making him the first such turnabout performer in musical annals.

The lusty 6-foot Cesare, who hails from the same north Italy region as Pinza, is 38 and, by critical consensus, in the prime of career.

Change-of-Pace

Cesare's change-of-pace is "Bravo Giovanni," a $400,000 project which opened at the Broadhurst playhouse on May.19 as the final arrival of the 1961-'62 theatrical season. He is under contract to stay with it for a year.

"Already I have some half commitments to do some opera later," the basso says. He has discovered some fascinating contrasts between the two forms of musical theater.

"Much more precise staging," he reports. "The whole approach to acting is different — you must do it all the time."

Siepi has found it necessary to turn down his accustomed volume.

"The voice is like a powerful car that must run in a narrow city street instead of out on the highway," he says. "So I have to restrain."

He also wanted to take speech lessons for crisper enunciation of dialogue, but the show management vetoed that, preferring the Siepi pronunciation as is — fundamentally distinct English laced with Italian inflection and an occasional teutonic "Ya-ya" for "Yes."

Fled Axis Service

His ability to "chew up a little German" results from his stay in Switzerland during World War II. That flight from Axis military service came soon after the Siepi career had been launched — as vocalist with a jazz sextet.

Siepi's musical education began with a boys' choir in Milan that specialized in Madrigals and Medieval litany.

A robust matinee idol in looks, the star explains his bachelorhood:

"In my family everybody marries very late, I don't know why. Also my concertizing has kept me jumping here, there, all around. I have a feeling that most singers who are married can't combine the two things. One must have time to take care of such important matter."

Club Tests TV Show

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dinah Shore will open her 1962-63 television series with one of the most pre-tested performances in TV history.

A few weeks ago Dinah scored with a one woman show at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas. The reaction was such that she and her sponsors decided to repeat the show for television.

A few days later she taped it for the color television cameras at NBC-TV in Burbank.

A wild holiday at the beach provides 116 minutes of laughter in 20th Century-Fox's family comedy, "Mr. Hobbs Takes a Vacation." Co-starred are Maureen O'Hara and James Stewart, with Fabian, John Saxon and Marie Wilson. The picture opens Wednesday for a one-week run at the Appleton Theatre.

Hints From Rocket Base Help Author of 'Horizon'

Manya Starr, writer of "The Clear Horizon," new daytime serial on the CBS Television Network (Monday through Friday, 10:30-11:55 a.m.) set at Cape Canaveral, says she gets much of her sidebar information about space shots and the people involved in them from an unusual source. Walter Cronkite, CBS News correspondent and anchor man for the Network's Project Mercury coverage, lives a block and a half from Miss Starr.

Their children are good friends, and often an anecdote reported by the Cronkite youngsters gives Miss Starr a starting point for an episode in the series.

FISH CREEK, Wis. — Wisconsin's oldest professional summer theatre, the Peninsula Players at Theatre in a Garden, will roll into its 28th consecutive season Friday under the production banner of Appleton-born James B. McKenzie, in association with his wife, Jeanne Bolan.

The players will open a series of top Broadway plays with the Ira Levin comedy, "Critic's Choice," which marks the return of Miss Bolan as leading lady of the company. Miss Bolan, who has worked closely with her husband on the Eastern operation of the Westport, Paper mill and Mineola Playhouses, received unqualified praise last season when she stepped in for the ailing Betty Field in Strindberg's "Miss Julie" at Westport.

Following "Critic's Choice," which will run 10 days, productions will open each Tuesday, and each will have a six-performance run, through Sunday.

Complete Schedule.

Scheduled for the season are the comedy-mystery, "Write Me a Murder" (July 10-15); Peter Ustinov's witty satire, "Romanoff and Juliet" (July 17-22); a new play in its pre-Broadway run, "The Armored Dove" (July 24-29); the smash hit, "The Miracle Worker" by William Gibson (July 31-Aug. 5), and the farce "Hotel Paradiso" (Aug. 7-12).

Included in the schedule is the mid-West premiere of the provocative Broadway success, "The Caretaker" (Aug. 14-19); "The Three-penny Opera," New York's longest-running musical, (Aug. 21-26), and the comedy, "Sleuth" in New York" (Aug. 28-Sept. 2).

Written by Nord Riley, "The Armored Dove" is destined for fall production on Broadway. A fast-moving drama set against the background of today's headlines, it has to do with a newly-divorced wife whose property settlement includes controlling stock of a company manufacturing vital defense devices.

A staunch pacifist, she has thrown a monkey wrench into both her husband's plans to win her back and the Navy's efforts to get the patent out of her hands.

Appleton-born producer James B. McKenzie, in association with his actress wife, Jeanne Bolan, is responsible for the fortunes of the Peninsula Players, Fish Creek, Wis. The Theatre in a Garden will roll into its 28th consecutive season Friday, June 29.

NEW SEASON AHEAD

for 'Theatre in a Garden' Glenn's Flight Even Had Effect on Film Fashions

Following the success of last season's introduction of the Bay View Lodge Supper Club, after-theatre refreshments will again be served. Highlight will be a musical revue featuring Nancy Priddy, Bruce Hyde and Judy O'Dea.

Staffers Return

Long-term staff members are returning to the players this season, ensuring a continuation of the management policies of the past. They include Kip Cohen, general manager; Charles Rome Smith, director; Charles Cinnamon, public relations director; Margaret Ritchie, business manager, and Tom Connors, house manager.

Returning actors include Appleton's William Munchow and Lynn Carlyle. Set designer will be Eugene Lee, with Richard Purvis as production stage manager and Tom Roester as technical director. The entire company will number approximately 40, including actors and production personnel.

In its initial season under the operation of McKenzie and Bolan, the Players doubled their grosses of the previous season. Located on State 42, the Theatre in a Garden is considered by many to be the most beautiful summer theatre in the Midwest.

Reservations may be made by telephone or by writing to the Peninsula Players, Fish Creek, Wis.

William Munchow

Later in the summer, the Players will present another pre-Broadway offering, "A Garden in the Sea," adapted by Michael Dyne from a celebrated short story by Henry James.

Set in the gardens and rooms of a villa in France, the play recounts a passionate romance of the past. Forming the framework of the plot is the search for the letters of this romance, whose disclosure pits one generation against another, finally erupting in a torrent of violent emotions.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Col. John Glenn may not have realized it but his orbital flight has had an influence on men's fashions in Hollywood.

Movie stylist Sy Devore said the self-heating principle of the astronaut's suit prompted Bing Crosby to ask Devore to come up with a golf packet that will be self-heating.

Bing is an all-weather golfer—so is Dean Martin. "We are designing a jacket with a built-in transistor system that will keep Bing comfy at Pebble Beach in January," says Devore. "And it's a steal from Col. Glenn."

Director Plugs CAP

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Director Henry King, a pilot since 1918 and one of the founders of the Civil Air Patrol, believes the CAP offers a positive cure for juvenile delinquency.

"Few people," says the veteran moviemaker, realize that the CAP cadet program is open to boys and girls too old for scouting. This age — the 1- to 16 group — is the most neglected in the country — and the age when most kids go wrong.

"It's the group we're looking for — and we can promise them more excitement than street gangs."

Outstanding Array of New Films Scheduled

An outstanding array of high-quality motion pictures has been scheduled for presentation at the Viking and Appleton Theatres during the summer months.

In keeping with the Hollywood production trend toward major attractions of special interest, the films include a number filmed in exotic foreign locations, as well as musicals, comedies and dramas that have proved popular with critics and public alike in their initial New York engagements.

Coming to the Viking are "That Touch of Mink," romantic comedy starring Cary Grant and Doris Day; Otto Preminger's powerful production of Allen Drury's "Advise and Consent;" the Academy Award-winning musical, "West Side Story," starring Natalie Wood and George Chakiris; Stanley Kramer's much-acclaimed "Judgment at Nuremberg;" Chuck Connors in "Geronimo;" Ernest Hemingway's "Adventures of a Young Man," starring Richard Beymer; Anne Bancroft and Patty Duke in William Gibson's "The Miracle Worker," and Stephen Boyd and Dolores Hart in Mark Robson's "Lisa."

Scheduled for presentation at the Appleton are James Stewart and Maureen O'Hara in "Mr. Hobbs Takes a Vacation;" Fred MacMurray and Jane Wyman in Walt Disney's gay family comedy, "Bon Voyage;" John Wayne in the colorful African adventure, "Hatari;" William Holden and Lilli Palmer in the action-packed "Counterfeit Traitor;" Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour in "Road to Hong Kong;" Robert Preston and Shirley Jones in Meredith Willson's long-running Broadway hit, "The Music Man;" Kim Novak and Jack Lemmon in "The Notorious Landlady," and Stanley Kubrick's production of the sensational novel, "Lolita," starring James Mason and Sue Lyon.

Local theatre managers agree the line-up is the finest they have been able to offer in several seasons.

Show Business Greats to Salute Sullivan Program

Steve Allen, Jack Benny, Red Buttons, Jerry Lewis, Phil Silvers and Kate Smith are among the show business personalities who will perform in a special, full-hour tribute to Ed Sullivan on the 14th anniversary of television's longest-running entertainment program, "The Ed Sullivan Show."

Theme of the broadcast is: "The Great Variety Shows and Their Stars Salute the All-Time Great Variety Show and Its Star, Ed Sullivan." All of the guests are current or former stars of their own television programs.

Allen, Benny, Buttons, Lewis, Silvers and Miss Smith will appear in special musical numbers and comedy routines. Allen, who was one of Sullivan's most formidable competitors when he conducted his own Sunday program, will make his first appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

The other five performers have been frequent guests on "The Ed Sullivan Show" throughout the last 14 years. Lewis appeared on the very first program, June 20, 1948.

Many of the details of the program will come as a surprise to Sullivan, who will be seated in the audience during the show. Two or three times during the evening he will be called on stage and his comments and reactions will be spontaneous and ad-libbed.

There will be no master of ceremonies for the program. Each of the acts will be blended, one into the other, in such a fashion that no introductions will be necessary.

Seated with Sullivan will be a specially invited studio audience of performers who will be on hand in New York's Studio 50 for the anniversary tribute. These guests will be drawn from the list of an estimated 14,000 personalities who have appeared on the program since its premiere.

With pop-eyed majesty, Zero Mostel makes a point in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." The gag-filled slapstick Broadway musical has become a quick box-office hit. Mostel, playing his first musical role since 1946, is happy about what he sees as a return of rowdy fun to public popularity.

Public Affairs Hour Rescheduled by WAPL

Starting today, the WAPL "Public Affairs" hour moves to a new time slot for the summer months. It will carry along a new feature program being added for the summer series.

Formerly heard between 1:05 and 3:30, the segment will be presented between 6 and 7 p.m. until later this fall.

"Capitol Report," featuring Senator William Proxmire and Senator Alexander Wiley on alternate weeks, is being dropped entirely, and will be replaced with "Report to the City," a weekly news conference-type program from Mayor Clarence Mitchell's office.

That particular feature was taken off the air shortly before the spring elections this year.

Being added for the first time is the half-hour presentation, "This Is Youth-for-Christ," produced by Youth for Christ International, Chicago. The program will be heard from 6:30 to 7 p.m. three times each month, and will alternate once each month with "All America Wants to Know," produced by Reader's Digest.

Summarized, the summer version of the WAPL Public Affairs Hour is scheduled as follows: 6 p.m., Report to the City; 6:10, Medical Milestones, prepared by the American Medical Society; 6:15, Our Date with History; 6:30, This Is Youth for Christ (alternating, once monthly, with All America Wants to Know.)

Operatic Selections to Be Heard on WNAM-Radio

A variety of compositions by Puccini, Dvorak and Chopin will be featured on this evening's "Symphony of the Air" program over WNAM-Radio.

The program will begin with highlights from Puccini's "Turandot" as performed by the Roman Opera House orchestra and chorus. Next, Artur Rubinstein, pianist, will offer the Chopin scherzos.

Operatic tenor Jussi Bjorling will present operatic selections, after which Fritz Reiner will conduct the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in Dvorak's "New World Symphony."

The evening of music will conclude with Chopin selections by Vladimir Horowitz.

Rowdy Mirth Back in Vogue, Exults Clown

NEW YORK (AP) — Rowdy mirth is back in style — to Zero Mostel's vast delight.

From a standing start at the boxoffice with only a small advance sale, the show bounded into the best-seller column on a combination of some good reviews and what is known in the trade as strong word-of-mouth.

"It's a throwback to all the old devices," notes Mostel, ticking off the sight gags, slapstick and farcical plotting with which the entertainment at the Alvin theater bristles. The role is his first in a musical since 1946.

Cast as Slave

As a Roman slave conniving his way to freedom, the huge, goggle-eyed star is surrounded by a number of other highly comic craftsmen — David Burns, Jack Gilford, Raymond Walburn. It is a change from yore of which he approves.

"The old-time comic who wouldn't allow another on stage with him is out," he declares. "And anyway, working with other comedians is a great help. You all know what you're trying to do."

Mostel chose the assignment over a diversity of other calls for his mercurial skills—including bids to play Shakespeare's Falstaff this summer at both Stratford-Upon-Avon and Stratford, Conn.

As an expert on buffonery, Mostel was recently summoned to Harvard University to lecture in a series previously reserved to literary savants. He delivered an opinion of mirth that goes beyond mere momentary jest.

"The freedom of any society," he asserted, "varies proportionately with the volume of its laughter."

Would Play Lear

He also feels a tug toward serious dramatics. The man who once imitated a coffee percolator during a night club act would someday like to play King Lear.

"I think the English control emotion too much," he says of that great role. "You've got to let it all out for this."

When off-stage, Mostel has a second career—as a painter of brightly colored abstractions which command high prices.

Soviets Cheer Goodman, Open Doors to Jazz

By LEONARD FEATHER
MOSCOW (AP)—After hot jazz, New Orleans jazz and cool jazz, enough can gain access to the West Coast jazz and East Coast jazz, will the next step be Soviet jazz?

The possibility is not as remote as it might seem. Today there are indications that after many years of being completely stifled and a couple of years of being tolerated, jazz in the Soviet Union may be entering a third phase in which its advocates, dealing with it as though it were steel or fertilizer, will try to outproduce the Americans and develop techniques of their own.

Already there are jazz clubs in Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev. Their main objectives are no longer merely to listen to American music or try to imitate it, but rather to evolve a new style of music along similar lines.

At jazz festivals held annually since 1957 in Tartu, Estonia, and recently at Leningrad University, new works by some of these composers have been introduced. Unlike the stiff, heavy over-orchestrated music of the older Soviet composers who have tried to grapple with jazz, these works are authentic and leave considerable freedom for improvisation.

Typical of these young writers is Vadim Sakun, a hard swinging pianist who has written one work, "With Inspiration" that would provide a thoroughly suitable vehicle for Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis or almost any other top American combo.

As Benny Goodman observed during his meeting at the Cominform Union in Moscow, jazz is no longer merely an American of a recent jazz club concert.

music. It is a music of the world. One of the factors that held it back for many years outside America was the inability of musicians in other countries to develop the right rhythmic feeling, as art. And that's the way we Today, because of the vastly accelerated communications, a Soviet musician who tries hard enough can gain access to the new developments in jazz and learn, from assiduous listening, how to swing.

Says Leonid Pereversev, a young electronic technician who doubles as ethno-musicologist:

"For many years in the thirties, our cultural traditions were confused. Third-rate popular restaurants music and operettas, fourth-hand carbon copies of American jazz, all were thriving — complete with loud drums and comedy effects.

"This kind of thing was criticized and wrongly equated with true jazz. As a result, all jazz was condemned. Only in recent years has there been a realization that jazz is not mere entertainment or music for dancing."

Pereversev says that now jazz is out in the open again, dozens of musicians in the 18-25 age bracket are working on the evolution of a style that may ultimately earn international acceptance, not as an imitation of the American original but as music with an identity of its own.

The next steps will be the hardest. At present there is not a single record by any of the remarkable young Soviet jazzmen. Nor is there yet any official endorsement by the Union of Soviet Composers of the works they are creating. Other areas, however, are slowly opening up. For a full hour on the night of June 2 Radio Moscow broadcast with commentary in four languages a tape recording of a recent jazz club concert.

"But please don't say we're using jazz as an ideological weapon," Pereversev hastened to add. "When the Bolshoi Ballet is sent overseas, it is sent over simply as art. And that's the way we want our jazz to be treated."

Drive is also known as ambition, courage, guts and some unprintable names. "But mostly," says Miss Harman, "it's hard work."

Back in 1952, Universal-International plucked Miss Harman from the UCLA theater arts department to head the studio talent school. Her class that year included some $100-a-week bit actors, but mostly $75-a-week unknowns.

In the roster of 1952 were Rock Hudson, Tony Curtis, Audie Murphy, Stu Whitman, Jack Kelly, Dennis Weaver, Hugh O'Brian, Rex Reason, Brett Halsey, Barbara Rush, Lori Nelson, Lisa Gaye, Susan Ball, Richard Long, and Buddy Hackett.

Shelley Winters, who had achieved some name already, joined the class too.

No wonder, it's called "the blockbusting class of '52."

Rock and Tony are listed among the golden dozen of Hollywood's big money-makers. Shelley won an Oscar in 1961 and Whitman was nominated for one this year.

The rest, except for Miss Ball, are all successful performers in movies or television. Miss Ball, after a tragic fight with cancer, died in 1955 at the age of 21 just as she seemed on the verge of big success.

With 8 Kids to Feed, He Doesn't Want to Be Star

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Show business tradition has it that every ambitious, hard-working young actor yearns to be a star.

But Paul Picerni, ambitious and hard-working second lead in ABC's "The Untouchables," harbors no such dreams. He has been making a decent living in Hollywood for more than 12 years now, first as a contract player in Warner Brothers' movies and then as a free-lance actor — usually playing a villain. For the last two seasons he has been profitably playing Lee Hobson, Eliot Ness' top aide.

"Great Financially" Picerni is quite happy about his acting lot. "Perhaps it's true that playing the same part for the past two years has done nothing for me artistically," he admits. "But it certainly has been great financially."

The latter is important: Picerni and his wife, former ballet dancer Marie Mason, are the parents of eight children—four boys and four girls—ranging in age from 13 to 5. Anthony, George, who had been The Picernis live in a huge, rambling house in Tarzana, in Southern California's San Fernando Valley. It has five bedrooms and five bathrooms. The family car is a nine-passenger station wagon. And Paul believes the Picernis achieved an all-time record at the local supermarket one day recently when, during an ordinary shopping expedition, the bill came to $158—and filled six carts.

Picerni made his first "Untouchables" appearance in the original two-part episode that was a documentary approach to the story of Al Capone, the Chicago crime overlord.

He was called back into the show—to be a lawman—after a night club operator who, at one point, slapped a girl around, and was a victim in the final shoot-out.

He had been the strong right arm, in quit for a costarring role in "Checkmate."

Going to Hollywood? Then You Need Drive

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—You graduate this June from snow shoe high school. Or maybe it's erasmus-hall in Brooklyn.

You've got looks and personality, and weren't you the smash hit of the senior play? You want to come to Hollywood.

After all, if Troy Donahue and Natalie Wood can make it, so can you.

Mom and dad argue for college first. Hollywood, they say, is a jungle, a rat race — the home of the casting couch. And they're mostly right.

But you win, and amidst much head shaking at home you leave for Hollywood. All you have besides carfare and a little support money is drive — charging, four-speed-ahead-and-no-reserve drive. High school senior, you may make it.

Listen to Estelle Harman, a famed drama coach who has converted more than her share of unknown high schoolers into successful actors and actresses — some into major stars.

"It takes four personal factors to make a star," says Miss Harman. "Talent, physical attractiveness, personality and drive. And of the leg, died in 1955 at the age of 21 just as she seemed on the absolutely must have is drive."

She Helps the "Forgotten" Blind

After watching her nearly sightless son struggle with the blurred images in standard texts, Lorraine Marchi put thoughts into action By THEODORE IRWIN

GENE MARCHI, JR., cherubic and cheerful, was four months old when an eye specialist discovered that his vision was impaired. How much he would ever see, the doctor couldn't predict.

The diagnosis was understandably a shock to his mother, Lorraine Marchi, the vibrant, brown-eyed wife of a San Francisco builder.

"When the doctor broke the news, I was numb," she recalls. "I couldn't weep for my baby, nor even feel bitter or resentful. I was thankful that at least he wasn't totally blind. But gradually I began to realize the implications."

It turned out that Gene's visual acuity in his better eye was only 20/200 (10 percent of sight), which meant that while he could see, he was considered "legally blind."

"I thought that when Gene went to school," Mrs. Marchi says, "he'd merely have to hold his books closer. I never dreamed there were people who, even with corrective lenses, could not read normal print."

Like Gene, more than 90,000 school children in the U.S. live in such a twilight zone—the no man's land between the seeing and the sightless. Only one in 10 is receiving special help at school.

Mrs. Marchi was passionately determined to give her son the education to which every American child has a right. In the 16 years since that terrible day at the doctor's office, she has relentlessly fought to develop large-type books which Gene and others like him could read. In the process, she has opened windows of learning for thousands of such youngsters and sparked a national organization dedicated to aiding them.

The long uphill struggle began when Gene entered first grade. Because he was "legally blind," he was transferred to a school for the blind where he could be taught Braille. Then his mother heard of a special sight-saving class at a San Francisco elementary school.

Theoretically the youngsters in the sight-saving class were to be taught with texts printed in oversize type. But there were virtually no such schoolbooks available, except for a few hand-copied pages. The teacher appealed to Mrs. Marchi.

The dynamic young housewife was fired to action. For more than a year she investigated conditions in other California cities. Once Mrs. Marchi thought she had found the answer in a newly developed magnifier for enlarging print. When that proved impractical for schoolroom use, she continued her stubborn search.

Armed with facts, she called on health officials, heads of special education departments, leaders of civic organizations, prominent ophthalmologists, pediatricians, and psychiatrists. Under her stimulus, a Committee to Aid Visually Handicapped Children was formed.

With borrowed typewriters, a group of volunteers began to transcribe books into large print. They prepared 500 master copies of 12 books to be printed by an offset process. Then a local hospital offered the use of its multigraph machine. Mrs. Marchi waited three months, but the operator couldn't find time to print the books.

Panicky at the thought that the school year would start without her precious books, the tenacious mother took over herself, after brief lessons on how to run the complex equipment.

Singlehanded, working nights and weekends, she spent almost four weeks printing 25 copies of seven books. But they were finished for the opening of school—and jubilantly welcomed.

FOR THE FIRST TIME, a partially seeing child knew how it felt to have a book of his own. It was Mrs. Marchi's initial triumph.

A year and a half later, a multigraph machine contributed by a local women's organization was installed in the basement of the Marchi home. Today there are two machines, and with the aid of several assistants Mrs. Marchi still produces large-type books there.

As word of the unique service in San Francisco spread across the nation, the need for a national organization became evident. In December, 1959, National Aid to the Visually Handicapped, a nonprofit volunteer agency, was founded in California.

Today chapters have been chartered or are springing up in six cities outside San Francisco. NAVH has produced more than 22,500 volumes of 169 titles—including books on everything from science and spelling to novels.

Mrs. Marchi (right) and volunteer look on as Gene examines first large-type book his mother made

Meanwhile, Gene Marchi, Jr., the boy whose affliction started the ball rolling, has grown up almost like any normal child. Today, a junior in high school, Gene rides a bicycle and plays basketball and football despite his handicap.

To Lorraine Marchi, the rewards of her efforts go beyond the satisfaction of watching her son's heartening progress.

"I find a deep joy," she says, "in knowing that similarly afflicted children now have the chance to get an education through books—the proper books to help them grow into self-sufficient, contributing members of their community."

WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW

THE LACK OF STYLE in Mrs. Khrushchev's dress so appalled the distinguished London fashion designer, John Cavanagh, that he called the Soviet embassy recently and said he wanted to design some clothes for her.

"Could you give me her measurements, please?" he asked.

The embassy official promised to call him back, and duly did so. "I have relayed your question to the ambassador," the stony voice on the phone told Cavanagh. "He says he is not quite sure, but he thinks that Mrs. Khrushchev's measurements are probably the same as Mr. Khrushchev's measurements."

The Soviet ambassador's little joke is significant, for a leader's personality can be assessed by the jests his own people make about him. When Stalin was in power, the Russians were too frightened to see anything funny in him or his regime. But under Nikita Khrushchev they breathe—and joke—easier.

Why this should be so is an enigma. Khrushchev rose to prominence during Stalin's regime, and he apparently felt right at home in its atmosphere of murder, treachery, and terror. In the 1930s, Khrushchev had a leading role in the purges that sent an untold number of Russians to death before firing squads or to the living death of the Siberian prison camps. Twenty years later, he earned the bloody sobriquet, Butcher of Budapest.

Yet, there is a difference between Stalin and Khrushchev. In the cold marble slab of Stalin's personality there seemed to be no veins of human warmth or weakness. In Khrushchev, streaks of humanity are readily apparent. It may not be much of a difference, but to the long-suffering Russians even a slight change for the better seems a great relief.

The Voice of a "Cooing Bull"

In appearance, Khrushchev is short, thickset, and overweight, with a sallow complexion and very small feet. Although he laughs freely, he misses nothing that is going on around him, and his small but usually merry eyes dart over a crowded room even when he is speaking to someone. His voice has been described as like that of a "cooing bull."

Khrushchev's hands are his most unexpected feature. They are small and artistic with slender, tapering fingers—extraordinary for a man who has been a coal miner, metalworker, and shepherd. He is very vain about them and has them manicured regularly.

He wears made-to-measure shoes with false shoelaces and elastic bands that permit him to take them off and put them on without bending. This is useful when he must sit through long banquets—or when he wants to get a shoe off in a hurry to bang a desk at the U. N.

As leader of the Soviet state, Khrushchev has two homes and a large domestic staff.

ABOUT KHRUSHCHEV

By GEOFFREY BOCCA

He spends most of his time at his dacha (country house) 30 miles from Moscow. The address, in case you wish to write him, is 20 Vorobyovskoe Chaussee, Lenin Hill, in the village of Usova. The house was built in 1956 and is a formidable, tasteless place with 40 rooms, columned terraces, and a great park. Khrushchev loves animals, and several dogs romp around the house. His favorite is a wolf dog called Arbat, which was discovered as a stray pup by one of his grandchildren.

On vacation, the Khrushchev family goes to another dacha at Sochi on the Black Sea coast (the Russian Riviera). They always take with them a staff that includes two maids in white Victorian uniform with starched bonnets.

Khrushchev has been married twice; the first time in 1917, the year of the Russian Revolution. He was 23, already a hard drinker, and the aggressive center-forward on the Hughesoffka soccer team, champions of the Don Basin. His bride was Galina Boutzenko, about whose background little is known.

Within three years, she gave him three children—a son and two daughters. What happened next is something of a mystery. One of the little girls died, and it is said Galina was so heart-broken she had a nervous collapse and died in the psychiatric ward of Kharkov Hospital.

In 1921, Nikita met Nina Petrovna. It was an encounter that changed the course of history because, without her, the uneducated muzhik never would have risen to the heights he did. Nina was an ardent Communist, but she also was educated and a lady. Her father had been a tsarist officer, and her tastes were cultivated.

Nina assumed the task of raising Nikita's two surviving children from his first marriage; and they had three more youngsters of their own.

The children of the first marriage were Leonide and Djoulia. If Leonide were alive today, he would be 45. During World War II, he was piloting a plane on a strafing sortie over Stalin-grad when he was shot down and killed. Even today, Khrushchev cannot speak of him without emotion. Djoulia, a year younger than her brother, is totally unglamorous with thick black hair and glasses. She works as a scientist.

The Second Set of Children

Oldest of Nikita's and Nina's children is Rada, who is married to Aleksei Adzhubei, one of Russia's most influential journalists. The second child is Serge, who tends to be his father's favorite—probably because he is tall, rather good-looking, and somewhat wayward. Serge's wife is a Jewish girl, a fact Khrushchev makes political capital of when accused of anti-Semitism. The youngest child is Elena, who is 23, demurely pretty, and a law student at Moscow University.

Khrushchev and his wife seem genuinely devoted. He calls her Ninonka, an affectionate form of Nina. She calls him Medvod, which means "bear." But Nina has failed in one respect. Despite her 41-year educational campaign, Nikita remains lowbrow in his tastes. He listens patiently when she puts classical records on the hi-fi, but he prefers rowdy folk dances and the rousing but uncomplicated songs of the Red Army choirs.

Khrushchev's attitude toward drinking isn't very sophisticated, either. While visiting Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia in 1955, he gave a performance which won't soon be forgotten in the annals of diplomacy. Warmed by plum brandy, he tried to kiss Tito's attractive wife Jovanka. She laughingly dodged him. But Tito was unamused and suggested it was getting late. Nikita ignored the suggestion and went on drinking.

Soon he was after Madame Tito again. He serenaded her with a melancholy Russian ballad and suggested a walk in the moonlight. She politely declined. To break up the party, the jittery guests rose to go to bed. Nikita refused; he said he was going to sleep on Tito's sofa. Eventually, however, he was persuaded to retire.

When Khrushchev awoke, he must have realized what a fool he had made of himself. Since that time, he has never drunk in public. But he still tipsles at home. His favorite drink is Ukrainian cognac with a beer chaser. For his hangovers, Nina has a somewhat savage cure—a breakfast of raw sauerkraut and dill pickles.

A Weakness for Women, Too

Nikita's weakness for drink is matched by his weakness for women—despite his genuine affection for Nina.

He reportedly owed the first big advance in his political career to Rosa Kaganovitch, a sister of one of Stalin's top henchmen. This was in 1935 when Rosa was Stalin's mistress. Rosa, fascinated by Nikita's toughness, brought him to the attention of Stalin. But this did not deter Khrushchev from later purging her brother.

For years, Khrushchev's favorite woman friend was Irina Furtseva, who is now Soviet minister of culture. Once extremely fat, she melted off 20 pounds and revealed herself to be an attractive woman. She went with Khrushchev on his state visit to India, and it is understood she had her heart set on going along with him to the United States, too. Instead, he took Nina. Irina reportedly was furious. Since then, their relationship has cooled.

As befits a woman fancier, Khrushchev also is something of a dandy in his dress. He likes silk shirts, seldom wears the same set of cuff links twice, and drapes his roly-poly form in suits custom-made by Angelo Litrico, a clever little Sicilian tailor who works in Rome.

But Khrushchev, the fashion plate, is a rather recent creation. During most of his public life, he wore the absurdly padded shoulders and bell-bottomed trousers which are standard dress among Soviet officialdom. His conversion to Western style came when he suddenly shof to the top of the Communist hierarchy and began rubbing shoulders with such debonair dressers as Sir Anthony Eden and Marshal Tito. For years, Molotov and Vishinsky had been traveling the world in their shapeless Russian suits, indifferent to the giggles of Western observers. But as soon as Khrushchev realized how dowdy his clothes were, he felt ashamed, asked what could be done about them, and—on the advice of some of his more knowing diplomats—sent his measurements off to Litrico in Rome.

Khrushchev's reaction to being dressed differently from other world leaders is revealing. It bares two of his basic traits—a searching curiosity and a quivering sensitivity.

What he has seen on his trips outside the Iron Curtain has not been lost on him. He realizes the West is ahead of Russia in many ways, and he is determined first to narrow the gap, then push his own country into the lead. Whatever effect his actions may have on the world, they have made life more bearable inside Russia.

One Kind of Curtain Pushed Back

Little incidents can reveal a lot. During a visit to Moscow, I saw Khrushchev sweep out of the Kremlin in his large car with a simple security cortege, no more and no less grandly than any other chief of state. The veteran Moscow correspondent who was standing beside me commented: "Before Khrushchev, Soviet leaders traveled in cars with the curtains closed. It was a continuation of the old tsarist principle that leaders should not be seen by the masses. To me, there is great symbolic meaning in Khrushchev's simple act of opening the curtains."

To achieve his ambitious goals for his country, Khrushchev has been pushing himself to almost superhuman limits. One wonders how long he can keep it up.

In 1959, there were whispers in Moscow that Khrushchev was on the verge of a breakdown. One diplomat, on leaving a conference with him, said, "His complexion is ghastly. I never saw a man heading so surely for a heart attack."

Khrushchev himself was not unaware of the warning signs. That year, he went to Romania for a thorough checkup from Professor Anna Asland of Bucharest University. It was an odd choice—and one that suggests Khrushchev shares with Stalin an enthusiasm for longevity nostrums. Professor Asland is notorious for her "rejuvenating process," which entails dosing her patients with what she calls H-3, but which is nothing more than novocain. Western medical scientists consider her an out-and-out quack.

When patients feel benefit from such treatments, it is usually a psychological response—and Khrushchev returned to Moscow feeling better. In 1960, he went on a strict diet to lose weight and relieve arterial pressure. Since then, his health has remained reasonably steady.

But, at 68, it would take a miracle to add many more productive years to Khrushchev's life—and of course the world leader of atheistic communism doesn't believe in miracles.

Nikita Khrushchev is a man who has done great evil; he is a man to be feared. Nevertheless, I can't help but feel his death will be no cause for rejoicing in the West. His replacement could be infinitely worse.

Stevens Twist Twill,
for hard-working men

I like to see my husband leave for work in neat, well-fitting work clothes. It gives me a little extra feeling of pride and it's nice to know I save money when I pick out work shirts and pants with the Twist Twill® symbol on the label. I've learned from experience that Twist Twill wears better and stays new looking much longer.

Twist Twill can't be matched for smoothness and comfort. Your man will appreciate that. It's 100% cotton, Sanforized® against shrinkage, of course. Washes and irons like a dream. If his job is extra tough on work clothes, ask for Type 420 nylon reinforced Twist Twill. And be sure to look over your favorite store's selection of Stevens Twist Twill in vat-dyed colors for smartly styled sports and leisure wear, too.

It had been a long wait in the doctor's office, and the housewife passed the time reading magazines. When her turn finally came, she put down the magazines and rose—only to find that her leg had gone to sleep. "Oh, this old leg," she sighed, limping awkwardly into the office.

The doctor merely had to write her a new prescription for a minor virus attack, so she was on her way home in a few minutes. As she walked briskly past two elderly ladies in the waiting room, she heard one say to the other:

"You see, dear! I told you this doctor is absolutely miraculous!"

A fisherman was sitting happily on shore watching his line bob lazily in the calm lake. A youngster appeared and stood behind him watching the scene intently. The fisherman tried to ignore the boy, but after more than an hour of this tableau he became impatient.

"Did it ever occur to you to do some fishing on your own?" he asked the boy.

"Oh, no," the youngster replied. "I don't have the patience for it."

How to Improve Your Vacation Pictures

Follow this expert's advice and you can enjoy this year's trip in 1972—through fine photographs

By FRITZ HENLE

One of America's foremost photographers and author of "Photography for Everyone"

CAN YOU RECALL where you stayed on your vacation 10 years ago, the scenery you saw, the fun you had?

Most people can't, at least, not immediately. But there is a way to keep those vacation memories alive—store them on film. As a professional photographer, I have learned some helpful procedures that I would like to pass on to you.

If you are vacationing at the beach, remember that the brightness of the sand can cause you to overexpose your pictures. If your camera has an adjustable lens, increase the lens setting one stop to compensate for the glare.

Strive to add life to scenic pictures by focusing on an interesting subject in the foreground. A close-up picture of a pretty girl looking at a lake is far more appealing than a mere shot of the lake itself.

If you are touring through forests or rural countryside, search for animals and other wildlife to give your pictures a natural spontaneity. Once you find them, get as close as you can before clicking the shutter. A telephoto lens is helpful here.

In the mountains, don't aim your camera solely at the peaks. By doing so, you will include too much sky—and too little mountain. In a photograph, blue sky is beautiful but sometimes dull.

Most people prefer to use color film on vacation trips, but I know from experience that scenic wonders sometimes can be shown best in black and white. Shadings of black and gray also add "mood" to sunrise and sunset pictures.

Taking pictures at night is an opportunity overlooked by many amateurs. Fourth of July fireworks photographs are particularly appealing. In taking them, use a tripod to avoid blur. If you don't have one handy, rest your camera on a railing or some other solid support, open the shutter as the rocket goes up, and leave it open until the colorful display has registered itself on the film.

A simple camera can catch the brilliance of fireworks, but an adjustable camera is needed for such after-dark shots as theater marquees, carnivals, and cookouts.

Whatever kind of camera you have, take good care of it. No camera will perform well if left exposed to heat, water, dirt, or sand for an extended period.

And when taking pictures, don't jerk the shutter release button, that will blur the photograph. A rifleman can only hit a bull's-eye if he squeezes the trigger slowly. The same is true with cameras.

Wherever you go on your trip, keep your camera with you. That way you will avoid the agony of the vacationer at Cape Canaveral, Fla., who dropped off his camera at his motel only minutes before he encountered astronaut John Glenn in a shop.

A final tip: write brief descriptions of your pictures on the package of the exposed roll of film. Ten years from now, accurate captions will be an added boon in helping you enjoy your 1962 vacation all over again.

Shrimp Jambalaya

TO COOK: 30 MIN.

- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped green onion
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¼ lb. diced cooked ham
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed in a garlic press or minced
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 3 large tomatoes, coarsely chopped (about 5 cups)
- ¼ cup chopped parsley
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- ¼ teaspoon thyme
- ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 3 ½-oz. cans shrimp, rinsed under running cold water
- ¼ cup coarsely chopped green pepper

1. Heat butter in a large, heavy skillet over low heat. Stir in next six ingredients. Cook over medium heat about 5 min., or until onion is tender, stirring occasionally.
2. Stir in chicken broth and next seven ingredients; cover and bring to boiling.
3. Add rice gradually, stirring with a fork. Simmer, covered, 20 min., or until rice is tender.
4. Mix in shrimp and remaining green pepper. Simmer, uncovered, about 5 min. longer.

6 to 8 servings

Note: If desired, ¼ lb. hot sausage, sliced and cooked, may be substituted for the ham.

Chocolate Spice Cake à la Creole

TO PREPARE: 30 MIN.

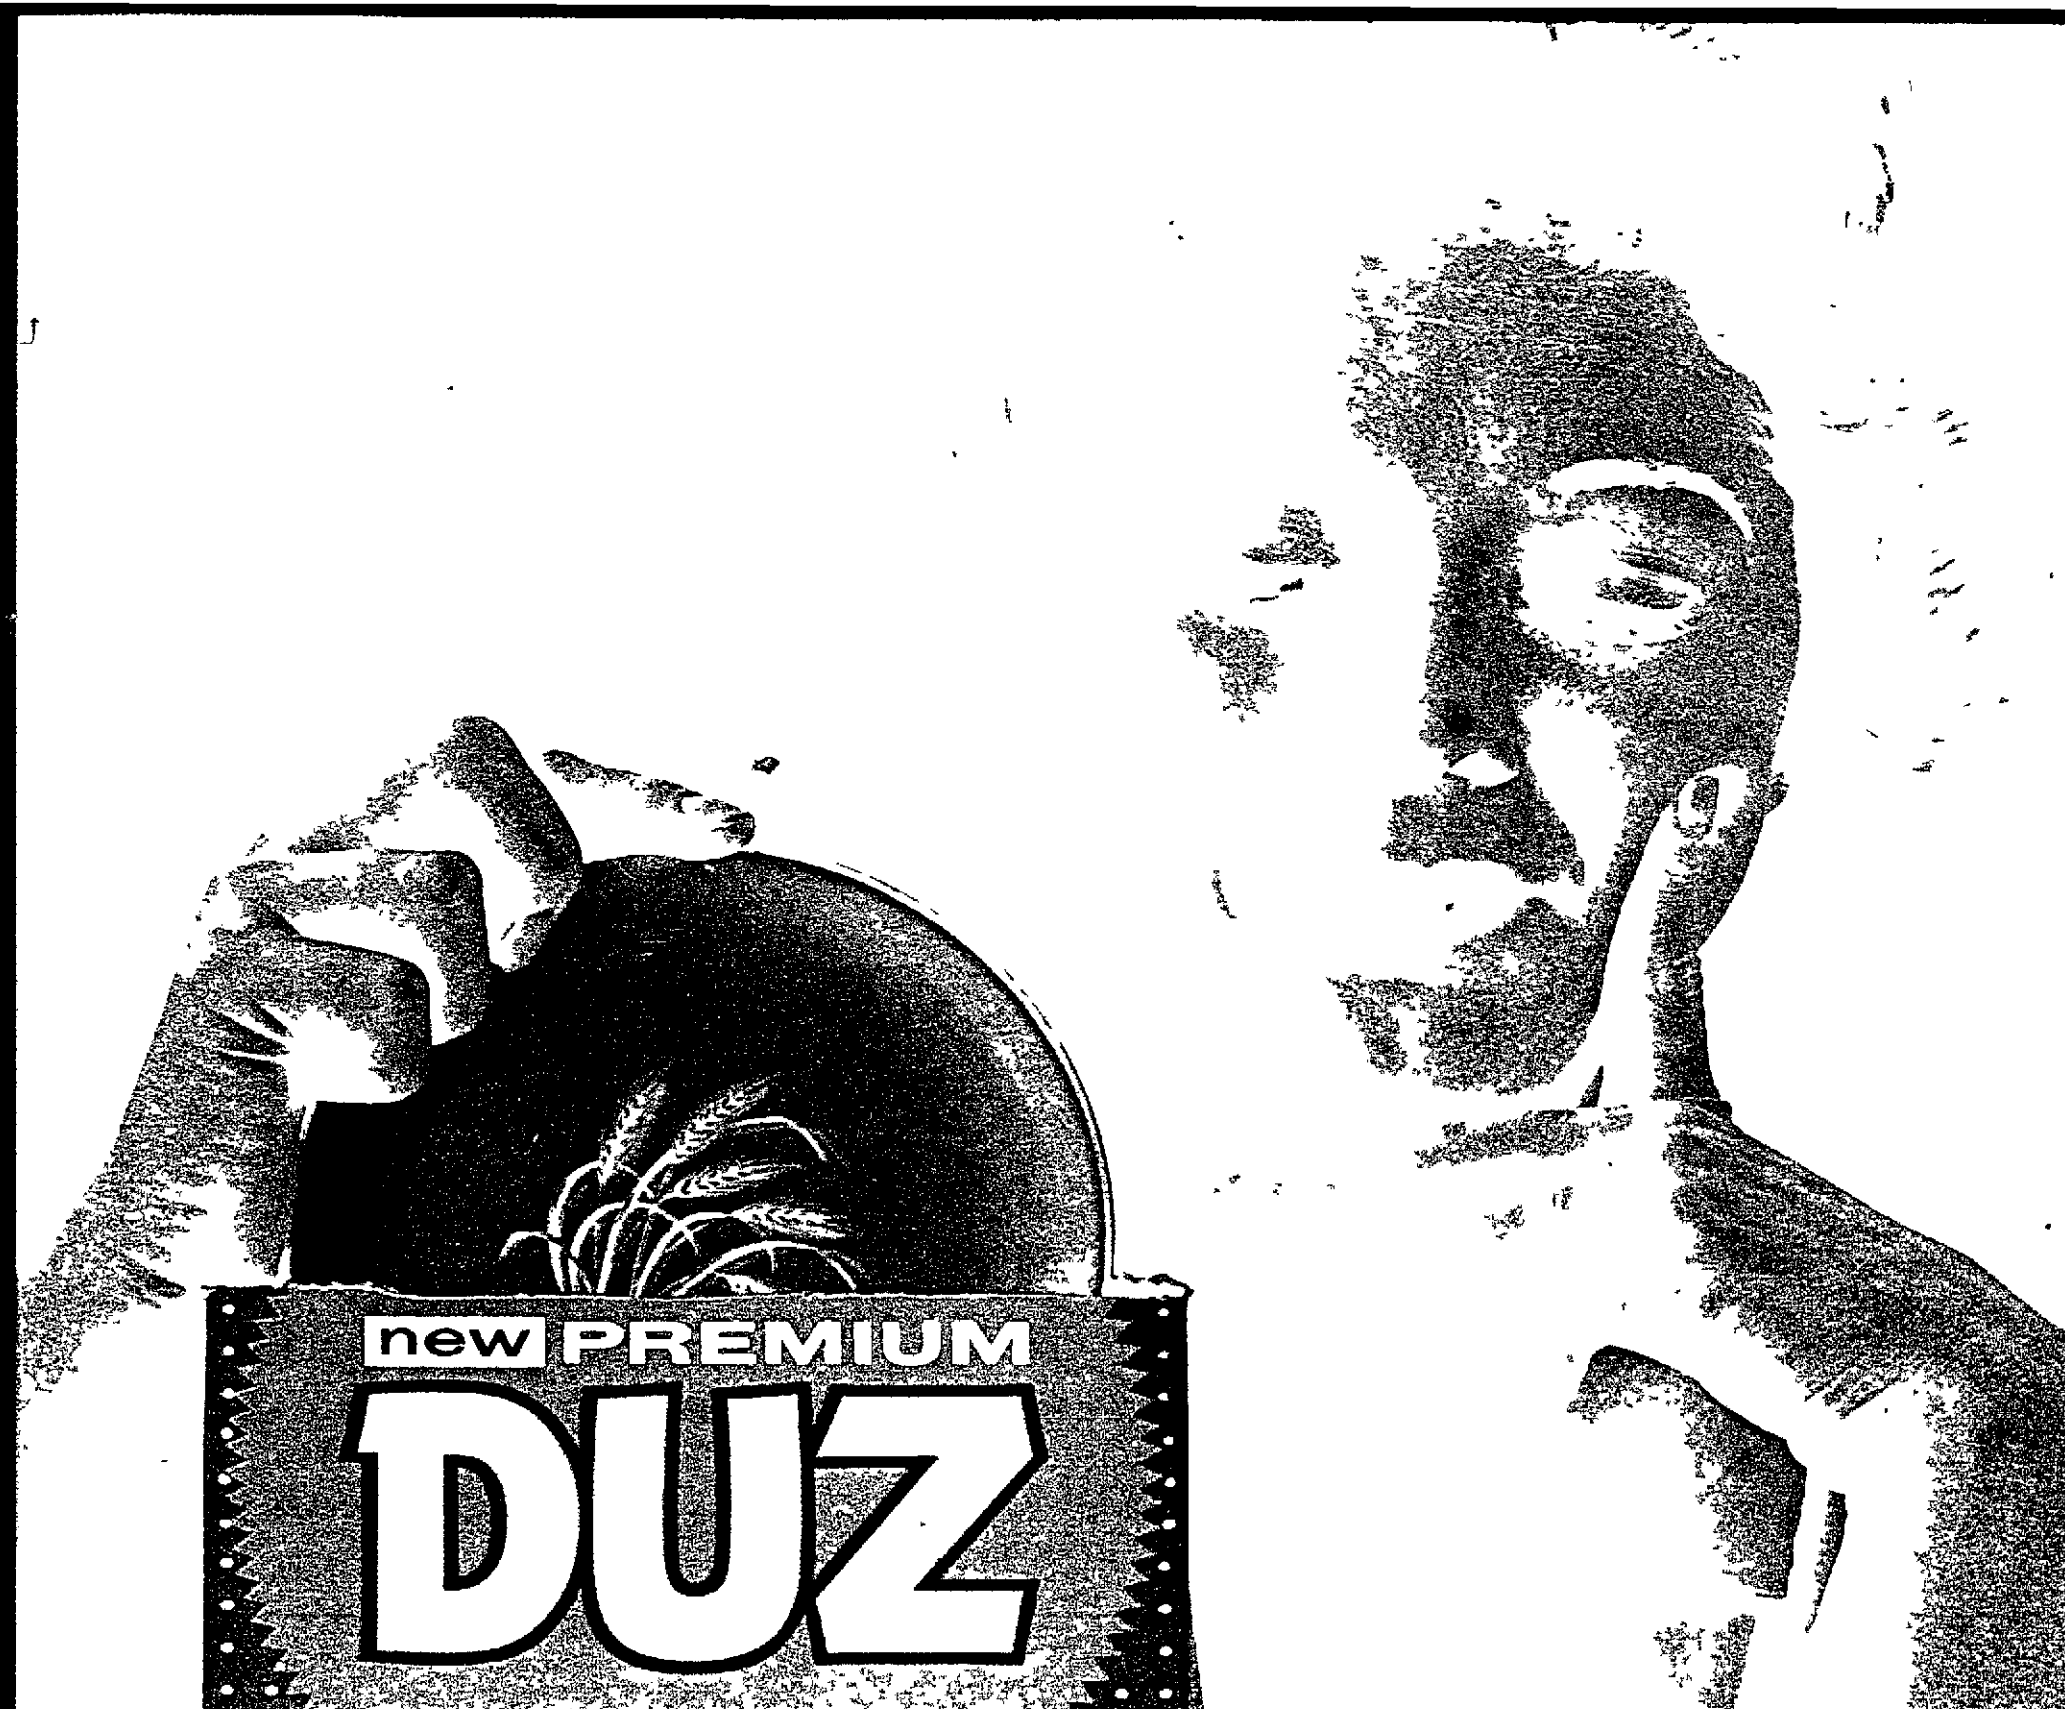

TO BAKE: 30-35 MIN.

- 6 sq. (6 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, grated
- 1½ cups water
- 4 cups sifted cake flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons ground cinnamon
- ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
- 1 cup butter
- 2½ teaspoons vanilla extract
- 3 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
- 4 eggs, well beaten
- ½ cup buttermilk

1. Lightly grease bottoms of three 9-in. round layer-cake pans; line bottoms with waxed paper; grease paper.
2. Combine chocolate and water in top of a double boiler. Cook over simmering water, stirring occasionally, until chocolate is melted and mixture thickens. Set aside to cool.
3. Sift next seven ingredients together; stir to blend spices. Set aside.
4. Cream butter and extract. Add sugar gradually, creaming until fluffy after each addition.
5. Add eggs in thirds, beating thoroughly after each addition.
6. Beating only until smooth after each addition, alternately add dry ingredients in fourths and buttermilk in thirds to the creamed mixture. Add chocolate and beat only until smooth. Turn batter into pans.
7. Bake at 375°F 30 to 35 min., or until cake tester or wooden pick inserted in center of cake comes out clean.
8. Cool 10 min. in pans on cooling racks; remove cake layers from pans. Cool layers completely on racks. Frost and fill with a chocolate frosting.

"What about the dishes? They really are lovely looking... bordered with real 22 carat gold. And they're even oven-proof. With this 'Golden Wheat' pattern, I could set a nicer table for the family... even for every day."

"Then, how about the detergent? It says on the box... Premium Duz is made by Procter & Gamble! And if anyone knows how to get clothes clean, they sure do. As long as it's Procter & Gamble's, it's fine with me."

"So what's the explanation? Well... with all the women I know buying Premium Duz these days, Procter & Gamble must have to buy dishes by the million... and then they pass the bargain along to us. I know I could never buy dishes like this and good detergent separately for so little."

"And... now that I see what a value I'm getting, I wish I'd started with Premium Duz months ago. By now, I'd have a whole set of dishes to show for all my washings!"

Creole Doughnuts

In the wee morning hours after a night of gaiety in "vieux carré" of New Orleans, it has long been traditional to stop at the French market for doughnuts and café noir.

TO PREPARE: 25 MIN. TO DEEP FRY: 2-3 MIN.
(allow time for dough to rise)

- 1 pkg. active dry yeast
- ¼ cup warm water, 110°F to 115°F
(Or if using compressed yeast, soften 1 cake in ¼ cup lukewarm water, 80°F to 85°F.)
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup cooking oil
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 2 cups milk, scalded
- 1 cup flour
- 5½ to 6 cups flour
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- Hydrogenated vegetable shortening, all-purpose shortening, lard, or cooking oil for deep frying

1. Soften yeast in warm water; allow to stand 5 to 10 min.
2. Meanwhile, put sugar, cooking oil, and salt into a large bowl. Immediately pour scalded milk over ingredients in bowl; stir until sugar is dissolved.
3. Cool to lukewarm; blend in 1 cup flour, beating until smooth. Stir softened yeast and add, mixing well. Add about one-half of the flour to yeast mixture and beat until very smooth. Beat in the eggs.
4. Beat in enough of the remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn dough onto a lightly floured surface and allow to rest 5 to 10 min. Knead until dough is smooth and does not stick to the surface, about 5 min.
5. Form dough into a ball and put into a lightly greased deep bowl. Turn dough to bring greased surface to top. Cover with waxed paper and a towel and let stand in a warm place (about 80°F) until dough is doubled, about 2 hrs.

6. Punch down dough with fist. Turn out onto a lightly floured surface and roll about ¼ in. thick. Cut dough into 2-in. diamonds or squares. Place on a floured board, cover with waxed paper, and let rise in a warm place until doubled.
7. About 20 min. before deep frying, heat fat to 365°F.
8. Deep fry pieces in heated fat 2 to 3 min., or until lightly browned; fry only as many at one time as will float uncrowded one layer deep in the fat. Turn doughnuts as they rise to surface and several times during cooking. Remove with slotted spoon; drain doughnuts over fat for a few seconds, then remove to absorbent paper.
9. Shake 2 or 3 doughnuts at one time in a plastic bag containing sifted confectioners' sugar.

About 6 doz. doughnuts

Pralines

TO PREPARE AND COOK: 25 MIN.

- 2 cups sugar
- ¼ cup milk
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 2 cups pecan halves
- ¼ teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Put a sheet of aluminum foil or buttered waxed paper on a smooth surface.
2. Combine the 2 cups sugar and milk in a 4-qt. saucepan and stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Bring mixture to boiling; stir in baking soda. Remove from heat.
3. Melt the 2 tablespoons sugar in a small, light-colored skillet over low heat, stirring constantly, until golden brown. Stir into sugar-milk mixture.
4. Set a candy thermometer in place. Bring to boiling and cook until mixture reaches 236° F (soft ball stage—forms a soft ball in very cold water; flattens when taken from water).

5. Add butter, pecans, and extract; stir until butter is melted. Remove from heat and remove candy thermometer.

6. Very quickly drop by tablespoonfuls onto the aluminum foil or waxed paper. (Mixture will spread.) Allow to stand until completely cooled. Wrap each praline in moisture-vapor-proof material.

About 2 doz. pralines

Fruit Waters

On sultry summer evenings, families may enjoy a frosty glass of cool fruit water. Simplified modern versions are easily made from commercially prepared fruit sirups or bases. Concentrated frozen fruit juices such as orange, orange and grapefruit, or grape can be reconstituted with ginger ale or sparkling water instead of water (1 qt. ginger ale or sparkling water to one 12-oz. can frozen fruit-juice concentrate). Lemonade, orangeade, limeade, and Spicy Currant Sparkler are all considered fruit waters.

Spicy Currant Sparkler

TO PREPARE: 15 MIN.

(allow time for chilling)

- 1 cup fresh currants, rinsed and drained
- ¼ cup water
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 qt. ginger ale or sparkling water, chilled

1. Put currants and water into a saucepan. Cover and simmer 10 min. Remove from heat.
2. Force currants through a sieve to remove seeds. Blend in the sugar and cinnamon. Chill currant sirup thoroughly.
3. To serve, pour equal amounts of the currant sirup into four chilled tall glasses. Fill with the chilled ginger ale or sparkling water and stir.

Battle of the Tv Medics

THE OTHER DAY at a Beverly Hills restaurant, a woman rushed up to actor Dick Chamberlain. "May I have your autograph, please?"

The young man obliged by scribbling "Dick Chamberlain—Dr. Kildare" on the back of her menu.

The woman hesitated, then pointed to her midriff. "I... I have a persistent pain right here. Of course, you're not a real doctor, but I thought you might've heard something."

Dick Chamberlain smiled sympathetically. "I get the same thing myself." His voice lowered to a confidential whisper. "I think it's my belt. Too tight."

"Thank you so much," the woman gushed, and returned to her table.

"This happens all the time," the star of television's Dr. Kildare series told me, "and frankly I don't know what to do—except kid people about it. But often they take it seriously. And believe me, I don't know anything about medicine."

At a recording studio only a two-minute walk from Desilu studio, where his "Ben Casey" series is filmed, Vince Edwards took time off from recording a ballad to tell me that he, too, is constantly pressed for medical advice. "Even real doctors and nurses discuss cases with me. It gets to be pretty monotonous!"

In a way, public reaction to today's two top tv heroes is not surprising. In recent months, Doctors Casey and Kildare have succeeded in taking the limelight away from the long-popular Westerns and focusing it on the medical profession.

EDWARDS is 30 according to him, 33 according to his official biography, and 36 according to other sources. Chamberlain is 27, but admits the studio will never let him grow older. Together they have made such an impact on television audiences that by next season it will be impossible to find a week night that doesn't expose the viewer to some communicable disease via a new medical series.

How do the present heroes of the bandage clan feel about this competition?

Ben Casey, alias Vince Edwards, insists, "I don't want to play a doctor indefinitely, anyway. But we have a good show, and I'm not concerned about competition."

Dr. Kildare, nee Dick Chamberlain, worried about his show's future at first but has since gained confidence. "Let them come," he says. "The more the merrier."

The difference in appearance, outlook, personality, and background of the two popular stars makes an interesting comparison. It is to their credit that neither has ever been heard muttering an unkind remark about the other. In fact, Dick Chamberlain insists he would like to meet Vince "to compare notes." Vince hasn't made such overtures, but then he isn't exactly the exuberant type. In fact, the former Vincent Edward Zoine of Brooklyn has already established a reputation as tv's most dour personality. Finding a smile on his face is rare indeed!

After a stint in B movies, Vince made some records which didn't sell, and no one was conscious of his presence till he walked into agent Abby Greshler's office a little over a year ago. Abby, one of the shrewdest men in his field, recognized Vince's potential qualities and set up a meeting with "Ben Casey" producer Jim Mosher. The latter was so impressed by the earthy, seemingly belligerent Edwards that he chose him from more than 100 candidates for the title role of "Ben Casey."

While there's nothing very extraordinary about Edwards, there's nothing extraordinary about him either, other than that he hated to wear shoes and socks as a boy. He stands 6 feet, 2 inches, has brown hair, hazel-green eyes, is the youngest (a twin) of seven children, takes pride in being trim and well-muscled, distinguished himself as a swimmer at Ohio State University and the University of Hawaii, and at one time was New York State swimming champion.

His mother, a dietitian, helps prepare meals at a New York high school. His father, who was a construction worker, died several years ago.

Vince lives with his grandmother in a modest Hollywood home, but says he is looking for a house of his own in Brentwood. He is currently going steady with Sherry Nelson, an attractive blonde non-professional, and his friends think his interest in a new home means he's ready for marriage.

VINCE NEVER had much money before he started his series. "As a result," a friend says, "he is still pretty tight with a dollar. When he goes to a restaurant, he will analyze the bill the way he diagnoses a patient on tv."

But Vince's bank account is swelling with his popularity, and not just because of his conservative financial policies. Vince went to work at $1,750 a week and is in a hot battle with producers for more—specifically, $7,500 a week, 25 percent of the profits, and $100,000 to finance pilot shows of his own.

Dick Chamberlain, who shares the spotlight with veteran actor Raymond Massey in "Dr. Kildare," has made no such financial demands. In fact, he hasn't made any. He started with $400 a week and, according to a studio official, still makes less than $1,000—and never complains. Yet his appreciation for the dollar is just as great as Edwards' although he was born in Beverly Hills—on the wrong side of Santa Monica Boulevard.

His father was a market-fixtures salesman who started his own business only three years ago. To earn pocket money, Dick had a paper route, was a box boy at a supermarket, and a construction laborer while studying art at Pomona College. "I had hoped to become a commercial artist," he told me, "and I still like to paint. Unfortunately there's no time now."

The idea of becoming an actor first occurred to him at college and, with the help of an agent-friend, he landed a small supporting role in "Gunsmoke."

Dick was tested by MGM for the leads in two other series and was turned down both times. The Kildare role had been tentatively assigned to Lew Ayres, who had originated it 25 years ago opposite Lionel Barrymore's Dr. Gillespie. But the sponsors reportedly considered Ayres too old, and the race was on with 35 young actors testing for the part. Luckily someone remembered the tall, blond, blue-eyed young man who was considered almost "too pretty" for the role. He won out.

LIKE VINCE, Dick is single, and has a steady girl, Clara Ray, whom he met while studying singing at the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music. "The marriage-license bureau isn't going to collect my $3 for a long time," he insists. "With my work time, I'm lucky to have any private life of my own."

He rents a small, hardly accessible house in the Hollywood Hills and is likely to stay there for some time. In spite of a gradual increase in salary, there are too many things he wants to buy—including a new car to replace his ancient foreign sports model—before investing in a home.

A short while ago, Dick followed Vince into the recording business. Even if he is successful in this venture, he stands no chance of getting rich as a singer. His recording is done for MGM as part of a seven-year exclusive contract for his services in all fields of entertainment.

On the other hand, in spite of several unsuccessful starts in the recording field before he became famous, Edwards could make $1 million from his first recording.

Whether these two actors want to or not, they will be involved in a popularity contest. At this time it is anybody's guess who will win. And there's always a chance that both will die from a common tv malady—overexposure.

Meanwhile, they might find some satisfaction from the longevity of other tv durables—like the Western and the private eye, both of which have weathered more crises than Doctors Casey and Kildare are likely to encounter for a long time.

DESENEX!

Athlete's Foot Treatment used by the U.S. ARMY!

MEDICAL SCIENTISTS REPORT:
"amazing results" "dramatic improvement!"

Probably nowhere is the control of athlete's foot more important than in the Army. Navy and Air Force, with millions of men in service. Thanks to a remarkable preparation, it no longer is the problem it once was.

The treatment (undecylenic acid) is so simple and dependable, it is now a standard Athlete's Foot Treatment used by the U.S. Armed Forces!

This Desenex treatment is also most often prescribed and recommended by physicians. for it works where others often fail. It promises new freedom from athlete's foot itching, pain and danger of spreading, as evidenced by clinical studies involving over 6200 men and women.

What Desenex does Desenex seeks out, attacks and kills not only common athlete's foot fungi, but also checks bacteria that often cause more stubborn cases. Maddening itch is relieved, healing rapidly promoted. Simply use Desenex Ointment at night. Powder during day. It's guaranteed to work or money back! Desenex—at all drug counters

*Clinical results were described professionally as "dramatic," "immediate," even "amazing." Key facts from these studies by leading hospitals, medical schools and clinics are available to your physician or your foot specialist.

SARAKA SOLVES THE PROBLEM OF "AFTER 45" IRREGULARITY

Doctor-approved bulk stimulant helps keep you comfortably on schedule as no ordinary laxative can!

As we grow older, our systems may often need outside aid to help maintain a normal regularity pattern. Continued use of strong drug laxatives can be irritating, even dangerous. That's why many doctors recommend SARAKA, the pure all-vegetable bulk stimulant laxative for middle age and over. SARAKA supplies the most bland bulk that is so essential to healthy bowel function. And only SARAKA has a gentle stimulant action to help ease this bulk through your system plus Vitamin B₁.

Special note to weight watchers: Lack of sufficient bulk in 900 calorie liquids can lead to constipation. If this occurs supplement your daily diet with all-vegetable SARAKA.

Family Myths That

These 10 beliefs are widely held—and widely destructive

THE OTHER DAY, one of my graduate students blurted out: "I guess I shouldn't be surprised that my marriage isn't going smoothly. Most married couples are unhappy, aren't they?"

That's a myth, I said—and a dangerous one. Actually, the vast majority of U.S. marriages are successful.

The University of Michigan Survey Research Center recently interviewed nearly 2,500 married persons representing a cross section of the nation's population. One out of three asserted he (or she) was "very happy," more than half said they were "pretty happy," and only one in 10 admitted being "not too happy."

Another dangerous myth involves the statistic, "one out of four U.S. marriages ends in divorce." True, there are 400,000 divorces a year and 1,500,000 marriages. But the divorce figure must be considered in relation to the total number of married couples—40 million—not the number married in one year. Thus probably no more than one out of 10 or 15 marriages eventually ends in divorce.

Unfortunately, belief in the widespread prevalence of divorce and "unhappy" marriages has led to a fatalistic approach to married life. Too many people believe that matrimony is a gamble and that they have to be lucky to stay wed. So, instead of committing themselves wholeheartedly to building a good marriage, they feel hopeless when conflicts occur.

As an anthropologist, I detect a number of widely held concepts about family life that are so outmoded or spurious that they should be classed as myths. Here are some of the most prevalent ones:

1. A husband loses his masculine image when he does a housewife's chores.

Some months ago, I asked an audience of 300 Air Force reservists: "When you were a small boy, how many of you were put to bed by your father? No more than five hands went up. Then I asked those who were married and had children

Contrary to myth, Dad isn't less masculine when he helps with kitchen chores

"How many of you put your son or daughter to bed?" All but two raised their hands.

The point I wanted to make was that our culture is dynamic and that we are moving toward more and more partnership in the home. Concepts of the manly man and the womanly woman are no longer what they used to be. Today, sharing in household chores is an accepted part of being a husband.

2. A working mother is bound to neglect her family.

Of the 22 million women in the nation's work force, three out of five are married; and two of every five mothers who work have children at the school-age level.

I firmly believe that a woman can be a good wife and mother while holding down an outside job. Such a woman tends to compensate for the time she is away by being more attentive when she is home. It's the quality of the time spent with the family, not the quantity, that is more important.

3. Being "just a housewife" deprives a woman of self-fulfillment in life.

The American woman who is a full-time homemaker has been subtly devalued over the years. A myth has grown up that being "just a housewife" is unsatisfying because it does not permit a woman to utilize all her potential assets. Today's homemaker, however, does perform a vital creative role. The term, "profession: homemaker," is receiving more and more respect as women realize the satisfactions of maintaining an attractive, comfortable "nest" for their families.

4. Separation or divorce is always a cruel blow to children.

If children are aware of bitter conflicts between their parents and if their home is barren of love, separation or divorce is likely to come as a relief to them. For a child, an empty marriage can be more cruel than a broken home.

On the other hand, divorce does come as a painful shock to children who have been kept in the dark concerning their parents' troubles.

Shielding a child from such family problems relegates him to a world of his own. It may keep him psychologically secure for a time; but in the long run, it delays his maturing process and only makes it harder for him to adjust to the cold realities of life.

5. When a family moves, the experience is particularly difficult for the children.

One out of five Americans moves each year, and the average family moves a total of eight times during the years they are together. But most children don't mind. Every survey indicates youngsters find moving an exciting adventure—for a changing world is the only one they know. It is adults who are apprehensive about putting down new roots, and sometimes this sense of insecurity rubs off on their children.

6. Boys should be taught that it's unmanly to cry.

Unthinking mothers still tell small boys, "Mother won't love you if you cry." This is a harmful attitude. Like any other human being, a boy must have an outlet for his feelings. Training him to cork up emotions (frustration, anger, hate) that are disapproved may cause him to grow up into a warped, hostile adult. Even though venting an emotion through tears is considered a "female" trait, the truly masculine man in our society combines certain sensitive feminine qualities with his masculinity.

A similar convention dictates that it isn't manly for a little boy to play with dolls. But boys grow up to be fathers—and they, like girls, must be taught to love babies. When parents ridicule a small boy who occasionally wants to play with his sister's dolls, it may leave a lasting subconscious mark which later may keep him from becoming a devoted father.

7. Togetherness is essential for good family life.

A married couple should share their joys and woes. But togetherness can be overdone. A woman is apt to be a more exciting person if she participates in some activities not directly related to her family. And the same principle holds true for husbands.

8. Marital relations are more important to a husband than to his wife.

9. Mothers-in-law are a menace to a happy marriage.

Some mothers do interfere in their children's marriages, but by and large the extent of the intrusion is exaggerated. Unfortunately, the barrage of mother-in-law jokes intimidates some women so much that they abdicate their responsibilities as grandparents. Gifts sent to grandchildren from a retirement town 1,000 miles away are not enough. The greatest gift that a grandmother can offer is her own presence.

10. Jealousy among brothers and sisters is normal.

Extreme sibling rivalry is an American product fostered by parents. As a result of our overcompetitive drives, this disruptive influence is now at its height.

In many other countries, there is little rivalry among children in a family. For instance, a boy in India is expected to guide his sister, not compete with her. Just the opposite is too often true in this country, and it can endanger family life.

The same is true of believing in the other marriage myths I have discussed. When stereotyped thinking lingers and parents neglect to keep pace with modern trends, needless family tensions result.

Rusk Starts London Talks

Western Powers Suggest Berlin
Meeting With Reds

LONDON (AP)—U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk met with British Foreign Secretary Lord Home today to align British-American policies on the most urgent problems of Europe, Asia and Africa. As the two statesmen began their conference the three big Western powers sent new notes to the Soviet Union urging early East-West talks in Berlin to ease tensions along the wall through the divided city.

Meeting Proposed
American, British and French notes were sent to Moscow for delivery, probably by Tuesday. They proposed that the Big Four commandants meet in an attempt to curb shooting incidents along the wall that divides the Communist and Western sectors of the city.

The Western notes replied to a warning earlier this month from Moscow. The Soviets blamed a series of shootings across the Communist-built wall on what they called German Fascist elements backed by the Allies.

The Soviets demanded Western action to halt these incidents, which were termed provocative, or else face the possibility that

Series on U. S. Alcoholism in Tonight's Paper

If the difference between a man who enjoys drink and one who depends on it were not so subtle—

If uncontrolled drink could not so easily, and had not for so long, been chalked up to moral weakness—

If its cause was an evil virus instead of a baffling mystery—

Then alcoholism could not have become the nation's fourth greatest health problem without causing a great mobilization of public interest.

Yet many Americans remain unaware, or unconcerned, as alcoholism extracts its devastating toll in millions of families, in every community—destroying careers, happiness, bright promise.

There are encouraging signs: spreading awareness that alcoholism is a sickness, appearance of affiliates to the greatly effective Alcoholics Anonymous designed to help families of alcoholics, new attention to the problem of the woman alcoholic, new attitudes in industry.

The dimensions of the national blight and the modern attack on alcoholism are vividly described in a five-part series for pms of Monday through Friday, June 25-29. A team of Associated Press reporters was deployed to report on this vital subject, each assigned to an area of special interest.

The first story appears today and is by AP science writer Alton Blakeslee. It is on Page A-6.
